SUN SIGNS/ MOON SIGNS

INTRODUCTION

It’s been said that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing. Today people who have picked up only a smattering of astrological knowledge at cocktail parties can say with confidence that Scorpios are sex fiends, Librans are lazy, Taureans are money crazy, Aquarians are crazy crazy, and Virgos lose their virginity somewhere around middle age. Thanks to the mushrooming interest in popular Sun-sign astrology, such misconceptions abound.

Although the above common fallacies are humorous, they are for the most part distortions and exaggerations of astrological truth. The practitioners of popular astrology are often to blame for the very misunderstandings they try so hard to avoid. Everyone knows his birth sign (or Sun Sign) and almost everyone knows something about his birth sign. Unfortunately, what they know is often incomplete or misleading. Scorpios have read time and again about how "intense" they are. Taureans are tired of the sensual, stubborn, and comfort-loving routine. Virgos are fed up with words like fussy, conservative, and frugal. Cancers are becoming defensive about being labelled “defensive." And poor Geminis are no longer sure who they are.

Because of the distortions and generalisations common to Sun-sign astrology, it’s no wonder that people so often feel strangers to their own signs. Sure, you may feel simpatico with some of the characteristics of your sign. Most Librans will identify with the need. for harmony and tranquillity, as most Capricorns will identify with the need to prove themselves to the world. But what about the characteristics of your sign that you do not agree with? The characteristics that just don't fit. For example, I have known many Virgos who spend money without a care in the world, many Sagittarians who are practical and down-to-earth, many Scorpios who are not controlled by their libidos (these are difficult to find, I admit) and even a few Aquarians who are neither revolutionaries, nor eccentrics. It is obvious that your Sun Sign does not fully convey the complexities of your personality. Something is missing. What is missing is the Moon Sign.

What Is the Moon Sign?

The Moon Sign is simply the sign the Moon was in at the time of your birth. The Sun changes signs once each month. The Moon also changes signs, but much faster than the Sun, taking only a couple of days to go through a sign. Finding your Moon Sign is simple. Using your year, month, and date of birth (and in some cases, the approximate time of birth), you can locate it by referring to the tables at the back of this book.

Once you have discovered your Moon Sign, what do you do with it? What does it mean to have, say, the Moon in Aries or the Moon in Taurus?

In traditional astrology, the Moon represents the emotional facet of your personality. It is the underlying force that determines your hidden drives, desires, and motivations. It represents your deepest dreams and aspirations. The Sun Sign on the other hand represents your revealed drives and motivations. The Sun Sign is your ego. It is what you expect of yourself in terms of achievement and potential. It is also how you think of yourself and the way in which you deal with others. By combining the Sun and Moon Signs, a much more in-depth portrait of astrological identity emerges.

Let's take a quick example. If you are a Gemini, you will probably have many traits common to Geminis. You may be talkative, highly strung, and mobile. Others may find you somewhat inconsistent and quick-changing. You will probably pursue an active life, and your quest will be geared toward the pursuit of variety and excitement. If, however, you are a. Gemini with the Moon in Taurus, or a Gemini-Taurus, you will have an underlying emotional stability and thus will appear much more consistent than your fellow Geminis. You will also be a lot more stubborn and you will hold on to impressions and beliefs with fixed intensity. In addition. your life-long quest will be geared toward the pursuit of luxury, comfort, and material security rather than constant novelty and excitement. To cite another example, let's say you are a Cancer. You may have many traits common to the Cancer; you may be somewhat cautious, self-protective, and shrewd. Your quest in life may be geared toward the pursuit of emotional security and domestic happiness. If, however, you are a Cancer with the Moon in Sagittarius, you will be far more freedom-loving, uninhibited, and adventurous than is typical of your sign. Your deepest dreams and aspirations will be geared to the pursuit of truth, liberty, and philosophical understanding. So we see that by adding the Moon Sign, we gain a whole new dimension to our understanding of the personality. Our interpretation is no longer one-sided or Sun-sided.

Let's take an actual example. President Jimmy Carter is a Libra with the Moon in Scorpio. His Libran nature is very evident in his style, mannerisms and tactics. We know that Librans are concerned with establishing peace, harmony and happiness for those around them. Jimmy Carter's campaign rhetoric, true to his Libran nature, was filled with references to love, the politics of joy, and the importance of bringing the country together again. His appeal was populist, also very Libran. Librans are fond of partnership and cooperation. They generally do not make decisions without first consulting others. In Carter's inaugural address, he stressed the limitations of power, the need to have an open administration, and the vital importance of partnership and cooperation. Librans favour compromise over combat. True to form, Carter is in favour of compromise, avoiding extremes and walking the middle path. Librans are also known for their vanity and perhaps this is why Carter is so concerned with the image he presents to the world. But – what about the other side of Jimmy Carter? The side that is not so apparent, the side that is represented by his Scorpio Moon. Scorpios are very much the opposite of Librans. They are confident, bold, ambitious, stubborn and decisive. Carter's intense ambition and self-confidence attests to this Scorpio facet. He has at times proven himself to be very decisive and unafraid of initiating bold actions – all very Scorpion attributes. Many have observed an underlying self-righteousness and egotism in Carter that may bring about tyrannical behaviour (especially in times of crisis). Again, this is his Scorpio Moon side. In Carter's Sun-Moon combinations, we see an apparent disparity or contradiction between the two sides of his nature. On one hand, we have the peace-loving Libran and, on the other hand, the aggressive Scorpio. Although his Sun-sign nature (Libra) seems to be at odds with his Moon-sign, or emotional nature (Scorpio), both actually work in harmony. His Libran nature balances his Scorpio nature, so the portrait of a leader emerges: one who is decisive, yet willing to compromise; one who is intensely shrewd and ambitious, yet considerate and compassionate toward others. Judging President Carter by his Sun Sign alone is insufficient. By adding his Moon Sign, a much more accurate appraisal of his personality emerges. It may be interesting to note that President Dwight D. Eisenhower was also a Libra-Scorpio. In another example, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis is a Leo with the Moon in Aries, or a Leo-Aries. Both signs of her combination are fire signs and the two work together harmoniously. Her Leo nature gives her a regal, queen-like bearing and a desire to be in the spotlight. Her Aries inner nature is impulsive, ardent, and adventuresome. Both signs are egotistical and self-centred. When we combine the two, we can understand why her attitude toward others is somewhat condescending and aristocratic. For Ms. Onassis the self always comes first. Her Sun-Moon combination, being harmonious, would also indicate good health, high intelligence, courage, and strong creative drives.

Joseph Stalin, a Capricorn with the Moon in Virgo, is a good historical example. His Capricorn Sun accounted (in part) for his ruthless ambition and drive for power. His Virgo Moon accounted for his efficiency, administrative skills, and emotional distance. Once again, there is no real disparity between Stalin’s outward nature (Capricorn) and his inner emotional nature (Virgo). Both Capricorn and Virgo are earth signs. Both facets of his personality were therefore able to work together harmoniously.

In another example, Mahatma Gandhi was a Libra with the Moon in Leo. His Libran nature gave him a peace-loving outlook, amazing diplomatic skills, and the charm necessary to win the hearts of millions. His Leo emotional nature gave him the courage, stability, and determination to put his lofty ideals into practice.

To take another historical example, Martin Luther King was a Capricorn with the Moon in Pisces. His Capricorn Sun gave him a strong sense of self-esteem, powerful ambitions and the organisation and determination necessary to fulfil his dreams. His Piscean emotional nature gave him strong spiritual and altruistic urges, and a keen sense of compassion and empathy for his fellow men and women. His Capricorn nature accounted for his serious and somewhat melancholic outlook. But his Piscean inner nature gave him continual hope and faith in the future.

Is My Sun-Moon Combination the Final Word? What About Free Will and the Importance of Other Factors in My Horoscope?

These are just a few examples of how the Sun-Moon combination gives a more complete portrait of character. No combination can be labelled either good or bad, strong or weak. It is clear that, in each, there are potential strengths and talents, as well as potential weaknesses and limitations. But it is important to remember that these are only potentials, and it is ultimately our responsibility as individuals to recognise and develop our unique talents and skills and to apply them in a positive, creative, and self-affirmative manner.
Your Sun-Moon combination is only part of the story. Your individual horoscope has other factors that can significantly modify your Sun-Moon combination. The scope of this book does not allow for the inclusion of such very important components as the rising sign or the planetary aspects. The important thing to remember is that the Sun-Moon combination forms the core of your personality: your ego and your emotional nature.
Other factors, aside from astrological ones, go into shaping your personality – specifically, childhood environment, cultural background, and education. An Aries-Scorpio with a ghetto background will naturally be different from an Aries-Scorpio with a middleclass background. Both will nonetheless have many of the qualities common to an Aries-Scorpio.

The Sun-Moon combinations that follow are based upon the traditional astrological method of combining or synthesising the most important elements of an individual‘s chart. In addition, they are drawn from insights gained from my intuition, experience and observation of many different individuals in my capacity as an astrologer. Astrology never denies the power of free will or the ability to change. By recognising and identifying our strengths and weaknesses, we are better able to deal with them. But we cannot begin to solve the riddle of our personalities or deal with our problems until we first understand them. So often these days, people are looking for the wonder drug, therapy, course, or program that will lead to self-knowledge. The surfacing of many diverse therapies and religious movements over the past decade attests to our need to enhance ourselves physically, emotionally, and spiritually. Many such courses are geared more to quick, rather than substantial results. It is unfortunate that people are so attracted to such shortcuts. We should spend time in deeper introspection and self-analysis before we abandon ourselves in search of prophets who offer instant answers and solutions. Astrology gives the individual a chance to travel the road to self-discovery independently. Through astrology we can learn about our strengths and our weaknesses and, from the formulation of true self-knowledge, we can become confident individuals, ready to embark on other paths toward full self-improvement and self-realisation. In short, you can attempt any other challenge once you confront the first challenge: To know thyself.

CHAPTER ONE

ARIES

Sun in Aries/Moon in Aries: The Daredevil

Patience is simply not your forte. An Aries-Aries can never completely shake off the self-centred impulsiveness of childhood. Driven by a seeming endless reservoir of energy, you find it difficult to be idle. You seek instead to live life to its fullest – there being no substitute, to your mind, or experience. Reckless and combative, this is the Evel Knievel of combinations. In love, work or just plain living, it's never fun unless it's a challenge.

People are attracted to your charm, freshness, and love of life, but are put off by your insensitivity. It's hard for you to listen to the advice of friends and associates and harder still to find time for their problems. Your Sun-Moon combination implies high intelligence, bordering on brilliance, and your intuition is matchless. But you can't get it right all the time, so try to be more open to what others have to say. Rather than acting on impulse, learn to consider your actions more thoroughly. Most Aries-Aries natives live primarily for the moment and have very short memories; so you are apt to quickly forget your past mistakes only to find them recurring again and again. Experience could be your best teacher.

You also need to find an outlet for all that abundant energy. Physical activity of some kind is quite necessary for your well-being and should enable you to accomplish much more in other areas of life.

You could never be happy in a restricted or routine career, because that inner drive must have challenge and variety. You work best where the competition is tough and the responsibility awesome, but if trapped in a dull job, feelings of frustration can lead to dangerous, even self-destructive, action. A pioneer of sorts, you are usually in the front ranks of those working for progress and change. Science, social activism, and medicine (particularly surgery) are excellent fields for the Aries-Aries.

In relationships, you must try to become more sensitive to the needs and feelings of your lover. Although you are passionate and enthusiastic in your pursuit of love, your basic selfishness can interfere with a happy and well-balanced relationship. You are highly sexed, and you tend to view love as a competitive sport.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Taurus: The Fortune Hunter

You project a charming aura of self-worth and inner calm. The energy and enthusiasm of your Sun Sign, Aries, is well-focused and grounded by a practical and secure emotional nature. You may not have the flair and excessive energy of your fellow Ariens, but you do have the patience, caution and, most of all, the common sense to assure the success you crave.

Your speech is easy and graceful. You also measure your words carefully, which enhances your salesmanship. Ambition is quite pronounced in your combination and your magnetic powers of persuasion will help you fulfil your dreams (slowly, perhaps, but surely). Committed to action and the work ethic, material security is your primary concern, and your sensual and earthy nature make comfort, good food, and pleasure your top priorities. Your eye for money management will always assure you the good things in life. Unfortunately, your silent drive for material acquisition can easily become all-consuming.

Few can match you for sheer determination and perseverance. Basically kind and sympathetic, you would never resort to ruthless or cruel behaviour to attain your ends. But, like most natives of Moon in Taurus, you are stubborn and it's nearly impossible to prove you wrong. Though you are a bastion of common sense, there are times when some of those deep-seated biases stand in your own way. Learn to compromise and adapt sometimes. Become a little more flexible to changing times and differing viewpoints.

Many Aries-Taureans have strong artistic and creative inclinations, and the concentration and discipline to master just about any creative medium. Although you are magnetically drawn to business, you may harbour a secret ambition to work in the arts. But that Moon in Taurus prevents you from pursuing such a shaky career. You wouldn't dare embark on an uncertain future which might jeopardise your security, even if the end result might prove more satisfying.

The Challenge for you is to face up to the fears which keep you from fulfilling your wonderful potential. Your combination in itself suggests financial security and well-being, so stop worrying so much about money. That need to accumulate may be stifling a greater need to create.

You have a very sensual nature that must be satisfied. However, you are not overly experimental and you tend to seek endurance and stability in partnerships. Often inflexible and stubborn in your love life, you are also prone to jealous rages. Though very fluent and expressive when urged to communicate, you tend to bottle up your feelings. Learn to share your thoughts freely and express your desires with a little more abandon.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Gemini: The Fast-Talker

Aries is fast, ambitious, and mobile. Gemini is highly strung, excitable and, above all, communicative. Combine the two and you get an individual who is fast-talking and swift-acting, with boundless energy and enthusiasm. You are definitely an individual Independent to an extreme, you always know your own mind and are never without a ready answer or solution. People know when you're around, because you are constantly moving about, gesticulating, and very often talking up a storm.

You articulate each passing thought, idea, and emotion with vigour and emphasis. And you are always right: No one can defy the authoritative Aries-Gemini. You possess an incisive (and, at times, cruel) wit and your need to communicate every little thing can be exhausting. If you are not careful, others who don't understand your nature may find you pushy and tiresome. Abandon the stage occasionally and give someone else a chance to have their say. Learn to be a little less self-centred and opinionated, and try some thoughtful reflection.

You take in everything in your environment with lightning speed. Forever alert, nothing ever slips past you. You are quick to spot a phoney and just as quick to let him know. Tact is not one of your virtues, and this may be one reason you sometimes alienate others. Learn to keep some of those pithy observations to yourself.

Despite this lack of diplomacy, you are usually popular. This is because you exude such amazing confidence and expertise that others can't help but respect and admire you. You are never one to sulk in a corner, unless your need to communicate is somehow thwarted by an inattentive (or unappreciative) audience. If so, you may be subject to a sudden but fleeting temper tantrum that people around you will long remember.

You can be rather highly strung. It is vital for you to have plenty of positive outlets for your nervous energy and vitality. Stay active. You are versatile and industrious, and work is often your best form of release; your ingenuity and originality can be useful in many fields. A jack-of-all-trades, there are few things at which you can't excel. Investigative reporting, mechanical engineering, science, and law are just a few fields open to the Aries-Gemini.

You need a partner who is tolerant and receptive to that constant flow of ideas. Like all Ariens, you must learn to value the needs of your partner as much as you value your own. Although generous and affectionate, you may be unintentionally smothering the one you love with an overbearing and overprotective attitude.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Cancer: The Cowardly Lion

For you, the fiery drive and enthusiasm of Aries is combined with the emotional depth and shrewdness of Cancer. Your enthusiasm and energy are focused upon the pursuit of financial, domestic, and emotional security.

The two signs of your combination are at odds: Your Aries nature is restless, impulsive and courageous, but your Cancer inner self is cautious, vacillating and insecure. So that while your Aries ego craves challenge, action and excitement, your emotional side demands prudence and a solid base of operations. You may feel the urge to seek adventure, but first you must have money in the bank (and plenty of it) before you feel confident enough to embark on any daring escapade.

Aries-Cancer holds much promise, but only after you have reconciled its duality. Self-acceptance is the key. Start to value your talents and to appreciate yourself for what you are, rather than constantly berating yourself for not being the dashing, daring and decisive person you feel you ought to be.

Your preoccupation with security can be traced back to your childhood. With the Sun and Moon of your combination in conflict, it is likely that your early home environment was unhappy or disrupted in some way. Thus, in your later life, you may feel compelled to establish the domestic harmony lacking in your childhood. In other words, you may try to compensate for a situation you subconsciously feel responsible for. Be careful that your intense pursuit of domestic and emotional security and well-being does not interfere with your natural leadership abilities and talent for initiating new projects and enterprises. If you never allow yourself to feel fully satisfied with what you have attained, you could resort to various forms of escape such as alcohol or drugs.

If, on the other hand, you do succeed in establishing a sound emotional foundation, then the full potential of your combination will begin to unfold. Dynamic Aries combined with shrewd and perceptive Cancer can result in a very strong and creative individual, once these childhood bridges have been crossed.

Emotional and sentimental to a fault, you are subject to quick and dramatic mood changes – the charming humourist one moment and the headstrong, frustrated tyrant the next. You will hold in your anger and resentment for a long time, until you decide to let it all out in a startling display of passion and temper.

In relationships, as in all things, you seek a long-lasting situation, a mate who will offer you security and self-esteem. Once you have found that person you are capable of outstanding loyalty and you will sacrifice anything for the one you love. Still, Aries-Cancer is basically self-centred. Concern for your own prestige and status rules you first and foremost. Learn to have more respect for your partner's needs, if you want the relationship to endure. The worst thing that can happen to you is the breakup of an established relationship: This will severely test you by igniting your basic insecurity.

The female Aries-Cancer may find that problems arise in marriage. The temptation is to run into the arms of the first man outside the home who offers the security she so desperately craves. She may be able to settle back for a while, enjoying the comfort and predictability of a domestic life, but it will eventually go against the grain of her more aggressive and ambitious Arlen nature. And in the long run, Aries will probably be the victor.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Leo:
The Dynamo

Ambitious and self-assertive, you are an individual among individuals. Courage is one of your greatest gifts: the courage to be yourself, to dare, and to create. The energy and enthusiasm of your Arien nature is channelled both into creative endeavours and into the pursuit of power and status. You never feel compelled to defend or justify your actions, because you have nearly total confidence in yourself and your abilities.

You are a born leader, and you have all of the qualities it takes to be one: magnetism, determination, and boldness. Your healthy (some would say a little too healthy) ego craves attention, and you express yourself dramatically and sometimes flamboyantly. Your dress, mannerisms, and actions are often calculated to draw attention to yourself. Centre stage is what you want, and your charm, vitality, and enthusiasm for life usually assure it.

Sometimes your attitude toward others can be somewhat patronising. Fortunately, your warm sense of humour, generosity, and loyalty compensate for that innate air of superiority. You usually rely on your intuition. You should, for your hunches usually prove accurate. There are times, however, when your judgement just isn't as good as you think it is: you often fool yourself into believing that others are just as open and honest as you are. You are often surprised to learn that not everyone adheres to your standards. Guard against befriending people less scrupulous than yourself as they will take advantage of your trusting nature.

Although you are pioneering and adventurous, you may also have a certain rigidity in your opinions and emotional outlook. Once an impression or conviction gets hold of you, it stays there with fixed intensity. Be careful that you do not become overconfident and unyielding in your behaviour. Your pride makes it very difficult for you to admit that you may be wrong.

Professionally, you are best suited for any career in which your executive and creative strengths can be put to use. You are highly innovative and can excel at decision making – provided you learn to free yourself from emotional bias. Your combination is most comfortable in what society terms a "male role." Female Aries-Leos must learn not to be intimidated by their own aggressiveness, especially early in life. Most will go on to seek a professional career: in fact, one may actually be necessary for health and self-fulfilment.

Even though you have a tendency to dominate and control in your relationships, you are nevertheless very romantic, affectionate, and giving. You are capable of much self-sacrifice for your partner's happiness, but you may never overcome that deep-seated need to be in charge.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Virgo: The Faultfinder

Not as impulsive or adventuresome as your fellow Ariens, you prefer to look before you leap. There has to be plenty of money in the bank before you'll take off on any escapade. Your Arien personality may be energetic, enthusiastic, and intrigued by excitement, but your Virgoan inner nature holds some of those passions in check. The courage and decisiveness of Aries is instead channelled into work and responsibility, usually in analytical and intellectual areas.

Your approach to life is circumspect, with precision and accuracy your aim. Your attention to detail and skill at analysis enable you to arrive at conclusions and decisions only after you have gained a thorough knowledge of your subject. Unlike most Ariens, you are somewhat conservative and cautious. basing your actions upon the precedent of experience and reason. Prudence always holds sway – even when that Aries temper is ignited.

There is a basic conflict in your combination: Bold and confident Aries must contend with somewhat shy and reticent Virgo. You may long to be dashing and daring, but inhibitions usually hold you back. This difficulty in living up to the demands of your Arien ego can cause feelings of inadequacy and frustration. You'll have to learn to accept yourself for what you are, rather than for what you feel you should be. Recognise and appreciate your many talents. And stop placing such heavy demands on yourself.

Your exceptional intelligence, precision and concentration enable you to master careers in medicine, law, engineering, and other fields requiring patience and exacting effort. Aries-Virgos usually find fulfilment through their work, and are admired for their sincerity and dedication. A perfectionist, you try hard to live up to the high standards you set for yourself. But guard against letting work and duty obsess you.

You have a tendency to find fault easily. Because you feel you are instinctively right and best informed most of the time (which is often true), problems arise when your ideas meet with opposition. Start to listen to what others have to say and develop some tolerance for differing views, life-styles, and beliefs. Open your mind a bit more and become less judgemental.

As with all natives of Moon in Virgo, you may suffer from nervous anxiety, agitation and stress. This is especially true when you encounter difficulty in your work. When you do succumb to these moods, beware of becoming overly critical or taking out your frustration and anger on those closest to you.

In relationships, you are aggressive, though at times Virgo's emotional reserve may inhibit full expression of your Arien passion. You are affectionate and loyal, but try not to alienate the one you love with criticism or displays of temper.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Libra: The Rebel Without a Cause

You've got a restless spirit! Independent and naturally rebellious, you find it difficult to sit still for long and it is a rare Aries-Libra who is not involved in at least a dozen major activities. You are an extreme individualist and you want to find out about life and yourself – but on your own terms and in your own peculiar way.

You are charming and exuberant, and others are attracted to you because you're "different," because you exude so much vitality and confidence. You probably consider yourself an adventurer of sorts, and in many respects you are. Never content to sit back and dream about excitement or romance, you go out and find it. Naturally inquisitive, you feel the Constant impulse to explore every nook and cranny, and you are quick to point out your latest findings despite the fact that others may have discovered the same things long before you were on the scene.

You often seem insensitive. Actually, you are by no means insensitive; it's just that you want everyone to do things and see things your way – which makes it difficult for you to cooperate with those around you. Impulse and intuition often rule your actions, and reason and sound advice are of secondary importance. How many times have you abandoned something you've been working on to follow some romantic or exotic whim? Concentration can be the hardest thing for you to learn. You may have the intelligence to be a great scholar, but it‘s unlikely anyone will ever find you sitting behind a desk.

Your kind of determination is more likely to get you into trouble than lead you to genuine accomplishment. You'll never lose that spirit of adventure (fortunately), but you may feel a continuing dissatisfaction or anxiety as time goes by. Inner restlessness accounts for a lot of it, but it's more the result of the difficulty you have in focusing your ardour and enthusiasm upon one goal and seeing it through to completion. That constant hankering for adventure is just another way of running away from yourself and avoiding responsibility.

The challenge for you is to find some field that fulfils your need for variety and excitement. As you are so independent, you work best on your own or in partnership with someone who is cautious and discriminating and can check your impulsive tendencies. You also have a wonderful aesthetic sense, and all endeavours involving imagery, art and design are excellent for the Aries-Libra.

The signs of your combination are in opposition, which makes you subject to mood swings – elated and enthusiastic one moment, depressed and anxious the next. Try to avoid overly stressful or tense situations that set off this tendency. Meditation and other forms of relaxation are excellent ways for you to release built-up tension and soothe those frayed nerves.

Sensual and responsive to the needs of your partner, you are deeply romantic. A successful relationship is indispensable to your emotional well-being, and you must have a partner with whom you can share and communicate. Male Aries-Librans may idealise women; females may find a conflict between their urge to dominate and their need to be passive. Both are highly sexed and only emotional difficulties stand in the way of their forming good relationships.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Scorpio: "I'll do it My Way"

Both signs of your combination are ruled by Mars, and, if you are familiar with mythology, you'll know that Mars rules war and passion. This makes you a very aggressive individual. Whether in love, business or just plain living, it's no fun unless it's a fight.

An extremist in thought and spirit, you never do anything halfway. When you succeed, it's total triumph, and when you are defeated, it's total tragedy. One thing is certain: Your life never lacks thrills and excitement. You have great powers of concentration, and your ambition and thirst for competition help you get ahead in the world. But at the same time, your extreme independence and defiant nature are often your downfall.

It's very hard for you to accept compromise or hold back your belligerence. Driven to try the whole spectrum of sensual, emotional, and spiritual experience in life, you have little tolerance for, or patience with, those who would stand in your way. But occasionally it pays to listen to advice. Next time someone disagrees with you, try to listen to what he or she may have to say, instead of rolling up your sleeves and clenching your fists. As it's impossible to always have things your way, try compromising now and then. You have tremendous willpower and strong creative impulses, but you will only be truly successful when you've learned to work in harmony with those around you. Channel tension and anger into positive and constructive outlets. Instead of taking it out on the kids, your lover, or your co-workers, try swimming, tennis, painting, jogging – anything to release the pent-up anger.

You have the enthusiasm, ambition, and pioneering spirit to accomplish great things. But it will help if you receive some professional training early in life. In youth, the Aries-Scorpio can be pretty hard to control, as the impulse to explore the world and seek adventure is irresistible. But if you are properly guided, you should be able to reach great heights later on in life.

You have a sharp intellect and excellent powers of concentration. Not content to rely on superficial impressions, you prefer to probe beneath the surface of things. Aries-Scorpio has produced innovative scientists, social activists and scholars.

All natives of Moon in Scorpio have a self-rejuvenating ability, and you are no exception. No matter how much trouble you may get into, or how many times that freedom-loving and courageous spirit might land you in court, you will always bounce back fresh and ready to tackle new challenges.

Sex (and plenty of it) is all-important to your emotional health, and you have a very sensual and passionate nature. Your deep protective instincts attract you to those weaker than yourself (this includes just about everyone), and you probably will choose a partner who is sensitive and non-aggressive to balance your personality. Make sure, however, that you're not smothering the one you love by being overbearing.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Sagittarius: Curiouser and Curiouser

The Aries side of your personality is energetic, impulsive, and restless. Your Sagittarian inner nature is idealistic, freedom-loving, and drawn to the spiritual and philosophical. Like a child just beginning to understand its environment, you approach everything with naive curiosity and total earnestness. Others admire your zest for life and find it hard to resist your sparkling charm.

Intensely curious, you are always on the lookout for something around the next corner or underneath some rock – something you might have missed. Unfortunately, your enthusiasms are usually short-lived, and you seldom delve very deeply into things. Even if you do become intensely involved in a project, it's not too long before something new catches your interest and you're off and running again. Concentration is not your forte.

Probably very ambitious, you set high goals for yourself; but those lofty dreams of yours may remain just that, if you don't become more realistic. Although you may feel you have a life mission, you can spend the greater part of your life trying to discover just what it is; you drift from one scenario to the next, never really fixing your sights on any one thing. Some Aries-Sagittarians are in danger of becoming lifelong hippies.

An Aries-Sagittarius who has found his or her mission, however, can be a model of unwavering dedication. Courage, personal magnetism, and high intelligence combine to make you a brilliant leader when it comes to the management and execution of original ideas. (Thomas Jefferson and Charles de Gaulle are outstanding natives of this combination.) Professionally, you would aim make an excellent teacher, for your enthusiasm and alacrity are inspiring to others. Even the dullest subject can become fascinating when you explain it. Honest to a fault, you never repress your emotions, preferring to deal openly and straight from the heart. Malice and hypocrisy are almost unknown to you, but you do have a tendency to be a little tactless, speaking your mind quite bluntly and sometimes without taking others' feelings into consideration.

Because you are so loyal, trustworthy, and generous, you expect that everyone else is the same. Unfortunately, that naiveté and good nature often get you into trouble, as it is quite easy for less scrupulous people to take advantage of you. In relationships, you are open, sincere, and giving. It is important that you find a partner who can share your enthusiasm and allow for your independence. As in everything else, you search for variety in love, and this may be why you have a love-them-and-leave-them reputation. It may take a while for you to settle down, but once you do you are a model of loyalty and devotion.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Capricorn: The Status Seeker

Ambition can be everything to the Aries-Capricorn. Career and financial goals are your highest priority and can become all-consuming. You may seem warm, outgoing, and kind, but few things interest you as much as status and power.

Fortunately you have all the attributes needed to gain the respect you crave and to fulfil your ambitions. Aries' ardour and urge to initiate are balanced by Capricorn's logic and practicality; the drive, enthusiasm, and energy of your personality are complemented by an inner nature that is cautions, calculating, and methodical, Work is important, but less out of a sense of duty than out of your boundless ambition. Once you set your sights upon a goal, the ends often justify the means, and you can be capable of awesome ruthlessness, opportunism, and (in the extreme) cruelty.

The challenge for you is to develop a more tolerant, forgiving, and respectful attitude toward others as you climb to personal success and acclaim. Develop a more humanistic attitude. Set some time aside for reading, meditation, and socialising. And expand your perspective into broader emotional, spiritual, and intellectual directions.

You have a dynamic, enduring personal magnetism. Others respond to what they perceive as great maturity and responsibility, and you are likely to gain much respect and influence among your peers. While maintaining a facade of humour, you manage to manipulate others to your advantage – and, paradoxically, to theirs. Those who earn your friendship will probably find themselves lifted to great heights along with you. Loyalty is important to you, and you are not one to forget those who help you reach success. On the other hand, if challenged or threatened, you can be a formidable and unforgiving opponent.

Very early in life, you probably took on a lot of responsibility, perhaps because of some family difficulties. Thus your childhood may have been a training ground for later life, with little time left over for fun and games. This is one reason you have such an ambitious nature. For all your dynamism and decisiveness, you probably feel some insecurity and perhaps even fear deep down inside which drives you to prove yourself over and over again. Frustration or defeat may push you into depression or chronic anxiety. Try to remember that winning isn't everything, and learn to value yourself more for what you are than what you feel you ought to be.

Professionally, you are best suited to administrative and managerial careers. You may lack creativity, but you have the executive abilities needed to implement plans and ideas with originality and foresight.

Like all Ariens, you are vibrantly sensual. Many Aries-Capricorns pursue romance as ardently as power and recognition, but for some there can be deep-rooted insecurities which inhibit the growth of satisfactory relationships. As a partner, you can be affectionate, generous and loyal, but don't let yourself get so involved with your ambition that you neglect the personal needs of your partner.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Aquarius: The Pioneer

Highly strung, temperamental, and extremely independent, you are usually ten steps ahead of everyone else, and you spend a lot of time trying to figure out why they all can’t keep up with you. Your Arien personality is pioneering, energetic, and swift-acting; your Aquarian inner nature is idealistic, imaginative, and tuned to the future. Intuition and foresight stand out in this combination. You seem to know instinctively just what tomorrow will bring, which gives you the ability to manage your life with confidence and good sense.

There will be, however, two stumbling blocks on your road to success: emotional rigidity and self-righteousness. Intellectually, you have a tolerant, humanitarian outlook, but in your personal relationships, you can be pretty uncompromising. You have such a strong need to assert your individuality that you often overlook the feelings and beliefs of those around you. This unintentional blindness may cause you to appear arrogant in your behaviour. Even if you are brilliant, you must learn to be more responsive to the ideas, attitudes, and convictions that others may have. Develop some patience for those who cannot keep up with your pace or who have difficulty comprehending the "truth" you’re so excited about.

In your behaviour patterns, you are unpredictable. Usually charming, persuasive and convivial, you can suddenly and quite unexpectedly launch into tirades and tantrums. Your anger will be directed every which way, but will quickly exhaust itself. Learn to control these flare-ups and find a few constructive outlets for some of your pent-up rage. As with all natives of Moon in Aquarius, you are subject to irritability and startling mood changes. Stay away from situations that are overly stressful or tense, in order to avoid some of the pitfalls of your emotional nature.

You constantly fear restraint or curtailment of your personal freedom. In order to ensure your independence, you never allow yourself to become too involved with any one person or group. This fear of infringement and interference can take on phobic proportions. Make sure that your work, love life, and life-style allow you plenty of breathing room. In order to work and create and be happy, you must have as much liberty as possible.

An innovator in thought and action, you concern yourself with science, social change, and anything unexplored or untried. Your foresight and analytical strengths coupled with your unique imagination and spirit of inquiry can make you a forerunner in the sciences and a champion for progress. And your personal magnetism and congeniality will help enhance your position in the world: You can convince anyone of almost anything.

For both male and female Aries-Aquarians, relationships are hard to maintain. Your erratic moods and tendency to be rigid and detached make it hard for others to get close to you. That need for absolute independence is a challenge many people may be unable or unwilling to meet. So, instead of trying to mould someone to your needs seek a mate with a similar need for independence – someone who respects your freedom and who agrees with (or at least tolerates) your intellectual and philosophical viewpoints.

Sun in Aries/Moon in Pisces: The Visionary

Of all the Arien combinations, yours is one of the most creative and self-expressive, but it is also the one most prone to emotional conflict. Ideally your Arien courage and initiative should uplift your Piscean spiritual and imaginative inner nature, enabling you to put your creative ideas into practice. But, as often is the case, insecurity and uncertainty can stand in your way on the road to self-fulfilment.

The two signs of your combination are very different in nature. Your Arien personality and self-image is aggressive, busy, and adventuresome, while your Piscean inner nature is passive, highly sensitive, and somewhat timid. It is difficult for you to live up to that dynamic self-image of yours. Fear and insecurity often keep you from asserting yourself and confronting the challenges you encounter. When you find out early in life that you are not as bold and decisive as you thought you were, you may succumb to confusion and disillusionment, and eventually to vague feelings of inferiority.

Self-acceptance is vital for you. Stop, look within, and recognise your talents and abilities. Your sensitivity is a strength, not a liability. Work to understand your fears rather than condemning yourself for having them. Only after you have done so will you rise above them and become master of your life.

Highly sensitive to your environment, you tend to absorb and reflect the prevailing moods (and tensions) of those around you. Therefore it's important that you associate with people who are healthy and stable and able to give you encouragement and emotional support. Keep your channels of communication open at all times. You run the risk of withdrawing into isolation, so it’s important to stay socially active. By talking about those self-perceived weaknesses rather than stilling them, you will work toward resolving them.

Professionally well-suited for creative fields, you are capable of exploring unknown and untried areas of art, music, design, and film. Your imagination is tops – your vivid fantasy life attests to this. Most Aries-Pisceans are highly intuitive, so your sixth sense can be trusted in almost any situation – particularly in business and speculation. Hugh Hefner, an Aries-Pisces, was able to build an empire out of a single bold dream.

Your imagination and emotional sensitivity play a key role in your sexual needs. As in other areas of life, your Arien ardour needs expression but may be blocked by your Piscean shyness and insecurity. Be careful that elaborate fantasy doesn’t substitute for real relating. Once you have overcome your deep-seated fears, you should be able to enjoy a rich and imaginative sex life with your partner.

CHAPTER TWO
TAURUS

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Aries:
Me, Myself, and I

On the surface you are calm, self-controlled, and easy-going, but that surface charm of yours only masks your passion and wilfulness. You have some pretty strong desires and you must work very hard (sometimes ruthlessly) to satisfy them. No matter how kind, considerate, and gentle you seem to others, you always give your own goals top priority: you look out for Number One first and foremost.

Determination is the key to your nature. Once you set your sights on something (or someone), you will pursue it with a remarkably unwavering intensity. If anyone should happen to stand in your way – well, that's their problem. For the Taurus-Aries, the end justifies the means, and you will get your way even at the expense of others.

Fortunately, your inherent sense of caution and diplomacy keeps some of your more potentially destructive qualities in check. You are able to compromise and accommodate others even if only when it is in your interest to do so. But your real desire is to be your own boss and to control your own destiny. Comfort, security and worldly pleasure are your aims in life, and you rarely think about the possibilities of an afterworld. You feel you must take stock of what you have, here and now, then accumulate all you can, gaining as much power and prestige as possible.

You have the resolve and capability to accomplish all these things. Possessing keen powers of persuasion, you can convince anyone of just about anything. (Your presence alone can be intimidating!) But you do have several faults that can stand in your way. Temper is one. Unlike most Taureans, you cannot suppress feelings of anger or anxiety for very long and are subject to quick and devastating flare-ups. Learn to cultivate a little more patience and tolerance and to work in harmony with those around you. Find positive and constructive outlets for your tension and aggression, such as active sports like tennis or squash.

And try to be a little less competitive. There's nothing wrong with healthy ambition, but winning isn't everything. Expand your perspective. Explore the spiritual, emotional, and intellectual pleasures that life has to offer, instead of concentrating so single-mindedly on material desires.

You tend to act on impulse and your biases usually dictate your moves. Become more flexible, and open your mind to the advice and counsel of others. Next time someone disagrees with you, try listening to what they have to say instead of charging off angrily in the other direction.

Though extremely sensual, you can be very possessive, jealous, and even cruel in your love relationships. Although you expect absolute loyalty from your partner, you don't apply the same rigid rules to yourself. Try being a little more democratic and less rigid in your expectations. Try also to be less fickle. Often the Taurus-Arien is passionately involved one moment and then turns suddenly aloof. You would do well to become more prudent in your emotional commitments.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Taurus:
The Rock of Gibraltar

Others respect you, simply because you respect yourself. Quiet and unpretentious, you never have to say very much because that strong, self-assured presence speaks for itself. A born sceptic, you never take anything for granted; but there is one thing you never doubt – your own capability.

Patience, confidence, and determination combine to assure your success in the world. You might seem slow, perhaps even a bit awkward, but that's just to fool people, very few can match your powers of concentration. You will never be the life of the party as you are basically an observer and dislike superficiality and frivolousness. When you do talk, people are bound to listen because you don't mince words, and your comments are invariably well thought out. Honest and straightforward, your perception and insight are amazingly accurate.

Like all people who value themselves and have confidence in their abilities, you are very ambitious. Once you apply yourself to a task, you will never be satisfied until you have mastered it. You approach all problems calmly and patiently; difficulties or setbacks rarely get to you.

Your rise in the world will be slow but steady, and you will only be content when you are your own boss. Work is your self-fulfilment and greatest satisfaction – you love responsibility, and plenty of it. You approach all tasks (no matter how difficult) with total dedication and determination.

As both signs of your combination are earth signs, you probably feel a very strong rapport with nature. Although you have the stoicism to live anywhere, you are basically a rustic soul and occasional jaunts to the countryside are necessary for your emotional health.

Basically mild-mannered and calm, you rarely lose your temper. But like all Taureans you have a habit of suppressing your anger of frustration, which can lead to a variety of psychological disorders. Be sure you have positive outlets for releasing some of those pent-up tensions. It's also important for you to express your feelings more openly. Self-control is fine, but occasionally let go of those inhibitions and just talk about how you feel inside.

Your friends are likely to describe you as someone with great common sense. You always have the most practical and efficient solution to any dilemma and it's difficult for you to understand how other people’s lives can get so tangled. Although a fortress of patience, there are times when you are a little intolerant of your friend's faults. Try to be less rigid in your approach to people. Rigidity can lead to prejudice and a judgemental, pedantic attitude.

Professionally, there are few fields in which you cannot excel, but you do have an instinctive feel for money and management and might do best in business, banking, and economics. Karl Marx is a good example of the double Taurus. Just be careful that money doesn't become your only concern: You have a tendency to measure everything in dollars and cents, while disregarding the value of the spiritual and emotional sides of life.

Extremely sensual and earthy, you are a desirable romantic partner; but, again, there are times when you are so preoccupied with your goals that your mate may sense some indifference. Learn to show your kindness and appreciation a little more openly. Taurus-Taurus tends also to be somewhat conventional; perhaps you should give thought to a more imaginative and experimental approach to your lovemaking.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Gemini: The Busybody

At the first sign of a problem or dilemma, you are on the scene with the most efficient solution. Your Taurean personality is practical, industrious, and worldly, while your Gemini inner nature is analytical, versatile, and quick-witted. Highly perceptive and observant, very little ever slips past you. You almost always spot superficiality and deceit, as you are a natural detective.

Inner restlessness spurs you on to explore and investigate the world around you. Your interests cover a broad range and you are forever fascinated by novelty and exotica. Finding something (be it a lover, a profession, or a life-style) that holds your interest and satisfies your curiosity can be difficult. Whenever boredom settles in – and this usually happens quickly – you are ready to run off to something new, often abandoning or undermining your current goals.

Both signs of this combination are spring signs, (as far as the northern hemisphere goes) so you never lose your fresh and youthful appearance. Likewise, you may often behave childishly, with tendency to repeat the same mistakes or patterns of behaviour. Stop now and then to re-examine some of your past actions. Determine where you may have been at fault. Try to profit from experience rather than allowing yourself to be controlled by the whim of the moment.

Unlike most Taureans, you don't hold in your emotions; in fact, you are very expressive. Communication with others is actually one of your primary needs, and it's important for you to stay socially active so you will have a forum in which to share your ideas and feelings. On the negative side, you may be a little too aware of the world around you: Though nothing is ever perfect, you always tend to find fault and stir up trouble. Searching for perfection in yourself and others is dangerous; if things don‘t measure up under your scrutiny, you may become a disenchanted, overcritical bore. Fortunately, however, most Taurus-Geminis have an outgoing charm and vivaciousness that assures them genuine popularity.

With your many talents, you are capable of realistically applying new and innovative ideas in almost any field. Your flair for analysis and detection may attract you to psychology (Sigmund Freud was a Taurus-Gemini.) And writing, research, and technical careers are also excellent possibilities for you. Your main problem will probably be focusing in on one field or endeavour, since so many areas will undoubtedly be open to you.

In relationships, you tend to be aggressive and somewhat temperamental. As with all Moon in Gemini natives, you are subject to quick mood changes – elated one moment, dejected the next – which may be difficult for your partner to understand. You also need constant variety in your love life. Even though, like most Taureans, you do your best to remain consistent and stable in romance, those fickle Gemini emotions can and do lead you astray. Many love affairs are likely for the Taurus-Gemini.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Cancer: The Accommodator

Tranquil and self-controlled, you project an image of security, stability, and confidence. Your Taurean personality is sensual, determined, and industrious; your Cancer inner nature is sensitive and imaginative, but also somewhat reticent and insecure. So, despite that facade of stability and strength, you are not as sure of yourself as you may seem.

Charm and diplomacy work to your advantage, and that gentle and endearing personality of yours draws people to you. No doubt you have learned that kindness and tact work wonders where aggression and toughness fail. You instinctively know how to deal with people. Your ability to adapt immediately to any circumstance (and to appear to be on all sides simultaneously) can enable you to go far, just be careful not to lose sight of yourself in the process of trying to accommodate everyone else.

Like all Taureans you have remarkable powers of concentration and your Cancer Moon gives you the ability to absorb and retain knowledge effortlessly. Once you have learned something, you never forget it. This also extends to your emotional life: Because you are so sensitive, you tend to interpret a minor insult or affront as a threat or rejection. Holding in feelings of hurt and frustration for long periods of time, you prefer to brood rather than discuss your problems and feelings openly. If you experience some serious rejection or upset, you can lapse into cynicism and lethargy. Learn to express those feelings of anger or hostility honestly and as quickly as possible.

With your gentle, peace-loving soul, it's truly difficult for you to be aggressive. Fortunately, most people respond to you favourably, so it's unlikely you will ever have to defend yourself. But it is important for you to express an opinion now and then, even if not openly challenged.

Guard against adopting a complacent or smug attitude toward life, particularly as you get older. You are somewhat too easily contented. Therefore it is essential that you continually push yourself to the limit of your capabilities. You have so many talents and strengths, it would be unfortunate to waste them.

You have the depth and imagination to excel in artistic and creative endeavours, especially architecture and design. But, as with all natives of Moon in Cancer, you are drawn to careers that offer the most financial security, so it is unlikely you will embark on such a precarious future. You have an instinctive feel for money: how to hang on to it and how to invest it. Frugal and forever cautious in speculation, a career in real estate, land development, or banking and finance would be ideal for you.

You like your creature comforts and you need plenty of them to keep you happy. Your Cancer Moon gives you a strong domestic urge and you need the stability and security of a home as a base of operations. In relationships, you should search for a partner who is loyal, honest, and supportive, since you have a strong need to be loved and reassured.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Leo: The Entertainer

There is probably no one else in your social sphere who has your forcefulness, drama, and extroverted nature. You consider others fortunate to be in your presence, to share in your activities and to applaud your every step. And most people are fortunate. No matter how far-out, arrogant, and opinionated you can be at times, you are never dull, never without optimism and enthusiasm. Your buoyant, outgoing spirit can cheer the darkest heart and, despite that outrageous ego of yours, your concern for those less fortunate than yourself is inexhaustible.

People respect you, simply because you respect yourself. You have never had a problem with confidence because you know and value yourself – and like many people who believe in themselves, you want to reach out and help those who don't have such inner strength. “I am my own light" sums up your character. Independent and ambitious. you possess self-sustaining vitality and confidence, so you needn't rely on outside encouragement to succeed or fulfil yourself.

Your likes and dislikes are usually based upon gut reaction and your hunches often prove very accurate; but once you have formed an opinion or impression, it sticks. Stubborn and inflexible, it can take dynamite to prove you wrong once you've made up your mind. You run the risk of becoming dogmatic and overly rigid in your thinking. Keep your mind open. Don't let bias rule your actions or entrenched attitudes blind your judgement. Humble that pride of yours now and then and listen to what others have to say.

Both signs of your combination are fixed signs, giving you tremendous resolve and the determination to follow through on your goals. But on the negative side, this makes it difficult for you to accept compromise. Let's face it: You want things your way. When you find that others don't always agree, you get angry and frustrated. That independent streak is admirable but it pays to be more cooperative. Taurus-Leo has enormous creative potential, but you can only work and create at your best when you allow yourself to work in harmony with those around you.

Just as practical as your fellow Taureans, you are also a terrific showman. If it isn't dramatic, it isn’t any fun. (For some Taurus-Leos, just taking out the garbage can be an Academy Award performance!) Your dress, actions, and behaviour are usually planned to call attention to yourself. You are generous and compassionate – but you will never get over feeling that you are innately superior to the folks who people your world. Yet you are loved and befriended by all. One thing you must guard against is that tendency to go to extremes in thought and action. Your public will still adore you, even if you tone down your act or occasionally share the spotlight with someone else.

You may harbour secret (or not-so-secret) ambitions to be on the stage, but practical considerations will probably hold you back from pursuing such an uncertain profession. Security is vital to you, and unless other factors in your chart indicate artistic talent, you will probably be drawn to a more stable profession. As you are so independent, going into business for yourself might be the solution. You also have a knack for original and creative leadership as well as remarkable organisational ability. Mathematics and technical work come easily, though you will no doubt apply these skills in very creative ways.

You are very sensual and fun-loving. Sex (and plenty of it) is very important to your emotional wellbeing. In love you tend to be domineering and possessive, so it's important that you remember to allow your partner some freedom. You seek a mate who admires you and frequently reminds you how terrific you are. You crave flattery as fire craves air.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Virgo: The Voice of Experience

You are calm, even-tempered, and self-assured; others admire your character, resourcefulness, and dedication. Yours is a harmonious combination and that inner stability, confidence, and practicality combine to make your progress in life very smooth. People often turn to you for advice, because they sense your worldly wisdom and the advice you dispense is always reasonable and well thought out.

You have a sharp, analytical, and penetrating mind. Your attention to detail, exactness and overall fussiness help you to put your plans into action – and it is a rare Taurus-Virgo who does not have some sort of plan. You do not dream or fantasise, for you are a realist and prefer to deliberate and act upon your ideas rather than waste time in idle contemplation.

It’s not easy to ruffle your feathers because your approach to the world is remarkably even, and as you rarely get upset over mundane matters, your serenity is seldom disturbed. There aren’t many obstacles in your life, and what few there are, you will easily transcend through sheer determination and willpower. One thing to watch out for: Because your life flows so smoothly and you are so free of inner turmoil, you may adopt a smug outlook. The temptation to settle for less than you are capable of accomplishing is very strong, and there have probably been many times when you have chosen to just sit back, observing the frenzied world with a wry smile.

Resist that urge to just get by or to settle into complacency by associating with those who are ambitious. Then, you yourself will adopt a more aggressive outlook. It is also important that your surroundings be highly active and stimulating, for in a passive or tranquil environment you can become lethargic. You function best where the competition is intense and the responsibility great. Of course, relaxation and diversion are equally important to your well-being; just be careful they don't become a way of life.

Professionally, your combination is well suited to administrative and executive careers. Eloquent and highly persuasive, your words are always measured to produce an effect. In addition to your leadership skills, you are a terrific organiser and you are especially good at long-range planning. Imagination, however, is just not one of your strong points. You are far better at dealing with the facts at hand and leaving inspiration to the poets and philosophers.

You have an excellent mind, but it's important that you keep it open. Naturally conservative, you tend to resist any change or innovation. For the Taurus-Virgo, the old way is usually the best and the virtues you admire are probably centuries old. There is nothing wrong with common sense and tradition, but beware of becoming too fixed in your thinking. Try, too, to be less critical of those around you. Oliver Cromwell was a Taurus-Virgo and, although an outstanding leader, some of his eye-for-an-eye policies reflect the dangers of being overly judgemental.

In a love relationship, you are very sensual and earthy. Affectionate, loyal, and consistent, in most respects you are the perfect partner. But you should learn to be a little more imaginative and experimental in your love life. Let passion carry you away sometimes.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Libra: Mr. Nice Guy

Venus rules both signs of your combination, giving you an enchanting personality and a remarkably even disposition. Your bearing suggests tranquillity and inner calm. Graceful and outgoing, to others you seem almost immune to tension and anxiety. Few would suspect the nervous tension and restlessness concealed behind that charming smile.

As with all natives of Moon in Libra, your self-image is a reflection of how others see you, so you need plenty of socialising to maintain a positive one. You should have no trouble, since people are drawn to your magnetic personality, your worldly wisdom, and sensitivity. Sympathetic and congenial, you treat everyone with equality and respect. Your combination gives you the practical common sense of Taurus as well as the Libran sense of justice and fair play. You're the kind of person who would never knowingly hurt anyone, nor could you be angry for very long, as tolerance and forgiveness rule your relationships. "Niceness" is the quality that all Taurus-Librans share. You have a rustic spirit and probably feel a strong rapport with nature. The best way for you to sort out your problems is in a relaxed, natural environment. When outside tension and confusion become too much, it's important for you to get away to the countryside and into the open air. You need more relaxation and diversion than most people because you have a low tolerance for stress.

Inner restlessness keeps you on the move, seeking constant diversion and activity. The trouble is, you're not always certain where you're going. Setting goals and priorities is difficult, simply because you have trouble making up your mind. Like all Venus-ruled natives, you dislike the tension and discord of competitive society and are most often drawn to the pleasant and easy-going rather than the challenging and rewarding. You have the determination and luck to succeed in anything you set out to do, but the temptation of an easy life often wins over ambition and the desire to fulfil yourself. If you wish to make a career work, your challenge is to develop a more aggressive attitude. Since you are influenced by those around you, get involved with people who are working hard at fulfilling themselves. Try hanging out with a few ambitious Capricorns or industrious Virgos.

Set your objectives and stick to them. You have many talents and a wonderful imagination. Art, music, film, and design are just a few areas in which you can excel. With that diplomatic nature, you are also well suited for human-relations work. (Your calm, gentle presence alone can stop a fight.)

The state of your love life is the index of your overall happiness. Romantic and sensual, you need lots of love to keep you happy. It's important for you to have a partner who shares your sensitivity and can understand your emotional delicacy. The only problem you may encounter in your romantic life is vanity: Not even you can resist that charming person in the mirror without realising it, you may feel your partner is there simply to admire you.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Scorpio: The Pessimist

You are a very intense Taurus, and you take yourself and the world around you with utmost seriousness. Suspicious and secretive, you prefer to be left alone and do not let many people get close to you. Somewhat paranoid, you are always wondering whether or not people are plotting against you.

Your outlook tends to be somewhat gloomy and there are times when a dark cloud seems to hover over your head. You may smile ironically after reading the latest scandal or obituary, because you like nothing better than confirmation of what you have always felt deep down inside: The world is an evil place and nobody can be trusted!

How did you ever become so cynical? Yours is a very brave and sensual combination, and in your youth you probably spent much time exploring the world around you. But as time went by, lethargy and doubt began to take over. Even though you are perceptive and highly sensitive, you often have difficulty expressing your feelings. There are times when the desire to give vent to your emotions becomes overwhelming but usually you're afraid that if you ever were to release those passions, they might overwhelm you. In short, you fear your inner nature and try to hide from it.

The consequences of holding in your emotions can take several forms. You may become a brooding and inarticulate cynic, content to go about your business. Or you may indulge in self-destructive habits, turning your tension and anger against yourself. Or, just possibly, you may take out your hostilities on others.

None of this is irrevocable. It is important, first of all, that you learn to be more trusting, that you express yourself with greater abandon. With your warm giving nature, you needn't fear the consequences of being candid and open with people.

You possess tremendous willpower and resolve and the ability to overcome any problem or obstacle – once you've made up your mind. Your energies can be applied in many fields. Art as a hobby or profession, can be an excellent way to make use of your vivid and intense imagination. You are also very shrewd in the business world. Possessing remarkable intuition, you easily see through deception and superficiality, so few can get the better of you. Your forceful personality makes you known (and sometimes feared) wherever you go. Like your fellow Taureans, you would do well to use work as an outlet for your pent-up tension.

Sex is also very therapeutic for you and you've probably had some pretty intense love affairs. As a lover, you are protective and generous with your affections, but your jealousy can take on outrageous proportions. Allow your partner a little more freedom! (You are the type that won't let him or her out of your sight for even an hour.) Fortunately, your kindness, loyalty, and affection help compensate for that jealous streak.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Sagittarius: The Big Spender

This combination combines the common sense and worldly wisdom of Taurus with the spiritual understanding, imagination, and philosophical nature of the Sagittarian. You are at once idealistic and practical, possessing the resolve and determination to see your many dreams through. You have a broad, far-reaching, and perceptive mind, and you are never without a buoyant faith in the future. In many respects yours is a gifted combination.

If you have one flaw, it is that concentration and dedication do not come easily to you. A freedom-lover, you resent any form of restraint of limitation. Thought just as industrious as your fellow Taureans, you prefer making your own rules and setting your own schedule. Impulse often rules your actions (and undermines your efforts). You have a constant craving for novelty and excitement, so when you become bored with your current activity (which doesn't take long), you are ready to pack your bags and run off to find something new.

It is your refusal to take advice or submit to professional guidance that so often leaves you without any sense of purpose or feeling of accomplishment. And that inner restlessness and caprice often thwart the lofty goals you set for yourself.

Financial security can be an eternal quest for the Taurus-Sagittarian. Like all Taureans, you crave comfort and luxury. But no matter how hard you work to satisfy those expensive tastes, your extravagance and generosity will often leave you in debt. You must learn to control that impulsive spending. Even though generosity wins you lots of friends, sometimes it's better to look after yourself first. Your inherent kindness and charm will assure you popularity and respect.

Intuition is your best guide, because your hunches often prove astonishingly accurate. Honoré de Balzac, the novelist, was a Taurus-Sagittarian. On a hunch that there was silver in the ancient mines of Sardinia, he spent a great deal of effort exploring them. The mines proved worthless at the time and de Balzac died broke; but fifty years later silver was being extracted from the very source he had investigated.

You need to settle on a field or pursuit which gives you a chance to express your far-out imagination, but at the same time gives you plenty of breathing space. Once you have found that interest there will be no end to your determination. All sorts of creative activities will be open to you. Your Taurean sense of form and taste is enhanced by your Sagittarian imagination and understanding of the abstract. In addition, you have a strong scholarly bent and you can succeed at intellectual endeavours.

Open-minded and uninhibited in love, you have probably had many exciting affairs. But though you may not readily admit it, what you are really after is one stable, fulfilling relationship. Try to steer clear of overbearing or domineering partners. Find someone who shares your expansive, freedom-loving nature.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Capricorn: The Worrywart

Like most Taureans you are calm, sympathetic, sensual and fun-loving, But beneath your magnetic charm lies a hard core of determination and inner strength. Humour is one of your greatest gifts and you can brighten any conversation with your quick, incisive wit. But for all that light-heartedness you are probably aware of a deep-down sadness that hardly ever reaches the surface.

Though you have many strengths and the capacity to enjoy life to its fullest, self-doubt and worry over the future will often keep you from applying your talents. If you were to admit it, what you probably fear most is poverty and a loss of control. You want to assure yourself of a stable existence, and your drive for material security can easily become all-consuming.

Actually, your fears are imaginary, for you are innately surefooted, and you have the resolve and willpower to overcome any obstacle and achieve just about all that you desire. The challenge for you is to shake off your fears and to live more for the moment that for some ever-threatening future. A bank account or a home cannot guarantee you self-confidence; that can only come from within. So start to value your many capabilities.

Many Taurus-Capricorns have musical and artistic leanings, but such talents can only be explored after fear and uncertainty are conquered. In addition to your creative abilities, you have at charming personality. Your persuasive manner works to your advantage, as you can charm and cajole the hardest heart. People often come to you for advice, drawn to your basic stability and worldly wisdom. A loyal and giving person, you are always ready to lend support to a friend.

You do have a tendency to hold in feelings of frustration and anger, rather than dealing with them openly. Learn to articulate those deep-seated emotions, because it you repress them for too long you may be subject to various psychological problems such as depression, anxiety, and even paranoia. The overly frustrated and repressed Taurus-Capricorn can become monomaniacal and tyrannical. Adolf Hitler is an example of an extremely maladjusted Taurus-Capricorn. Don't be afraid to say what you feel. It's better to deal with tension or hostility honestly than to keep it hidden at the cost of your emotional health.

With your matchless organisational skills, you easily create order out of chaos. You also have a terrific flair for business and high finance, and you enjoy wheeling and dealing. Fine! But just be careful that money does not become an end in itself.

You are a loyal lover, but you tend to make your search for a partner into a search for security. Women, especially, run the risk of falling for the first man who offers the promise of a comfortable refuge, only to find that the match proves unfortunate in other respects. Once you have learned to appreciate yourself and have gained self-confidence, the way is open to a successful and sharing love relationship.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Aquarius: The Reformer

You may look like the typical Taurean – rugged and responsible. or sensual and voluptuous – but your eyes have that far-away look, and something of the prophet within your soul sets you apart from other natives of your sign. Taurus-Aquarius is a realistic visionary: You're not content to dream; you want to see your dreams put into action.

The understanding you have gained from introspection enables you to reach others. You "know thyself," and this knowledge is your platform for great insight into the world around you – which can be applied creatively in any number of fields, such as psychology, sociology, politics and law. This combination has produced innovative scientists and social theorists. Whatever you undertake is approached with seriousness tempered by flexibility and originality.

Though you consider yourself a friend to all, you may have difficulty forming strong emotional ties with people. To maintain that sense of "being different," you will remain as detached and objective as possible at all times. Kind, considerate, and responsive to the needs of others, however, your aloofness is never mistaken for arrogance.

Many Taurus-Aquarians feel they have a mission in life. Though you may be a rebel at heart, you are conventional in most respects and prefer working within the system to effect the changes you desire. Like all Taureans, you are quite security-conscious, so before embarking on any crusades you will make certain your finances are in order.

Both signs of your combination are fixed signs, so you approach everything with determination and an exaggerated sense of your own importance. Like all fixed-sign people, you have a pretty strong temper and tend to become moody when things don’t go quite the way you planned. In spite of that aura of self-control, you are subject to occasional fits of fury that are usually unpredictable and often unwarranted. Many Taurus-Aquarians worry about leaving a significant contribution to humanity; Machiavelli and Nikolai Lenin exemplify this.

In romance you are a little on the possessive side, but also very tolerant and understanding of your mate. In love, as in all things, you are experimental and highly imaginative.

Sun in Taurus/Moon in Pisces: The Shrinking Violet

You are a very sensitive Taurus. People admire your quiet charm, perceiving great depth and understanding behind your gentle manner. Of all the Taurus combinations, yours is the most imaginative, artistic, and spiritual. You possess the worldliness and common sense of Taurus as well as the sensitivity and poetic inspiration of Pisces. Conscientious and compassionate, nothing hurts you more than the thought of hurting another.

You do have one major problem to overcome: self-consciousness. You are just as determined and capable as other Taureans, but you are often too sensitive to stressful situations and find it difficult to learn from and deal with other people. You present a front that is purposeful, brave and enduring, but you find it hard to live up to that persona. Consequently, when people begin to expect a lot from you, you are tempted to run and hide, shutting yourself offfrom the risk of failure. You may even resort to your fantastic imagination as a means of escape.

Self-acceptance is the first thing you must learn. Recognise and appreciate your refined and delicate emotional nature as an asset rather an impediment. Develop some compassion for yourself, rather than subjecting yourself to endless rounds of examination and disapproval. Finally, dare to make your way in the real world rather than dwelling in a perpetual fantasy land.

As you have a tendency to repress your feelings, start to communicate freely with those around you. Don't be afraid to express yourself – you have so much to offer! You have Taurean perseverance and the ability to continually renew yourself. All natives of Moon in Pisces can gain strength and solace from faith. Cultivate those spiritual instincts, instead of denying them.

Once you have thrown off your inhibitions, your many creative talents will unfold. Leonardo da Vinci is a Taurus-Pisces native who exemplified the remarkable artistic and spiritual versatility of your combination.

Because you are highly suggestible, it is important that you choose your acquaintances with great care. This is especially true in romantic relationships. Don't let yourself be so easily dominated by more aggressive types: they can push you around only if you let them. The female Taurus-Pisces should resist marrying too young, as security and shelter are no substitute for long-term happiness. Most important, in choosing a partner, make sure he or she shares and respects your sensitive, gentle nature.

CHAPTER THREE

GEMINI

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Aries: The Speed Demon

Gemini is nervous, highly strung, intelligent, and excitable. Aries is energetic, swift-acting, and combative. Combine the two and you usually get organised chaos. If you are a Gemini-Aries you are probably speedreading this right now, absorbing every detail, and, after you finish, you will just as probably “forget about it." You’re perceptive and very smart, but you don’t remember things for very long. Perhaps this is why you keep repeating the same behaviour patterns over and over again.

High intelligence, versatility, and speed are the chief virtues of the Gemini-Aries. Very sly, you never let slip an opportunity or an advantage when it comes your way. Since you have difficulty just sitting still, and your mind is in a constant whirl, you're only happy when you’ve got a dozen things going at once. Your idea of relaxing would exhaust most people. You gravitate to excitement and adventure because your nature demands it, and when things don’t seem to be going quite at your hectic pace you create a little mischief just to spice things up.

You may be terribly interested in all that is going on in your world, but your real motto is "me first." Whatever you may give, you expect to be repaid double, and you always make certain you get what you want. Although you are articulate and at times passionate when it comes to expressing your own ideas (which often change by the hour), you quickly turn a deaf ear when forced to listen to someone else’s viewpoint.

You must also learn to be less impulsive, less oriented toward instant gratification. You can get a great deal accomplished by simply acquiring some patience. Narrowing down your many interests and activities to a more manageable number is also advisable.

Gemini-Aries belongs in the communication field. Very perceptive, you would also make an excellent critic or sleuth. You are a natural problem-solver, and your solution is usually the most original.

Coping with tension can be a major problem for you. Highly-strung and easily excited, you get yourself into situations that would try the nerves of even the most self-controlled. Find positive outlets for your nervous energies such as sex, sports, and social activism.

Your thought processes are very swift and it does not take long for you to make up your mind on the most important matters – such as deciding whom to marry or what you should do with your life. Unfortunately, your on-the-spot decisions often tum out to be disastrous. Try to force yourself to stop and take a little more time. Examine your actions and options thoroughly before making a choice or embarking on an ill-fated enterprise.

Your vitality endows you with much sex appeal. It's not easy to resist your charms. But, although passionate and romantic, that mercenary streak means your affections are usually reserved for those who can be helpful to you.

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Taurus: The Troublemaker

A Taurus Moon stabilises Gemini flightiness. No matter how far out you may seem at times, you never lose your underlying emotional stability and direction. Your Gemini personality may get you into situations you’d rather forget, but your determined Taurean inner nature keeps you bouncing back, fresh and ready to take on new challenges.

Ideally, this is the combination of one who can bring original and innovative ideas into reality. Unfortunately, many Gemini-Taureans have trouble learning from their past mistakes. Because both signs of your combination are spring signs, you may have a hard time relinquishing childhood behaviour patterns. You may always retain your youth – both in looks and manner – making it particularly difficult for you to shake off your ties to childhood.

Your Taurus Moon gives you a strong need for security, but your adventurous Gemini nature often undermines this quest. Even when you feel you have finally found your anchor – in a home, a spouse or a job – it’s not long before you are longing for something new. You never seem to be fully satisfied. Curiosity and the need for change often force you to abandon what you have worked hard to establish. Try to be less impulsive. If you succumb to that constant craving for variety and adventure, your life may be eventful, but in the end you'll have little to look back upon. Also, learn to respect your own achievements, even ii they seem to come quickly and easily.

Personality is one of your strong points. You can work your way into the affections of the coldest person, and your quick wit and buoyant spirits cheer and inspire everyone you meet. Your combination also suggests upward mobility and sophistication – no matter what your background, you have probably risen above it. An innate sense of pride and dignity sets you apart from the crowd.

That analytical Gemini mind of yours is complemented by a kind and compassionate emotional nature. The Gemini-Taurus is often everyone's amateur psychologist, offering advice which is usually practical and worldly-wise.

Versatile and intelligent, you have many talents which can be applied in many fields. Your Gemini need to communicate and your Taurus sense of form, structure and aesthetics can be combined in such fields as architecture, writing, and music. Frank Lloyd Wright and Bob Dylan are two examples of Gemini-Taurus. Your insight can be put to use in psychology, social service, and human relations. You are excellent at managing and organising, and there is also business and marketing aptitude in your combination.

Stay socially active. Variety and excitement are vital to you. Withdrawal or isolation can be very dangerous to your psychological health – you need people around to share your thoughts and feelings.

You are very romantic, with a strong need to be loved and appreciated, so it's important that you find a partner who can share your interests, fan your intellectual fires and, most of all, satisfy your need for diversity.

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Gemini: The Whirling Dervish

Like a ship without an anchor, you drift about, exploring all possibilities and exhausting your resources. Nervous energy substitutes for true vitality, so enthusiasms are often short-lived. Changing with the winds, you are never sure where you stand or whose side you are on. More like several individuals than one, you're about as calm and predictable as a herd of wild horses.

On the more positive side, you can be a model of ingenuity. No problem arises without your finding the most practical and expedient solution. You are an intellectual powerhouse, having read just about everything there is to read and knowing a lot about almost anything. You are able to assimilate information with such speed and your responses are so quick and original that most people have difficulty just keeping up with you. The world turns much too slowly for you. You've seen it all. "What comes next?" you never tire of asking.

You live on your nerves. You may have the intellect of Kant, the wit of Jonathan Swift, the ingenuity and originality of an Einstein but your capability for serious and prolonged effort is practically non-existent. It can take years of experience and misadventure before you master the discipline, consistency, self-control, and discretion needed to combine and anchor your talents.

But there is still hope – if you are not already behind bars. Your combination belongs to the master criminal who always gets caught. Not that you are malicious or evil, but you tend to see things in terms of quick advantage and profit. Why waste time working when you can embezzle a million dollars or rob a bank? Yet, despite your cleverness, you'll always manage to neglect some detail which will be your undoing.

There is no question of finding yourself, because you have so many selves. Depending on circumstance, you can play any role that is called for. Your friends will attest to your ability to out-talk just about anyone and out-gossip too. Unfortunately, your tongue is so swift that you often say things you don't mean to say and end up hurting others without realising it.

Quite psychic (whether you realise it or not), you can pick up the thoughts of those around you like a sponge, and therefore you can never be sure whether your next idea is yours or someone else's. Some double Geminis are very dextrous and can make excellent craftsmen and sculptors once patience is mastered.

You are probably involved in many relationships. Since you must have variety in your love life, it's not easy narrowing down your affairs. Basically unemotional (though you can fake pathos on cue), you view love from a very detached perspective. Breaking off a relationship is no problem for you, if it threatens to become too deep. This is not a good combination for marital bliss. You must learn to ground yourself and your abilities before anything permanent or lasting can be accomplished.

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Cancer:
The Pendulum

Your combination is one of the most creative of all the Gemini combinations. It is also the one most prone to neurosis, depression, and mood swings.

Gemini's need to give practical expression to new and innovative ideas is enhanced by a Cancer inner nature that is imaginative, highly sensitive and sympathetic. Intuition, versatility, and high intelligence combine to help assure your success. Just a few outstanding natives of your combination are Igor Stravinsky, Jean-Paul Sartre, and Franz Kafka. Your gifts far outweigh your limitations: but like all highly emotional and imaginative individuals, you must learn to cope with a variety of difficulties.

Hypersensitive and impressionable, it is difficult for you to separate your own feelings from the feelings and moods of those around you – your spouse, co-workers, and friends. So it is absolutely vital that you live, work, and create in an environment relatively free of tension, discord, or animosity. In a highly charged atmosphere, you tend to become moody, depressed and withdrawn. You must learn to become master of your surroundings. Don't be such a chameleon that you force yourself to blend into your environment. Let people know what you want. Don't work for everyone else's happiness at the expense of your own.

You have an exuberant and light-hearted approach to life, but, sad to say, you do have some trouble with your self-image. Recognise your sensitivity as a strength rather than a weakness. Once you have gained greater confidence and become more aggressive, there is no end to what you may be able to accomplish. Your ability to adapt to your surroundings makes you an excellent role-player, and many Gemini-Cancers excel in the theatre.

Use your discrimination and intuition when choosing friends, lovers, or associates, and make sure your relationships are healthy and emotionally supportive. Try to be less accommodating. Learn to say "no" now and then, or you will find others constantly trying to take advantage of your good nature.

Subject to mood swings, you may periodically withdraw from the world. A certain amount of seclusion for contemplation and introspection might be beneficial, but prolonged isolation could be disastrous. Be sure to stay socially active. Your charm, good nature, and quick incisive wit will assure you popularity – especially with members of the opposite sex.

In romance, you are experimental, imaginative, and responsive to the needs of your partner: but your partner must understand your sensitive nature and be capable of giving you the emotional support, encouragement, and love you require. You want to have a family. Although you may have many romantic affairs in your search for the ideal partner, eventually you will seek the solace and stability of a home.

Gemini Sun/Leo Moon:
The Ham

Gemini is self-expressive, high strung, nervous, and excitable. Leo is flamboyant, extravagant, and dramatic. Combine the two and you get a nonstop soap opera with few station breaks. Melodrama was probably invented by a Gemini-Leo cave dweller. Whatever you do is done with flair and fanfare. You have this deep-seated need to express your thoughts and feelings. Never mind if it's with a perfect stranger; you've got to let the world know what you've been going through.

Charming, exuberant, and optimistic, you are always popular and well liked, for few people can resist your magnetic appeal. (Besides, they can't wait to hear the latest episode.) In addition, your somewhat exaggerated sense of your own importance gives you an authoritative air. There is nothing frivolous about you. In fact, you take your actions far more seriously than anyone would ever imagine.

People have trouble second-guessing you, for there are two sides to your personality. One is the carefree, witty sophisticate; the other, the wilful executive, issuing advice and opinions that take on the tone of commands. When you get into those bossy moods, it's usually more show than substance. You love to show off your leadership talents and you secretly delight in the fact that people actually believe in the role you are playing. Try toning down your act somewhat. You may not have meant all you said, but meanwhile you've left your victim cowering in the corner!

As with all natives of Moon in Leo, you have a tendency to follow your own set of rules in life, ignoring the advice and opinions of others. Yes, you are open-minded and willing to listen to reason, but in the final analysis you prefer to go your own way because inside you always feel intuitively right. There are times when your stubbornness or desire to prove to the world that you know best can lead you to restless and impulsive actions which undermine your constructive efforts. Watch that pride and try to become more responsive to the ideas and contributions of others.

Professionally, the Gemini-Leo has strong creative drives. Aside from artistic careers, you can excel in business (you are a lot more down-to-earth than people realise), salesmanship and promotion. Whatever you do in life, you do it with a sense of responsibility, loyalty, and dedication.

Highly romantic and adventurous, you actively search for (and hopefully find) the perfect partner – one who shares your enthusiasm and interests. You are far more loyal to your mate than your fellow Geminis. Loyalty is one of your highest ideals and extends into your marital life. Family-centred, you take great pride in your spouse and offspring, though you must beware of viewing them solely as extensions of yourself.

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Virgo: The Nitpicker

The planet Mercury rules both signs of your combination. If you are familiar with mythology, you'll know that Mercury is the messenger of the gods and governs the communication of thoughts and ideas. Self-expression is one of your strongest needs in life, whether it takes the form of writing, story-telling, debating, conversing, or just plain nagging. You've got an ongoing need to communicate your latest ideas, deepest feelings, and the impressions you get from the world around you. And, like all highly expressive people, you must have an audience so you can air your views, show off your wit and sophistication. If deprived of such a forum, you lapse into states of moodiness and agitation.

Highly strung, restless and exuberant, your charm and intelligence usually guarantee the audience you crave. Since yours is an extremely intellectual combination, you pursue knowledge avidly and you project an aura of worldly wisdom. But you also have difficulty specialising in any one field: Since there is always so much to learn, you feel it's a waste of time to specialise.

Despite your urbane, light-hearted manner, you are often discontented. You set high goals and almost impossible standards for yourself, and find it difficult to live up to them. Dissatisfaction with yourself or your projects is the source of much of the confusion, anxiety, and depression you experience throughout life. When you succumb to those vague feelings of self-doubt and discontent, you become moody, restless, and hypercritical toward those around you, projecting your problems onto them. If the frustration becomes too much to bear, you may resort to self-destructive behaviour – alcoholism being the most common. Fight off those feelings of discontent by developing a little compassion for yourself. Recognise and appreciate your talents and abilities, and forgive your flaws. It is also important to cultivate patience. Reward and recognition are not always instantly forthcoming, despite your labours.

The perfect critic and analyst, your perceptions are always on target. Although not very emotional, you are considerate and thoughtful and the advice you love to dispense is almost always well thought out and wise. Professionally, your combination is well suited for fields that involve analysis and precision. In addition, you can excel in the communications media – particularly advertising, journalism, and promotion. A Gemini-Virgo is a terrific salesperson.

A very detached view of love makes you not nearly as romantic as you may appear. Variety is what you crave, so you are likely to have many affairs before you are ready to settle down – if ever. Although a considerate, thoughtful and appreciative lover, you can tend to be overly critical toward your mate – particularly when you are having difficulties in other areas of your life.

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Libra:
The Mediator

A natural peacemaker, you are never happy unless you feel that those around you are happy as well. You strive for tranquillity, harmony, and balance within yourself and everyone else. Of course, life just doesn't run smoothly all the time. Emotional equilibrium is hard for you to maintain in a world of constant flux and tension. Since you are not responsible for the woes and upsets of those around you, you should not feel so duty-bound to assuage their wounds or mediate every conflict that happens to come your way. Try to place more emphasis on maintaining your own happiness and emotional well-being. This way, even if the world doesn't conform to your idealised vision, at least you'll be setting a positive example for others.

Restless and independent, you have to be involved with a variety of people and projects. A secluded Gemini-Libra is a very sad Gemini-Libra. Yet when life becomes too tense and people too impossible for you to cope with, you may feel the urge to withdraw into isolation or fantasy. Withdrawal is never the answer to your difficulties, and fantasy is only a temporary solution. Running away from life will only compound your misery. And besides, you'd be depriving the world of all that you have to give! Respect that impulse to stay active, fresh, and alive, and resist the temptation to flee from a world that doesn't always suit you. Your natural diplomacy, extraordinary perception and insight can all be applied creatively in such fields as politics, social work, and the mass media. Your strong imagination is also conducive to an artistic career.

You probably enjoy reading about distant lands and cultures, and your extreme open-mindedness would probably enable you to adapt to almost any life-style. You have a universal quality about you that transcends culture, religion, ideology, or any other barrier that divides mankind.

Because your combination is harmonious, life is not very burdensome or tiring for you. As you are so adaptable, intelligent, and resourceful, you must resist the temptation to simply dance through life, skirting real responsibility and deftly circumventing any real challenge or risk. It is important for all Gemini-Librans to push their talents and abilities to the limit. Resist the temptation to simply "get by," and you will surely go far in life.

Romantic at heart and idealistic in love, you will search for the perfect partner, there will be many affairs along the way, because not long after you feel you have found Mr. or Ms. Right, the itch for someone new causes you to search again. It's not easy for you to find someone stimulating and exciting enough to hold your interest!

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Scorpio:
The Storyteller

You have a forceful and magnetic personality. Much more intense than your fellow Geminis, you always know just what you are doing and where you are going (even if nobody else does). Somewhat secretive, you never fully reveal yourself and this may account for your mystique. Although you project an explosive image – highly expressive and emotionally charged – you do exercise extreme caution when matters concern you personally.

Self-assured, bold, and aggressive, people can't help but notice you. And you, all the while, are noticing them. Observant and analytical, you pride yourself on your perception, and that Gemini mind of yours seldom misses a detail. Although for the most part your insight is accurate, you do have a tendency to exaggerate and overdramatise, especially when you are in one of those expansive moods. On these occasions, your imagination and emotional fervour carry you away, and you may do unintentional harm to others by distorting facts or blowing things out of all proportion. Learn to watch what you say and try to relate with a little less urgency.

You seem to be your own boss, decisive and strong-willed but whether you realise it or not you adopt and absorb the ideas, moods, and even goals of those around you – often subconsciously. Rather than deciding for yourself in terms of your career, social or romantic life, you often bend to pressure exerted by family, friends, or a lover, Yes, it is important to keep your mind open to the advice and opinions of others, but it is vital that your final decisions be based upon how you really feel deep down inside. Follow your true nature.

Your high degree of emotional receptivity also affects your psychological health, so that in addition to taking on the attitudes and goals of those around you, you may also subconsciously absorb their neuroses and behaviour patterns. Look carefully at your past, particularly at your relationship to your parents. Determine whether some of your bad habits or destructive behaviour patterns have actually been inherited from those who have had a strong influence on your life, particularly parents or siblings. Once you have discovered the source of your problems, it may be difficult for you to shake them off, because you hold on to impressions and convictions fiercely. But if you learn to open yourself up a little more, perhaps to a close friend or a psychologist, you may suddenly find that you have not been living your life in a way that is healthy for you. This is the first step toward making positive changes.

Like all Geminis you are very intelligent and versatile. Your Scorpio Moon gives you great depth and strengthens your ability to concentrate and stick to your goals. You also have a wonderful recuperative quality which enables you to quickly move beyond setbacks.

With your strong personal convictions, you must guard against a tendency to be overly judgemental toward those who fail to fit your standards of right and wrong. As with all natives of Moon in Scorpio, beware of self-righteousness!

You are romantic and sensual, and love is almost always on your mind. As a lover, you are very passionate and self-expressive; but you are also a little cruel toward your partner without even realising it. You tend to be a bit jealous and your possessiveness can take on outrageous proportions. Though you may be emotionally guarded around others, you are never afraid to express your feelings to your partner – whether anger, jealousy, or affection.

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Sagittarius: The Soldier of Fortune

Brilliant and inspired, but also naive and impulsive, like the Fool in the Tarot deck you either discover and explore brave new worlds or you fall over the precipice. Maybe you weren't born yesterday but there are times when you get up in the morning and see the world as if for the first time. Your perennial optimism has already dispatched yesterday's mishap or catastrophe from your short memory.

Your fantastic scope of vision, imagination, intellect, and enthusiasm is enough to keep ten or twelve people busy for a lifetime but no matter how brilliant you may be, it takes everything you can muster just to keep yourself together. Impulsiveness, impatience, senseless rebellion and extravagance are the traits that so often undermine your work and dreams.

Freedom-loving, you despise any form of restriction. The open road is a lot more tempting to you than the drudgery of a routine job or the confinement of a classroom. To you, life is something to be experienced and enjoyed, and you want to find out what it's all about on your own – never mind the lessons learned by your predecessors. A true rebel without a cause, you reject anything that hints of conformity or orthodoxy. Impulsive to the point of foolhardiness, how many times have you abandoned something in which you were completely immersed, just to follow the call of something that seemed more exciting and exotic?

Controlling your restlessness, organising your goals, and developing the discipline and concentration to follow through on them are the lessons you must learn. If you don't, have fun – but don’t blame the astrologer. At the end of the line, all you may have is a head full of adventurous mishaps to tell your grandchildren about. But, maybe that's just how you want it!

Your combination can produce brilliant scientists, scholars, artists, and philosophers. In fact, there is very little you can't do once you've mastered willpower and self-control. The best way for you to generate that discipline is to put yourself in an organised, well-structured, working/learning framework. This does not mean that you have to give up that soldier-of-fortune spirit: it just means that you should learn to channel it usefully.

Since you are pretty gullible, it is advisable that you associate more with well-organised and determined people. Try hanging out with a few ambitious Capricorns, work-oriented Virgos or industrious Taureans, and stay away from flight? and capricious individuals – particularly fellow Geminis and Sagittarians.

Romantic and sensual, you like variety in your love life, and this may be why you have a love-them-and-leave-them reputation. Fixing your affections on one person is about as difficult for you as fixing your ambitions and goals in life. Although you have high standards of loyalty and honour, you are usually the first to betray them.

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Capricorn: The Politician

Tough, detached, and ruggedly ambitious, you are a pretty cool character. Gemini is exuberant, multifaceted, and communicative, but that Capricorn inner nature of yours is at all times serious, purposeful, and shrewd. Your magnetic charm can sway anyone to your advantage. You know this, and make use of it, putting all your considerable energies toward the pursuit of status, power, and influence.

You never have to worry about collecting your thoughts or losing perspective, as your goals are so well-defined that you seldom stop to question them. Organised and efficient, others admire and respect your discipline, self-control, and eloquence. They may not realise that everything you say is calculated to produce an effect, and that you actually keep your emotions down to a minimum. Yours is a charged personality, but you keep your feelings hidden under a calm, patient, and rather aloof facade.

You have an innate sense of dignity and decorum, and you possess a well-defined moral code which keeps you from resorting to ruthless measures in that quest for power and esteem. But, especially in your business dealings, you do have a way of getting the better of others. Able to sense out their weaknesses, you employ your natural eloquence, well timed flattery, and almost hypnotic powers of persuasion to control and at times manipulate those around you. Few would suspect the cobra that lies coiled within, for you always seem so considerate and charming.

Gemini-Capricorns perceive the world as one big chessboard with thousands of players competing for influence and recognition. Such a shrewd view of life is fine if you want only material riches but it denies many other facets of life. Love of competition is healthy and should be expressed, but don't overlook what can be gained from the spiritual side of life. The worldly goods you seek are easy for you to attain; the real challenge for you is to encompass the broader spectrum of what life has to offer. If you fail to do this in your youth, much later in life, as you become more contemplative, you may feel you have cheated yourself out of many important experiences. This could result in much bitterness and melancholy in old age.

Your combination suggests great inner strength, character, and the ability to overcome obstacles through perseverance and fortitude. But no matter how strong you are, in the end you may find yourself without the solace of companionship, if you don’t learn to share with others. Basically detached and unemotional, you have difficulty forming deep or meaningful relationships. Learn to reach out. Understand, appreciate, and try to love those close to you.

You are just not very romantic, so if you do choose to marry, you will probably pick a partner who can enhance your prestige and station in life. As a lover, you are loyal and devoted, but you have difficulty expressing true intimacy. Try to show your partner a little more affection and concern.

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Aquarius: The Inventor

As a child, you probably tore toasters apart to find out why they went pop, or took apart telephone receivers to discover their inner workings. The spirit of inquiry and investigation manifested itself early in your life, and it was probably everything your mother could do to keep you from short-circuiting the house.

Your curiosity about the world is insatiable. Science and social change, the unusual and the unexplored, have a constant fascination for you. And it is your mission to use your fantastic intellect and imagination to effect change and bring new and innovating ideas to your immediate world – if not to the world at large.

Your personality is outgoing, charming, and sophisticated. Forever on the move, your restlessness, impatience, and desire for maximum independence and freedom of expression spurs you on and helps to make some of your fantastic dreams come true. Intuition is one of your greatest gifts. You seem to know what people are thinking, what they want, and what they will want in the future. In fact, you live more for the future than you do for the present. Your thoughts always seem to be miles ahead of everyone else’s, and this is one reason why you may have trouble communicating your ideas. Others just aren't living in your dimension.

Your approach to life is quite optimistic. As you’re basically unemotional and detached, it's very difficult for you to understand why some people seem so unhappy. Then you encounter a highly emotional situation, you get confused and agitated. When you see an unhappy friend, lover, or relative, you do everything you can to make him or her feel better, and even though you think you don't know the right thing to do or say, your optimism and charming good humour usually do the trick.

While busy planning for the future, you tend to forget the joys that today has to offer. Stop once in a while to appreciate the here-and-now. After all, the world can wait a little longer for that surprise or invention you've been busy concocting.

Extroverted and outgoing, you get so involved with people and projects that you have little time left to look within. Try spending some time in quiet contemplation. There is a lot for you to learn about yourself and your own inner workings.

You are subject to erratic mood changes – pensive and serious one moment, lively and spontaneous the next – so it's not easy for people to put up with you. But one thing is certain: you rarely lose your temper. The only thing in life that does unnerve you is the feeling that there has been an imposition on your freedom and independence. You need the liberty to move about and do as you please, and you resent anyone's attempt to hold you down.

You may be astute in your work but you are a fool in love. As you dwell endlessly on the image of your ideal lover, you can be completely unaware of someone very special who may be right before your eyes. Once you have found Mr. or Ms. Right – and it takes quite a while – you tend to place him or her on a pedestal. Trouble begins when reality tarnishes that flawless image. Try taking off your rose-coloured glasses and being a little more realistic in love. It will help you avoid unnecessary heartbreak.

Sun in Gemini/Moon in Pisces: The Split Personality

Yours is a multifaceted and very complex personality. Gemini is analytical and objective: paradoxically, Pisces is sympathetic, impressionable, and very emotional. Perhaps you see yourself as cool, somewhat distant and sophisticated, but there are times when you can feel overwhelmed with compassion.

Unusually sensitive and emotionally vulnerable, particularly in your youth, experience and a few hard knocks have taught you to conceal and very often repress your true feelings. You tend to rationalise your problems and your air of detachment and sophistication camouflages your true sensitivity. You run the risk of eventually losing touch with your feelings altogether and then having a hard time finding satisfaction. Learn to respect your inner nature; confront your feelings directly, openly, and honestly, rather than burying them in an intellectual quagmire.

Because you are so impressionable, you often take on the moods, impressions, and ill-feelings of those around you. Beware that others, particularly more forceful individuals, do not gain influence or control over your affairs. Examine your closest relationships. Make sure the people you associate with are healthy, supportive, and sympathetic to your needs. Rather than letting yourself be swayed by a tide of emotional undercurrents and impressions, learn to control your environment and master your own destiny. Intuition is your best guide in life, and you usually know what's best for you. Strive to maintain your independence, and learn to trust your sixth sense. Religion is often an excellent source of solace and hope for many Gemini-Pisceans.

You have many talents which can be creatively expressed, as a Pisces Moon gives the communicative Gemini a strong urge to create. You also have strong business and marketing talents, for your intuition tells you exactly what people want. With their high esteem for the power of reason and the importance of education, many Gemini-Pisceans excel as teachers and scholars. In all your activities, you are known for your dedication and conscientiousness, and you have a high code of ethics.

The opposite sex is captivated by your charming disposition and subtle, incisive wit. You have a very romantic nature, but you'd better exercise all your powers of discrimination and intuition when choosing a partner. Easily hurt and very sensitive in romance, you should search for a mate who is as perceptive, kind, and generous as yourself – one who gives as much as he or she takes.

CHAPTER FOUR CANCER

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Aries:
The Holier-Than-Thou

It's not easy for you to live up to that Superman or Wonder Woman self-image of yours! In your combination, the cautious, sensitive, and vacillating Cancer personality must compete with an Aries inner nature that is aggressive, self-assertive, and decisive. In your heart, you may feel that you have all the qualities of a born leader, but caution, insecurity, and uncertainty often prevent you from actually realising those inner fantasies of grandeur. Whenever you cannot keep pace with the rigorous demands of your dreams, you may lapse into states of moodiness and lethargy, while repeating to yourself, “If only they could understand me and see just how superior I really am.”

Self-acceptance is the key to many of the problems you encounter. You cannot be in the spotlight all the time. It’s nearly impossible to meet all the goals you will set for yourself, so stop racing around risking heart attack and nervous breakdown, thinking of all the things you could do for the world if only you had the chance. Instead, try to appreciate who you are rather than who you think you ought to be. You'll be much happier if you learn to accept yourself.

Cancer-Aries is a very dynamic combination with many talents. You like to be involved with people and projects that emphasise change and improvement, leading you to a socially oriented career, such as civil engineering, politics, or social organising. You also have a very strong intellectual bent, and you may feel drawn to scholarly pursuits. Your talents and abilities can find expression in any one of several creative ways, once you have shaken off that idealistic self-image.

Though considerate and generous by nature, you probably have vague feelings of superiority, and that innate sense of being better than everyone else is often your downfall. Ambition and enthusiasm are thwarted by pride and impatience, often preventing you from taking necessary steps toward securing your future. ln school or at work, you are in the forefront, intellectually as well as in spirit. But you have a tendency to burn your bridges when things don't seem to be going your way. Often unwilling to take the time and patience to master a skill or trade, it is also difficult for you to accept a subordinate role – even if it might guarantee eventual advancement. Learning to overcome that haughty streak is perhaps the most difficult lesson for the Cancer-Aries.

Socially, you are outgoing, congenial and exuberant. Your sophisticated charm and quick wit make you something of a ham, and you're usually happiest centre stage. In your close friendships, you are forever loyal, trustworthy and constant.

Passionate and intensely romantic, you are a devoted and affectionate partner. You must always feel you have someone to work for, someone who can give you the emotional support and encouragement you need, in order to be at your best. Early on in a relationship, you are ardent and zealous in your affection but if love becomes stale, you are quick to make an end of it. It's hard for the Cancer-Aries to hang around when the going gets tough.

As with all Cancers, a tranquil domestic environment is important to your emotional well-being – but it is not essential, as inner stability and strength is your true foundation. In fact, you always seem to be at home everywhere, for you are secure within yourself.

It's difficult for you to imagine life without love. Romantic and giving by nature, you have a very strong need to show your affection as well as to receive love. Your full creative talents will unfold only when you have someone to share them with, and a good relationship is necessary for your emotional health. Loyal and trusting in romance, you tend to be overprotective toward your lover. Guard against jealousy and suspicion.

Cancer Sun/Taurus Moon:
The Well-stocked Cupboard

Your nature is innocent, charming, and gentle, but underlying your humble persona is the stability, determination, and inner strength of the bull. Your guise of fragility and timidity is really a camouflage for your inner shrewdness and confidence.

After much introspection – and a few rough breaks – you have learned to keep up a constant guard lest others take advantage of you. You know yourself pretty well and have the ability to second-guess others. Cancers tend to use many escape and defence tactics, and you have tried most of them. But ultimately you have come to rely on your own perseverance and wisdom as protection against the storms of life.

You are adaptable to those around you but you never lose your well-defined sense of self and even though you are considerate of others, you seldom take their advice seriously. You always live your own life, using your intuition as your guide. Tenacious and stubborn, you have difficulty shaking off first impressions, or forgiving a past hurt. This emotional rigidity can be your downfall.

Since you always feel that you know best, criticism confuses you. It is almost impossible for you to admit that you may be wrong. You're an expert at projecting the guilt or failure that you feel onto another, very often the person closest to you. You are capable of losing your temper and becoming irrational at the first sign of any threat to your emotional or material security, or if someone tries to convince you that you just may be in the wrong. You must learn to be less suspicious of others‘ motives and to discriminate between constructive advice and vindictiveness.

Your combination implies great potential for creative thought and action. You have a powerful imagination and everything you do has flare and originality. But that overactive imagination can also cause irrational fears, superstitions, and even paranoia. Try to use it constructively and you should be able to succeed at almost any creative endeavour. If you live too much in your imagination you are in danger of becoming deeply depressed.

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Gemini: The Antenna

Your combination suggests wit, sophistication, and intellectual agility. Highly perceptive and a natural critic, you have a phenomenal memory and the ability to learn just about anything. Your Cancer personality is intuitive, sensitive, and impressionable, while your Gemini inner nature is restless, variety seeking, and inquisitive. But despite your buoyant spirit and gifted mind, you've got your fair share of problems.

Introspection is difficult for you because you are so busy sorting out all the conflicting demands and impressions you receive from those around you. Like all highly sensitive individuals, you run the risk of overaccommodation and adaptation. In other words, rather than doing what you want to do in life, you may find yourself fulfilling someone else’s dream. Rather than feeling what you really feel you may be responding to the emotional atmosphere around you: in a tense or overly aggressive environment, you become tense and aggressive; in a peaceful, non-competitive atmosphere, you become tranquil and passive. Like a chameleon you take on the colour of your surroundings and thus it is difficult for you to find yourself and discover what your true aims in life really are. Is it any wonder that Cancer-Gemini Henry David Thoreau chose to work outside the mainstream of society, where his work and thoughts would be unimpeded?

Next time you have to make a decision, stop and think: “What is it that I want?" Learn to be more self-assertive. Stop, look within, and discover what your true desires and goals are. And once you have found what they are, don't be afraid to act. Remember, your first impressions are very often correct, so learn to trust them and rely on them.

Your decisions should be your own but Cancer-Gemini does usually work best in partnership or within an organised, structured framework. Not an executive type (since you tend to be indecisive), your ingenuity, imagination and intellectual skills can still be valuable in many fields. You may be attracted to advertising and the media. Or, if there are strong creative or artistic aspects in your chart, you can go far in the arts.

You are loyal to whoever happens to be around at the time, and sometimes you may make promises you can't keep. Female Cancer-Geminis may be overwhelmed by stronger and more self-assertive partners, and thus ran the risk of losing themselves in a submissive role. You should search for a partner who is as independent and open-minded as yourself and avoid those who are overbearing or domineering. A Gemini Moon also tends to make one hypercritical. Don‘t nag your partner just because he or she fails to provide you with novelty and excitement twenty-four hours a day.

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Cancer:
The Protector

Self-protection is almost everything to the double Cancer. From early childhood until late in life, you seek shelter. You probably think the world is out to get you, so you spend most of your life preparing defences, building fortresses, and worrying about possible chinks in your armour.

This combination gives great strengths as well as innumerable weaknesses. The emotional sensitivity and depth of the Cancer Sun is intensified when combined with a Cancer Moon. But just as your sensitivity is heightened, so too is your shrewdness and ability to construct even thicker barriers between yourself and your surroundings. You possess great subtlety, intelligence, and imagination. The hostility and competitiveness you see all around you either force you to make use of your own natural gifts or cause you to withdraw behind a thousand locked doors.

Childhood was probably the early testing ground, when, through cautious experimentation, you learned the safest and most certain way to manoeuvre in a highly unpredictable world. Once that pattern of behaviour was set, you clung to it tenaciously.

In dealing with others, you maintain a modest, low profile. But you are active all the time – moving about, shifting your tactics, and assuming attitudes that suit the moment. The master tactician and diplomat, you know intuitively what others expect from you. In conflicts, you never approach an opponent head on; you prefer indirect means, as there is nothing you fear more than exposure. If your surroundings are genuinely hostile or threatening, you may withdraw completely, preferring total isolation.

It would probably come as a shock to you to find out that most people are not so concerned with what you choose to keep hidden. Your acute paranoia is a product of your ego.

Like the tides, you fluctuate in your feelings and sympathies, and you are subject to wide swings of depression and elation. Your extreme sensitivity may cause you to avoid people altogether – but on the positive side, it also gives you the ability to understand the moods of those you do become close to. It also gives you the ability to create, once you have erased your many fears and phobias.

Aside from creative endeavours, you have a shrewd eye for business and an uncanny flair for finance. Many double Cancers are highly spiritual and you may be drawn to a religious path in order to fulfil your inner needs. Be wary of the more bizarre forms of religion, as you are too easily led astray by anything esoteric.

You have a very generous nature, but giving love is not easy for one so caught up in self-preservation. Nevertheless, you must have permanent give-and-take romantic relationship as a necessary step toward emotional maturity, so try to be less fault-finding and less sensitive to criticism.

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Leo:
The Defeatist

This is a gifted combination, the Leo Moon giving sensitive and imaginative Cancer the courage to create. You have the talent, facility and most of all, the confidence to excel in whatever you set out to do.

Unlike most Cancers, you do not feel the need to guard your emotions. You express your thoughts and feelings with abandon, because you know yourself. All that personal magnetism, charm, and self-assurance leave you with relatively few inhibitions and contribute to your worldly success. And success is very important to you, for your inner Leo nature creates a strong need for status, recognition, and acclaim. Contentment is only found when you're certain you've won the respect, admiration, and, in some cases, the adulation you feel is your due in life.

It is a rare Cancer-Leo who doesn’t have unusually strong creative urges. At one point or another in life, you have probably felt drawn to the arts. Your imagination, courage, and tenacity are conducive to all fields that emphasise aesthetics: film, design, music, writing, and architecture to name a few possibilities.

Pride and vanity are a problem. Although patient and determined, you don't respond well to criticism and have difficulty accepting the setbacks or normal frustrations that all gifted individuals must encounter in progressing toward self-fulfilment. Part of this stems from stubbornness. You feel intuitively "right" almost all the time, and no one can convince you otherwise. "How can anyone question me?" you often wonder to yourself. An aristocratic rigidity in your attitude toward change or instruction can be your tragic flaw.

Spectacular beginnings and early advances are common to the Cancer-Leo, but the first time you encounter defeat or failure may be devastating. Once your pride or vanity has been wounded it takes a long time for you to recover. A martyr complex may take over, and you could find yourself quite content to sit back lamenting the fact that your brilliance has gone unrecognised by a callous and undeserving world.

You must realise that, even in defeat, there is always something to be learned. Try to profit from experience and constructive advice, or you will turn away from a promising future.

You have a strong desire for social acceptance, and your benevolence and personal magnetism usually attract people to you. Watch that tendency to manipulate others to your advantage. For all your compassion and sympathy, your number one concern is yourself.

In romantic relationships you are a paradox: When involved in an affair that's going smoothly you are the perfect lover, but as soon as things go the least bit sour, you find the nearest exit. Cancer-Leo is highly romantic and sensuous, but still basically self-centred. Capable of giving much, you expect much more in return. For one thing, you feel you must be constantly reminded of just how wonderful you are. And that same flattery often blinds your judgement in choosing the night partner. You have much sex appeal and can usually leave the party with whomever you set your sights on, so choose carefully!

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Virgo: The Servant

Cancer's emotional sensitivity is heightened by the intense mental perception of the Virgo Moon. From early childhood, you have had to contend with an almost painful awareness of the malice and hostility of the world. If your early environment reflected an undue amount of indifference, hardship or suffering, your hypersensitivity may have resulted in various problems, such as shyness, extreme introspection, and possibly even emotional paralysis.

You no doubt matured much faster than your peers and as a child probably resembled an ancient sage. Fortunately, although unusually sensitive, you have the ability to adapt to your surroundings. Cancer's shrewdness, intuition, and ability to profit from experience enable you to overcome whatever obstacles you may face. And a Virgo Moon gives inner strength, patience, and a capacity for self-sacrifice, which also help you.

Essentially, you have a giving nature and are known for your generosity and kindness. No matter how hardened you may be to the storms of life, you never lose your compassion and sympathetic understanding of others. You want desperately to feel needed, and usually find fulfilment in working for others. Indeed, many a Cancer-Virgo becomes a workaholic.

Your need to serve is not, however, to be confused with losing yourself in others. On the contrary, you have a very strong sense of self. Your mission is to use your inner strength, compassion, and understanding to be of help, whether as a counsellor, teacher, priest, doctor, or concerned humanitarian.

Aside from humanistic endeavours, many Cancer-Virgos excel in business. You have a very shrewd, intuitive mind, and you possess remarkable talents for organisation. Since you are cautious by nature, you work best within an organised and conventional framework.

With others, you may be generous to a fault, but when it comes to your own personal expenditures, you tend to be very tight. Learn to give to yourself a little more. Open up and enjoy what life has to offer.

In a relationship, you enjoy giving affection more than receiving it. You must feel needed. Fortunately, you have very high standards, which save you from becoming entangled with dependent or neurotic partners. You may even form an almost abstract relationship with a religious ideal or a charitable enterprise. Emotional satisfaction transcends the merely physical.

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Libra:
The Organisation Man

The emotional insecurities and sensitivity of the Cancer Sun are intensified when combined with a Libra Moon. Hypersensitivity and emotional vulnerability are the chief impediments in your search for tranquillity and inner peace.

Your self-image is often a reflection of how others see you, rather than how you see yourself. Observing carefully the actions and behaviour of those around you, you hope to find yourself; but more often you become lost, assuming roles and attitudes of others, rather than acting according to your own true needs. Much of your confusion results from not doing what you feel, following instead a path set down for you by parents, authority figures, or a peer group.

Basically social, outgoing and congenial, your sensitivity and fear of getting hurt can cause you to erect barriers between yourself and others. When your desire to protect yourself or shield your emotions gets the upper hand, you may easily succumb to shyness, self-consciousness, excessive introspection, and possibly even isolation.

Since your surroundings have a lot to say about your emotional state, learn to control your environment, rather than allowing it to dictate to you. Most important, exercise discrimination in choosing associates. This will ensure that your surrounding atmosphere is constructive and supportive.

You should also learn to speak up more and be more confident in your opinions. Opportunities seldom just happen to anyone, so learn to take risks and to dare. Look within, and discover just what your talents are. Then you can explore the various ways in which you can express them. Once you have gained greater self-confidence, you will be prepared to throw off those fears and meet even greater challenges.

Your strong imagination makes you highly creative. All sorts of artistic avenues are open to the Cancer-Libra who has gained confidence. An excellent diplomat and a natural peacemaker, you instinctively seem to know how to isolate sources of conflict and tension. Once you have found harmony and emotional equilibrium, you are capable of applying your social insight in diverse areas such as law, psychology, social work and human relations.

You long to be needed and you are deeply romantic. The sentimental and romantic aspects of love are more important to you than the sexual. The search is for a partner who can give you emotional support and encouragement, but you have a tendency to idolise your loved one, exaggerating his or her good traits, while ignoring the bad ones. As with all people who idealise, conflict ensues when reality interferes. To ensure a successful relationship, adopt a more realistic attitude toward your lover.

Cancer Sun/Scorpio Moon:
The Cobra

This native is not the timid, introverted, or insecure Cancer one so often reads about. You may seem unprepossessing and even modest, but it's not hard to discern your true inner shrewdness and tenacity. Underneath that cool image of yours is a very intense, forceful and determined individual. Personal magnetism and self-confidence combine to help assure your success in life. Luck also has something to do with it, because for the Cancer-Scorpio things just seem to come easier. Whether on the tennis court or in the boardroom, you always seem to win, garnering respect and gaining influence.

Your Cancerian protective shell creates an aura of intrigue and mystery about you. You guard your feelings and thoughts, revealing nothing that may expose your inner self. But you are, in fact, a very emotional individual. Your responses and reactions are based almost entirely upon how you happen to feel about the person you are dealing with or the situation you are handling. Reason be damned; for the Cancer-Scorpio, intuition or gut reaction makes all the decisions. And, amazingly, you always seem to be right; shrewd and perceptive, you can sense who is trustworthy or when to take a risk.

You take yourself so very seriously that it can be risky making fun of you. You yourself, however, are quite adept at sensing other people’s weak spots and would never be shy about pointing them out – bluntly, sarcastically, and, at times, cruelly. Exercise a little tact along with that sense of humour.

Of all the Cancer combinations, yours is one of the most prone to depression and morbidity. Learn to deal honestly with your emotions. Be less secretive with your feelings of hostility or hurt. It is better to deal with your problems up front than surrender to silent sulking or to harbour a grudge.

Life for you is seen as a constant battle. Suspicious and on guard, you are the tireless general, constantly plotting your moves. You have an incredible memory, and you never forget a wrong. If someone should cross you, you'll sit back, wait awhile, and then plan your vengeance. A Cancer-Scorpio is not above malice, pettiness, and vindictiveness.

Like other highly competitive and aggressive individuals, you want to experience everything. Sensual and self-indulgent, you pursue your pleasures as tenaciously and lustily as you pursue your professional endeavours. There is also a deeply compassionate side to your nature. You have a protective impulse toward those weaker than yourself, and at some point in your life you have probably felt strong religious yearnings. All Moon in Scorpio natives are capable of soaring to spiritual and intellectual heights, but more often they prefer to probe the depths because it's a lot more fun.

A shrewd realist, you work best where the competition is tough and the goals are well-defined. Business, marketing, advertising, and other highly competitive endeavours are well suited to your determined, pragmatic and materialistic nature. You usually end up getting your way and outsmarting your opponents.

You are intensely sensual, and a healthy sex life is very important to your overall emotional well-being. Though not particularly romantic, you are nonetheless a very kind, giving, and affectionate partner. Guard against being overly possessive and jealous toward the one you love.

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Sagittarius: The Romantic

You don't have that typical Cancer gloom-and-doom approach to the world, as your Sagittarian Moon gives you great hope, optimism, and faith in the future. No matter how many ups and downs you may experience, you will never lose your cheerful and tolerant perspective. Your inner nature is expansive, idealistic, and spiritually inclined.

You have had many dreams and lofty ambitions in your lifetime. And with your high standards, you are never content to settle for less. Narrowing down your ambitions can be difficult since your vision is so broad. You can almost lose yourself in contemplating all the wonderful things you could do; the problem is in deciding on one.

There are two sides to your nature. The Cancer personality has a strong need for security in a home or a vocation, but the Sagittarian inner soul longs for freedom, adventure, and romance. Although, after much experimentation, you may finally opt for a conventional career, you will never fully shake off that longing for adventure. Because of this, you will often experience capricious moods that can undermine your efforts. Whenever you feel overburdened with work or responsibility or drudgery, the temptation to drift off into exotic daydreams can be overwhelming. How many times have you suddenly dropped what you were doing in order to follow some romantic whim?

Instead of surrendering to impulse and possibly abandoning responsibility, structure your activities and make sure you set aside plenty of time for travel, thought, music – anything that fulfils your need for escape and adventure. Give your soul the chance to take flight now and then.

Known for your candour, you are never afraid to speak your mind. Your likes and dislikes are often based upon gut reaction, as you are essentially an emotional person. With your emotions in charge, you often say things that you later regret. You must learn to cultivate a little tact or you will lose many friends.

Outgoing, trusting, and enthusiastic in your social relations, you seem carefree and easy-going: yet you are actually a lot deeper than most people realise. Philosophically inclined, you love to explore new ideas and never content with the superficial, you prefer to probe deeply into the meaning of things.

When in love, you are trustworthy and loyal but you do have difficulty focusing your affections. Since you crave experience and variety, you can easily become bored with just one partner. If you do settle down, you may find yourself continually thinking back on your many past affairs. But you do respect your partner's freedom, and as a lover you are tolerant, affectionate and generous.

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Capricorn: The Inferiority Complex

In your combination the Sun and Moon are in opposing signs. The Cancer personality is shy, emotional, and sympathetic, while the Capricorn inner nature is ruggedly ambitious, aloof, and calculating. As with all polar combinations, you have many inner conflicts to resolve as well as many strengths to develop.

It is likely that your early childhood environment was somehow strife-torn or restrictive, but inner resolve and determination helped you overcome those early obstacles and in turn made you far more shrewd and introspective than your fellow Cancers. You learn readily and take everything with utmost seriousness. Experience has given you keen insights into your fellow men and women. But just as your dual combination gives you special perceptions, it also gives painful inner struggles and inhibitions.

Unlike most Cancers, you are not threatened by an uncertain future. Ambitious and desiring recognition, you set high – almost unreachable – goals for yourself. But your gentle Cancer personality finds it hard to meet the challenge of a tough Capricorn inner nature. Thus, you forever feel you must prove yourself – not just to the world at large but to yourself. Such continual dissatisfaction with yourself can lead to frustration, depression, and withdrawal. And, in extreme cases, you might seek escape in alcohol or drugs.

Learn to appreciate yourself! Recognise your many talents and accept your limitations. Acknowledge rather than deny your sensitivity and consider it a strength rather than a weakness. Self-acceptance and self-love are two things the Cancer-Capricorn must really work on. Once you have learned to work in harmony with your inner nature, there is little you cannot accomplish. Cancer's perception and intuition combined with Capricorn's pragmatism, organisation, and ambition can give you excellent business sense. Never satisfied with superficial impressions, you have a somewhat unorthodox approach to life. Whatever you do, you approach it with an eye toward change and innovation. The writer Ernest Hemingway and the astronomer Galileo were both natives of your combination and their work demonstrates the uniqueness of the Cancer-Capricorn complex.

You have a tendency to seek seclusion. While a certain amount of solitude may be beneficial, too much can lead to alienation from the world and worse feelings of inferiority. Try to stay sociable. Your sense of humour is remarkable (though it is usually attuned to the dark, wry and melancholy side of life) and will usually assure your popularity. Others will also be intrigued by your unconventional approach to life.

In romance, that dual nature of yours may cause considerable problems. You do not feel the need for the comfort of one lasting relationship, yet something within desires warmth and security. Eventually, it will be important that you have someone to share with, for you do have a strong need for companionship, whether you know it or not. Your partner may have difficulty understanding some of your sudden mood changes: sympathetic and kind one moment, cold and aloof the next. Find a lover who can appreciate and tolerate your unique nature.

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Aquarius: The Zealot

In your combination, Cancer's depth and sensitivity is focused on exploring new frontiers. Ideally the combination of the concerned and devoted politician, humanitarian or scientist, it can also produce the eccentric crank and fanatic.

That offbeat and unusual imagination of yours sets you apart from your fellow Cancerians. There is nothing very cautious about you since you are the first to try something new and exotic. Independent in thought and spirit, your deep inner restlessness pushes you on – either to lasting accomplishment or senseless rebellion.

Your intuition and perception are remarkably keen. You've always got a ready answer or opinion, and this may be why others find you somewhat arrogant and presumptuous. You are always one or two steps ahead of everyone else, so you become impatient with those who fail to see things your way, or who cannot grasp the truth you may have just miraculously uncovered. This impatience and intellectual snobbery can be your downfall. Determined to pursue your own unique path toward wisdom, truth, and self-fulfilment, your total indifference to the opinions of others may cause you to lose out on much of what life has to offer. Mental confusion haunts many Cancer-Aquarians. In the classroom, at work or in conversation, your mind tends to drift. Starry-eyed, you dream about some new idea or uncompleted project when you should be paying attention. Your curiosity is endless and finding something engrossing enough to hold your attention for a while is difficult.

As with all Moon in Aquarius natives, you probably feel a strong sense of mission. In youth, you no doubt saw yourself as something of a white knight, righting wrongs and helping others through your virtue and understanding. Reality and the eventual recognition of your own limitations either fostered a more realistic perspective or led to a sense of disillusionment and, perhaps, bitterness. You may have even become something of a cynic. It is possible for a disgruntled Cancer-Aquarian to immerse himself in some fringe group that promises nirvana. Fanaticism or passionate dedication to a cause or ideology may be a tempting last resort for disenchanted natives of this combination.

Fortunately, most Cancer-Aquarians do find their mission in life. With your scientific bent and wild imagination, you may very likely pursue a technical or scientific career, although your strong social consciousness could lead you into political, legal, or humanistic endeavours. You treat those you love as comrades and you expect equality in romance. You are a tolerant, trusting, and generous partner – but let's face it, you're not very easy to live with. Of all the Cancer combinations, yours is best known for irritation, moodiness, and unpredictable temper tantrums. Your patience has a very well-defined threshold, and when you feel you've put up with enough, you let everyone know about it, particularly the one you love.

Sun in Cancer/Moon in Pisces: The Great Pretender

Of all the Cancer combinations, yours is the most sensitive, compassionate and understanding. You are instinctively repelled by unnecessary suffering, cruelty, or injustice. Genuinely concerned and always willing to give of yourself, you have a strong desire to reach out and help others. The highly evolved Cancer-Pisces often has overwhelming spiritual and altruistic urges.

You may be a saint in essence but like all highly sensitive, impressionable and giving individuals, you feel the need to protect yourself, guarding your emotions to avoid being hurt. All Cancers have their special defence mechanisms: Cancer-Scorpio hides behind secrecy; Cancer-Leo hides behind arrogance; and Cancer-Aries uses offence as a defence. But your special defence is role-playing.

A male Cancer-Pisces, fearing that his sensitivity is a form of weakness, may try to assume an aggressive persona, hoping to conceal his feelings with an overt display of toughness or macho. A female Cancer-Pisces may adopt an excessively feminine role, in hopes of being swept of her feet and eternally protected by a knight in shining armour. Both sexes are in danger of assuming roles that are completely at odds with their true natures, so frightened are they of revealing their true selves. Role playing is sometimes necessary in order to get along in life, but constant role playing is a form of self-deception and escape. So strive to be true to yourself and, most of all, recognise your sensitivity as a strength rather than a weakness. Denying part of yourself can cut you off from much happiness. Since your combination indicates health, stability, and luck, it's unnecessary for you to build yourself a protective outer shell. You'll feel far more fulfilled and contented just being who you really are.

You have a colourful and special personality. If you learn to make constructive use of your ability to fantasise, this can be an excellent way of dealing with tension and anxiety. Just don't lose your grip on the real world and you may excel as an artist or in other creative fields. In addition, your combination is ideally suited for teaching, counselling medicine, law, and other service-oriented areas. You have a remarkable memory and you learn with amazing speed.

Since you are basically passive, you should look to others for direction and inspiration. It is important that you associate with highly motivated people, or you yourself may end up in a riskless and unchallenging field.

Emotional compatibility is far more important to you than physical attraction. You are a devoted, loyal, and trusting partner, but a little too easily hurt. If you are betrayed by your lover, you may become severely depressed and temporarily withdraw from all social life. Steer clear of people who are closed and unresponsive, choosing instead a partner who will be sensitive to your needs.

CHAPTER FIVE

LEO

Sun in Leo/Moon in Aries:
The Showman

When you talk, people usually listen. Confident and aggressive, one of your greatest assets in life is courage: courage to take risks and courage to express your thoughts and feelings honestly and without inhibition.

A born leader, you are happiest when you are running the show. Energy and ambition get you the attention your ego demands. And what an ego you have! For many a Leo-Aries, life is seen as war, and competition can be everything. In love, business, politics, or just plain living, it's never fun unless it's a fight. Fortunately, you have an inherent code of honour, loyalty, and trust, so no matter how belligerent you may seem, you would never betray a friend, hurt someone weaker than yourself, or practice treachery or deceit.

Fantasy plays a minor role in your life. After all, you are so active all the time, you have little use for it. Never content to just sit and daydream about adventure or romance, with vigour and enthusiasm you go out and find it! Life is rarely dull for the restless Leo-Aries.

Like most open and uninhibited souls, you probably have very few psychological problems. Basically stable and self-assured, you never repress your feelings or inner drives. Instead, you channel your aggressive impulses into positive and constructive activities. Your career is very important to you, because like all Leos you seek status, recognition, and as much comfort and pleasure as life has to offer. Very little stands in your way, because you have the determination to see your projects through.

Pride, impulsiveness and overconfidence are the three things you must learn to keep under control. Passion very often stands in the way of logic. No matter how smart you may be, you tend to leap before you look. Since you are so sure of yourself and so confident in your intuition and hunches, you seldom stop to analyse those on-the-spot decisions of yours. Since you cannot possibly be right one hundred percent of the time, learn to humble yourself now and then. Heed the good advice of others before embarking on some ill-fated enterprise.

You are a born aristocrat, arrogant in your opinions and assumptions. Blunt and outspoken, you often express yourself tactlessly, overlooking the feelings of others. You don't really mean to be insensitive, but honesty and openness is your code, so you just always say exactly what you feel. Control that self-centred bluntness a bit and learn to respect others in the same way you respect yourself. You are capable of great creative expression and constructive activity, but only when your will works in harmony with the will of those around you.

Romantic and ardent, you try to apply your standards of trust and loyalty to your love life but your passionate and adventurous spirit will betray these principles time and again. Romance only lasts when you have found a partner who shares your fiery temperament and need for constant excitement. Finding such a person is not easy.

When you are in love, try to respect the needs and wishes of your partner a little more. Watch that tendency to be domineering and overprotective. The Leo-Aries woman often has difficulty reconciling her strong aggressive urges with her femininity. You are pretty tough but you are no less feminine simply because you stand up for yourself.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Taurus:
The High and Mighty

Stubborn, wilful, bold and determined, you take yourself and your actions very seriously. Normally, you are self-controlled, calm, and sympathetic: in short, a stronghold of common sense and worldly wisdom. But when you are in a stressful or tense situation or when things just aren't going your way, you are just the opposite: temperamental, moody, unreasonable – even tyrannical.

A heaviness pervades the Leo-Taurus individual. Intense, dramatic, and purposeful, there are only a few things you desire in life, but they can become all-consuming. Sensual and materialistic, you pursue power and status primarily for the comfort and luxury they provide. Like most Leos, you are a bit of an egomaniac. With self-assurance and near total faith in your strengths and intuition, you strive hard to fulfil your dreams and ambitions. And you are very ambitious!

Since both signs of this combination are fixed signs, you have the dogged determination to achieve the heights you feel you deserve. Yet, despite those admirable qualities, you can be your own worst enemy. Overconfidence and rigidity often blind your judgement and cause you to unconsciously undermine your own efforts. You are pragmatic and have a broad and far-reaching vision, but the absolute faith you have in yourself often causes you to reject or ignore the opinions of others. How many times have you stubbornly neglected what others have said, only to discover your mistake later on? You are capable of tremendous creativity, but only after you have learned to cooperate with people. Since you cannot he right all the time, open your mind a bit to advice. Loosen up in your convictions and learn to respect and tolerate other points of view. You may be a born leader, but the best leaders know enough to compromise now and then.

It’s not easy for you to accept defeat. Not getting your way throws you into states of depression, and you become liable to temperamental fits – often taking out your anger on those around you. This is due to that strong ego and extraordinary sense of pride. Nobody, unless they are very lucky, can be continually successful. We all must learn to cope with disappointments now and then. Detach yourself a little more from your activities. Ultimately, happiness and inner peace can come only from within. Next time you feel thwarted or frustrated, don't take it so hard. Instead, look at it from a distance, and learn from the experience rather than brooding over it. Try channelling excess tension and energy into some creative activities. Instead of taking things out on the kids or your co-workers, try athletics, meditation, or even art. You need plenty of diversion to keep from becoming obsessed with one goal or aim.

Sensual and earthy, a good sex life is vital to maintaining your overall happiness and well-being. You are not particularly romantic and you have a cavalier approach to love. Many affairs are likely for a Leo-Taurus. Watch for jealousy and over possessiveness, and be certain to respect your partner's freedom and desires.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Gemini: The Con Artist

You crave attention! Never happy unless all eyes are upon you, your flair for drama, wit, and facility of expression guarantee you the adoration your ego demands. And no one will ever accuse you of lacking an ego! You are outspoken and you express yourself with dramatic flair and gusto. You are well-known for your sarcasm and incisive perceptions, and yours can be the combination of orator, humourist, speechwriter, or playwright. (George Bernard Shaw was a Leo-Gemini.) But it can also be the combination of the con artist.

Leos are lazy, and you are no exception. A master at delegating responsibility, you avoid work or anything that smacks of discipline and concentration as if it were the plague. No matter how determined and industrious you may seem to others, that inner Gemini restlessness and impatience repeatedly causes you to shirk your responsibilities.

It's not easy for you to concentrate your energies on one pursuit. Your greatest joy is constant variety, and your inquisitive mind is always in search of adventure. Stop living so much for the excitement and thrills of the moment and concentrate more on long-term self-fulfilment. If you are patient, you will accomplish much more in the long run.

Ideally, the creative strengths of your Leo personality can find fantastic expression through journalism, writing, film, or drama. But actually, you can excel in almost any area you choose, for your combination endows versatility. You'd be a tremendous salesperson as you can talk circles around most people.

You will probably spend much of your time trying to gain social prominence and acceptance. For some Leo-Geminis, this can become all-consuming. Often, a heavy social schedule is really your way of skirting responsibility; you often avoid the very challenges that could reward you with genuine self-esteem and recognition.

People think of you as sympathetic, kind, and outgoing, but you are really quite detached. All those outbursts of passion and pathos are mostly showmanship, and it's amazing how easily you can break off an attachment or relationship without shedding a tear. Your ability to observe and evaluate others from a distance makes you a highly perceptive critic, though it may cause your friends much disillusionment.

Open and uninhibited in love, you are never afraid to tell your partner how you feel. Romance is of course a revolving door, because of your deep-seated need for variety and excitement. You are most compatible with those who can give you intellectual stimulation as well as physical satisfaction.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Cancer:
The Stout-hearted Man

Self-acceptance is your greatest gift. Unlike most Leos, you do not feel the compulsion to prove your greatness to the world. You are confident and self-assured, and others think highly of you because you think highly of yourself. All this is enhanced by your acute sensitivity and compassion for others. Creative, highly emotional, open-minded, and above all imaginative, with the proper motivation you could achieve anything – if you had any ambition. That, unfortunately, is the one thing you lack.

Because of your unquestioning self-acceptance and lack of inner conflict, you run the risk of settling for far less than you are capable of accomplishing. Since your nature is free of many of the hang-ups and much of the inner turmoil that plague so many others, you risk adopting an attitude of smug complacency. You're too easily contented, and that which is pleasing interests you more than that which is rewarding and fulfilling. Thus your creative potential often lies dormant, and your special talents untapped.

You are also a very proud individual – both a strength and a weakness. Self-respect reinforces your inner strength to overcome obstacles, but it also leads to arrogance and the inability to humble yourself to learn a craft or develop your talents so they may be successfully explored and expressed. Re-examine your goals in life. Are all your talents really being utilised? Are you involved in an activity or job that will lead to a more secure future?

Charm, intuition, and subtlety combine to give you excellent business acumen, but your imagination and originality are more suited to creative endeavours – particularly in the field of drama and the visual media. Many Leo-Cancers are also attracted to religion. And some will find themselves involved in charitable work, spending much time helping the disabled or poor. Leo-Cancers excel as counsellors, psychologists, teachers, and in running charitable enterprises.

A secure and tranquil domestic life is very important to your overall happiness. As with all natives of Moon in Cancer, you need the comfort and stability of a home base of operations. Family-oriented, you take great pride in your spouse and children.

Highly romantic and idealistic, you know how to give-and-take in love. Your natural curiosity will no doubt lead you through many romantic affairs before you finally choose a partner and settle down. Once you do, however, you are loyal and devoted, and your partner knows that you can be counted on.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Leo:
The Peacock

Despite your special brand of charisma, people eventually realise that the only thing that holds your interest is you. Not that you are selfish or self-serving. Your loyalty, compassion and generosity know no limit. It's just that you'll never get over your fascination for that wonderful image in the mirror.

A benevolent egomaniac, you want everyone to conform to your vision and your will. You often mistake friends for vassals, and you consider the world you live in your temporal realm and personal playground. Optimistic, open, and fun-loving, you only get confused, upset, or angry when, for some strange reason, the world fails to appreciate your divine dictatorship.

Nevertheless, people are continually drawn to your vital and magnetic presence. Little do they realise that, once befriended, they have little chance of remaining the same. You are an expert at behaviour modification to your liking. Fortunately, only a few suffer permanent damage, and most end up a lot better off than they were before basking temporarily in your regal glow.

Your actions are often designed to bring attention to yourself. Just look, for example, at the way you dress! Never content to do things halfway, it's all or nothing for the dramatic and flamboyant double Leo. Instinct and intuition rule your actions and decisions and – reason be damned! – your heart always has the final say. If some spur-of-the-moment decision causes you to get burned, you'll simply pick yourself up and pretend it never happened. Courage and a will of steel keep you forever bouncing back anew – determined to get into more trouble.

Despite your flamboyance and casual air, you also have a very serious side to your nature. Leo-Leos are proud and dignified, and want the recognition and status they know they deserve. Although basically warm-hearted and protective, you do have a cold streak, and if you must be ruthless in order to get your way, you will. You'll have to work hard in order to support those extravagant tastes, and if necessary, you will betray your own high principles of honesty and loyalty to fulfil your material desires. In many respects, you feel yourself above the law. After all, an emperor need answer only to himself in the end.

You are attracted to glamour, pomp, and ceremony and anything that hints of drama and showmanship. Shrewd, your penetrating gaze can see through superficiality and deceit, but as you are also an idealist, you sometimes prefer to accept surface impressions, even though you know better. Your rationale for such fraudulent behaviour? As long as it is grand and glamorous, it's good enough!

You have an innate tendency to systematise your beliefs and convictions. Beware of becoming dogmatic and opinionated, and strive to keep your mind open and your opinions flexible at all times.

Independent in all things, including your romantic life, you'll dodge the restriction of one permanent relationship. You favour polygamy! Besides, who could possibly be worthy of your exclusive attention? You're intensely sensual and flirtatious and the status of your love life is the index of your overall happiness. You're likely to have many varied and unusual affairs.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Virgo:
The Moralist

Discriminating, analytical, and fastidious, that outward show of leadership and aggression masks an inner nature that is cautious and somewhat reticent. Rather than gaining the power and prestige you crave through active leadership, you seek influence through mental endeavours. Forsaking the sword, you reach for the pen.

Your combination is somewhat paradoxical: Your Leo Sun wants status, recognition, and authority – but your Virgo Moon requires the stability and security of a less risky role. Inhibition often keeps you from taking on the position of leadership you feel you deserve. In addition, your desire for attention and admiration must also compete with your need to be of service to others. But, for the most part, both sides of your nature work together harmoniously. Although you may not be a dynamic executive or administrator, you still manage to voice your opinions and use your organisational skills to command power from behind the scenes.

If you have one flaw, it is that there are times when you can be highly judgemental, even arrogant, in your opinions and assumptions. Although your observations are usually uncannily accurate, you do tend to be a little too outspoken in expressing them. It's little wonder you so frequently alienate people.

You channel much of your Leo ardour and enthusiasm into work, and living up to the rigorous demands of that Leo ego can make you a workaholic. If you cannot lead them, you will outproduce them. A too exacting perfectionist, you may push yourself too far. Try not to be so hard on yourself, or you will lapse into states of hypercriticism, agitation, and acute anxiety – and you may project your frustrations onto friends and associates Instead, use your rigid moral code to inspire those around you.

Socially, you are outgoing, charming, and congenial, and, although you long to be the life of the party, the centre of attention, Virgo's emotional reserve holds you back. It's difficult to fully let go of those inhibitions, perhaps because of guilt about indulging too heartily or allowing yourself too much pleasure.

Professionally, this combination is ideally suited to journalism and communications, in addition to pursuits that require mental acuteness and detailed analysis. Although you work best in a structured and well-organised framework, it is important that your sense of independence and courage be allowed some freedom of expression.

Romance may be difficult for the Leo-Virgo. Sensual and outgoing Leo struggles with inhibited Virgo. Your sense of honour and ethical puritanism may cause confusion when you encounter changing sexual mores. You search for the ideal partner with whom to share a lifelong relationship, but with such perfectionist standards, choosing the ideal partner (much less finding one) can be a quixotic quest. Once you do become romantically attached, learn to curb your criticisms and cultivate tolerance.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Libra:
The Crowd Pleaser

You are friendly and charming, and people are drawn to your sunny personality and easy-going disposition. You thrive when you are holding centre stage or in a position which requires diplomacy. Your grace and calm manner help to still conflict and dissention.

Like most Leos, you have a romantic and idealistic view of life. Those rose-coloured glasses you wear often prevent you from seeing the world as it really is. When cold reality intervenes you become confused and anxious. Inherently kind, trustworthy, and benevolent, you expect that everyone else is, too, and this impairs your judgement. No doubt you have already discovered that many people do not live up to your expectations. Fortunately, your good nature, charm, and naive innocence usually bring out the best in others and work to your advantage as well.

Leos have strong leadership drives, but it's not easy for the Leo-Libra to be a boss. You hate to infringe on anyone else's territory and you fear hurting anyone's feelings. In addition, you always want to be liked by everyone, so it's hard for you to give orders. Decision making is also difficult, because you never make a move until you've heard everyone's advice. When opinions clash, as they always do, you are baffled. Most often you simply follow your Leo hunch.

Vanity is a very strong factor in your combination, and you often judge yourself by the way others see you, rather than by the way you see yourself. If subject to too much criticism at some point in your life, you can develop a very inhibited and self-conscious attitude. Maintain a strong and healthy self-image by remembering that your opinion is just as valid as anyone else's. And stop paying so much attention to what others may be thinking!

Your natural charm usually assures you many friends. But you may drain them with your constant need for flattery and approval. When you feel unappreciated, you run the risk of lapsing into states of indecision, anxiety, and worst of all, lethargy. Both signs of this combination are comfort and leisure-loving, so you naturally devote much time to relaxation and sensual pleasures. But laziness can become a way of life, especially when you feel you're not getting all the attention and recognition you deserve.

You excel in professions that offer glamour and prestige – film, the arts, advertising, and design are perfect. In addition, you are well suited to all fields involving human relations, and settling conflicts is your specialty.

You are loyal and consistent in love but you still love to flirt with others. This is only to bolster your pride and vanity, for although you may consider yourself a Don Juan or femme fatale, your affection usually belongs to one special person.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Scorpio:
The Opportunist

You're a pretty intense Leo, and it can be risky making fun of you, because you view yourself and the world with utmost seriousness. Purposeful, bold, and aggressive, you usually have a master plan for living, and you follow it carefully. You enjoy the battlefield of life; in fact unless there is competition and plenty of it. You feel somehow cheated.

Although you project a fun-loving image, you are actually highly motivated and ambitious. Secrecy is your trademark, because you probably feel that if you ever did reveal yourself, you'd give your enemies an advantage (even though most of your enemies exist solely in your imagination). Sensual and materialistic, you want all the power, comfort and control you can get out of life. Once you've set your sights on a job, trinket, or lover, nothing can stand in your way. Stubborn and somewhat fearless, you pursue your aims with quiet perseverance, and your magnetism, confidence, and ruthless determination help you to attain them.

Unlike most Leos, you are very perceptive and shrewd to the ways of the world. Management, business and finance draw you, as does anything that smacks of competition. But at some time or another, you have probably also felt strong creative urges. A Scorpio Moon can uplift and sustain the creative drive of the Leo Sun, but since you are so preoccupied with instant gratification (such as when you're going to get that promotion or make that next sexual conquest), you seldom follow through on those artistic impulses. If you would redirect some of those sensual drives and practice a little moderation, you could be the next Picasso. But your creative talents are unlikely to find expression, at least not in this lifetime when there is so much else going on.

Both signs of your combination are fixed signs which give you great willpower, endurance, and a strong sense of purpose but also makes you stubborn and inflexible (especially when it comes to your convictions). Independent to a fault, it is very difficult for you to accept the ideas or suggestions of those around you, and you rarely ever compromise. This rigidity gives you a very low stress threshold. You're unable to hold in feelings of hostility, frustration, or injured pride for very long. When your world gets too tense or demanding, rather than trying to relax and forget about problems, you probably explode, taking out your frustrations on your mate, children, or co-workers. Learn to be more adaptable. Cultivate a little tolerance and respect for those you live and work with.

There are two sides to your nature: You can be compassionate, protective, warm and giving, or, if things get rough, you can be tyrannical, pedantic, and self-righteous. The best way for you to stay cool is to learn to recognise signs of stress early, before you reach the breaking point. Then channel off some of that excess tension in positive activities. You'll find, for example, that taking up a sport can be beneficial to your mental health. You are usually loyal and steadfast toward your friends once they have won your trust, but you do enjoy new faces from time to time. In your romantic life, your lover may have to put up with random orders, and certainly must conform to your standards. Possessive and jealous, you may be smothering the one you love without realising it. Try allowing your partner a little more breathing space and your relationship will last longer.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Sagittarius: The Adventurer

No matter how mature, hard-working and responsible you may be, you are always a child at heart. Open-minded, fun-loving and enthusiastic, you have a taste for adventure and romance that will last a lifetime. Depression is almost unknown to you, because you are always optimistic and so active that you have little time for self-pity or the blues.

Somewhat naive, you never repress your feelings. Honesty and integrity are your codes, and you are well-known for your forthright opinions, candour, and directness. Self-assured and courageous, you have the confidence to put your wonderful ideas into action. In fact, action is the word that describes you best. People know when you are around because of all that moving about. Those rare moments when you are quiet merely signify that you are planning some new activity or project. Never content to just sit back and fantasise about excitement, you go out and find it!

You set high goals for yourself, and like most Leos you want recognition and status. But very often impulsiveness undermines those constructive pursuits. Practically everything under the sun intrigues you. With so many new lands yet to explore, so many new people to meet and so many ideas to ponder, no wonder you can't find the time to finish anything! Controlling your restlessness is a daily challenge for you. In order for you to be truly creative and constructive, you must learn to focus your talents and energies on a narrower range of activities and involvements. Make sure that your job (or whatever you happen to be doing) fulfils your need for excitement and variety, because if boredom or drudgery sets in, you're ready to take flight. However, once you have found something that holds your attention, you will stick to it tenaciously.

Since you are so uninhibited and unrepressed, you are not likely to have many psychological hang-ups. It's almost impossible for you to be dishonest with yourself or with others. Pride is perhaps one of the only barriers to your complete fulfilment. You are a born aristocrat, and your bearing is dignified, at times a bit arrogant and patronising. It's not easy for you to take a subordinate role, and you have little patience when it comes to following someone else's orders. Independent to an extreme, you must be the boss at work and at home. A certain amount of conformity and compliance is necessary in everyone's life, however, so learn to humble yourself now and then. Sooner or later, you are bound to become your own boss anyway, since your charm, dynamism, and luck will lead you to success.

Sometimes your high ideals can cause you trouble. So strongly do you believe in loyalty and honour that, at times, you can be confused to discover that others are less scrupulous. Those closest to you probably tell you that you are too trusting. It's fine to place your trust in others: just be sure you practice discrimination – and don't expect everyone to measure up to your incredibly high standards.

As a friend or lover, you are generous, forgiving, and sympathetic. You place as high a premium upon loyalty in your love life as you do in everything else. A dyed-in-the-wool romantic, you are always in love with love. An adventure-seeker, you are likely to have many intense and passionate (though short-lived) affairs. It's not easy for you to settle down with one person for very long.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Capricorn: The Monarch

The world is your stage – literally. Whatever you set out to do, you do it with flair and a sense of dramatic self-righteousness. Once you set your sights on something – be it a job, a lover, a special prize – you are almost guaranteed to get it. Capable of such tremendous and frightening effort, you do not think you are right, you know it! Despite your natural personal charm, you are a pretty serious and cool individual – powerful and self-sustaining. Napoleon Bonaparte was a Leo-Capricorn.

Unless you were born into royalty, however, this is not an easy combination to live with. Obstinate, proud, and patronising, you can be quite intimidating to other people. At all times, you maintain your aura of dignity and decorum, and your stare alone can frighten off some weaker souls. You take yourself with utmost seriousness, and no one who knows you would dare make fun of you. Like all natives of Moon in Capricorn, you are well aware of your limitations and you don‘t need to be reminded of them, but you are also fully aware of your talents and capabilities.

You have wonderful organisational and leadership qualities. As long as you keep that expansive ego within bounds, there is no end to the wonderful things you can accomplish in life. For all that extravagant flamboyance, you also have a very practical and responsible side. Even clothed in that outrageous outfit you may be wearing, you are capable of assuming tremendous responsibility.

A stern judge, you expect others to be as serious about everything as you are. If you are a powerful executive, it can be pretty difficult working under your watchful, almost tyrannical gaze. If only your subordinates knew that, although you love to command, most of your dynamism is just bravado. Underneath that tough exterior and those exaggerated displays of grandeur is a very sensitive and often insecure individual. What you want more than anything is simply to be adored and appreciated for the wonderful human being you know yourself to be. Your flamboyance is merely an attention-seeking act.

Fortunately, most Leo-Capricorns do get their share of homage. People do love and even worship you. Just learn to tone down your act slightly and temper your arrogance, and you will never have trouble winning the admiration and respect your ego demands. If, due to your own stubborn intolerance, you don’t receive the attention you must have, you may succumb to any variety of neuroses. The maladjusted Leo-Capricorn can give new meaning to the martyr complex. You're not one to keep quiet about your feelings of inadequacy, frustration, or injured pride, and if things don’t go your way, everybody for miles around will know about it. If defeated, you'll hold everyone else responsible – everyone but yourself.

Highly sexed and very sensual, it's vital for you to have someone to love, particularly an individual who admires you and flatters you daily. Finding that person can be quite a task, so it may be some time before you settle down. Though you expect much in return, in love you are loyal, giving and protective toward your partner.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Aquarius: The Benefactor

Calm and somewhat aloof, you have a very gentle, almost innocent manner and disposition. You seem unperturbed by confusion, tension, or the mundane details of life, because your scope of vision is broad, far-reaching and abstract. Few would suspect the ambition, intensity, and the farsighted and imaginative dreams you keep hidden under that casual exterior.

In your combination, the Sun and Moon are at odds, indicating that your early life was probably difficult. The struggle to overcome those hardships in turn fostered a strong sense of independence and self-reliance in you. It also made you look deep within yourself.

Unlike most Leos, you are introspective and the understanding you have gained from looking within prompts you to reach out to assist others. As you're able to recognise your limitations and value your many gifts, your judgement is rarely blinded by egotism or superficial impressions. With your strong idealistic and humanitarian sentiments, you've no doubt felt you have a mission in life. Whatever that mission may be, once you have glimpsed it, you pursue it with quiet and unwavering determination.

Never ostentatious or arrogant, you treat others as equals, and you probably live in a modest, unpretentious way. But there is something which sets you apart from the crowd: Your original approach to life gives you a casual air of indifference, and people are drawn to you, thinking you have “the answer."

Most Leo-Aquarians are born leaders. Imagination and inner strength help you to put some of those dreams and visions of yours into action. You're original and innovative, and your solution to a problem is often the most ingenious. You view things from a very broad and detached perspective, and this may be one reason why you often seem so absentminded and forgetful. Details bog you down, as you are better at dealing with the big picture.

Though you respect reason, you have remarkable intuition and instinct often governs your action. Your likes, dislikes, and major decisions are usually based upon what you feel about the person or situation rather than what you think. There are times when this absolute faith in your sixth sense can be dangerous – both for yourself and others. In a" managerial position, you can be guided by your intuition to a point but you must also pay attention to the facts. Learn to be more adaptable to the pressures and persuasions of others. You can't always be right, so listen to what your colleagues have to say now and then. In order to be truly creative or constructive, it is vital that your will work in harmony with the will of those around you.

The Leo-Aquarian also needs to cultivate patience. If you encounter too much frustration or you begin to feel that your dreams will never see the light of day, you may become moody, erratic, and possibly even tyrannical. Try to be more practical in your future forecasts, putting less of a burden on yourself to meet some imaginary deadline. You'll succeed, and with a lot less wear and tear, if you are willing just to take it step by step.

In romance, though you seem sympathetic and emotional to your partner, you are detached enough to break off the best relationship if it should start to sour. No waiting around for you! Variety is the spice of a Leo-Aquarian life, so many affairs are likely.

Sun in Leo/Moon in Pisces: The Charmer

Your Leo personality is forceful, ambitious, aggressive, and drawn to leadership, but your Piscean inner self is compassionate, sensitive, and self-sacrificing. Forced to choose between the spiritual and the materialistic, most Leo-Pisceans will choose to meet the demands of their egos first.

In spite of your lofty ideals and humanitarian sentiments, you are really quite practical, down-to-earth, and shrewd. In your youth, you were no doubt romantic, optimistic and painfully sensitive; but gradually, after perceiving the world as callous and exacting, your naiveté wore off, and you learned that, if you could adapt, you would prosper. You're still by nature sympathetic and considerate of others, but you’ll work like hell to acquire material comfort and status.

Nobility of spirit and other worldly charm combine to make you a very intriguing Leo indeed. Without boasting, you possess dignity, style, and a magnetic presence that intrigues people. You are usually calm and your method of persuasion is so subtle that few would ever suspect just how aggressive and ambitious you really are. For this reason, you can excel in business dealings, able to charm and soften when that light touch is required.

Though you are shrewd in the business world, your refined and sensitive nature may draw you to the arts. You love drama, imagery, and design. You would also do well in medicine and health-related fields. In all your activities, no matter how determined and hardworking you are, you never compromise your ethical standards because, like all Leos, you treasure honesty, trust, and loyalty. Once you feel completely satisfied with your accomplishments and have sated your need for comfort and luxury, you will direct your Leo ardour to helping others and engaging in charitable works.

Unnecessary guilt is often a problem for Leo-Pisces. You set exacting standards for yourself, and you may not feel altogether comfortable about all those ambitious plans. Sometimes your own power over people may frighten you, and you may fault yourself for making use of it.

That vivid imagination of yours is also a source of tension. Many Leo-Pisceans are plagued by imaginary ills, and paranoia is not uncommon. Remain active socially, because excessive solitude will only reinforce your imaginary fears. Channel your imagination instead into creative and artistic endeavours. Faith can also be a continuing source of strength for the Leo-Piscean, so don't neglect your strong religious leanings.

You understand the give-and-take in love, and in many respects you are the perfect partner. But, as your romanticism is somewhat diffusive, and you are affectionate to many people, it may be difficult for you to focus your attention on just one person. Of course, your lover may not appreciate the generosity you show in bestowing your affections elsewhere, and you may find yourself continually "losing" in love.

CHAPTER SIX
VIRGO

The Clark Kent

In your fantasies, you are dashing, daring, and dynamic, but in real life you're not quite that decisive or adventurous, and it probably came as a shock when you first realised you were not the hero you had always thought you were. You may have the courage and strength to make bold plans, but when the time comes to follow through on your bravado, you suddenly become hesitant and insecure. The question continually in your mind is whether to do and dare, or just sit back and let whatever happens happen.

The conflict in your combination is simple: The reserved, cautious, and timid, Virgo must contend with an Aries inner nature that is fiery, belligerent, and fearless. It wouldn't be easy for anyone to live up to that incredible self-image of yours, much less a mild-mannered and innocent Virgo.

Self-acceptance is one of the first lessons you must learn in life. Yes, you are all those wonderful things you think you are, but you don't have to be an Evel Knievel just to prove it. Nor do you have to get furious with yourself when caution or good common sense prevents you from embarking on impulsive and risky adventures. You can, after all, still find plenty of thrills in a more conventional framework. Big business can be extremely exciting for you, as you are highly perceptive and very shrewd. Although your Virgo nature will always be discriminating and cautious, you are never afraid to risk asserting yourself when your intuition tells you to grasp an advantage or try a daring speculation.

Precision and perfection are your ideals, and honour and loyalty your standards. Not without a sense of humour, you nevertheless tend to take personal matters very seriously. Affronts to your dignity or pride are often met with disproportionate anger – sometimes even revenge. Your judgements of others, though accurate, tend to be severe, and your moods flash hot and cold. Controlling your temper is one of the hardest things for you to learn how to do. Since you cannot hold in your anger, it is usually unleashed immediately – sometimes before you've given yourself the chance to mull things over. Mentally receptive, you often absorb the tension and hostility around you without even realising it. To maintain your cool, take time out for relaxation, recreation, and introspection.

Like all Virgos, you find great satisfaction and fulfilment through hard work. Industrious and reliable, you combine energetic enthusiasm with thoughtfulness and common sense; but your work must challenge you. That restless Aries inner nature rebels against boredom and drudgery. If you start to feel as though you're not getting the excitement you need from your career, you'll go on to something new, even ii it means abandoning a high salary.

In love, Virgo-Aries is passionate and loyal, but often thinks of himself first learn to be less selfish and pay more attention to your partner's needs. Control that temper and don't get carried away by jealous rages that are unfounded.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Taurus:
Old Faithful

Calm, patient, and determined, this perhaps the most well-rounded of all the Virgo combinations. A model of character, resolve, and pragmatism, there is very little you cannot accomplish in life once you make up your mind.

Your nature is responsible, sincere, and reliable, and your values are old-fashioned and firmly rooted. The old way is often the best way for the Virgo-Taurus. People often turn to you because they can sense your worldly wisdom, and the advice you dispense is always reasonable and well thought out.

Sometimes you try to appear stern, tough, and exacting, but it's not very hard to tell you have a soft heart. Unfortunately, you perceive your sensitivity as a weakness and you continually try to hide it behind that callous exterior. Lucky for you, most people see through it.

Dedication, industriousness, and sincerity all combine to make you a person for others to emulate. The only thing you must be careful of is too much ease. Virgo-Taurus is a very harmonious combination, so there are few serious obstacles in your life. Thus, despite all your resourcefulness and built-in work ethic, you run the constant risk of slipping into complacency.

With that conservative nature of yours, you tend to resist any change or innovation. Keep your mind open to changing life-styles and new ideas. There is always something to be gained from new experience, so learn to take a few risks. In your social life, try to broaden your friendships. You tend to play it safe here, too, narrowing your associations to people who are very much like yourself. You might open yourself up a bit to new acquaintances now and then. Travel is often an excellent tonic for the cautious Virgo-Taurus.

Professionally, your combination is ideally suited for business and financial endeavours. Long-term projects that require patience and pragmatism are just your cup of tea. You are also an outstanding organiser, and you can excel at administration and management – especially money management.

In love, you are consistent and reliable, and you will search for these qualities in a partner. The comfort and stability of home life is extremely important to the Virgo-Taurus, and once married, you will probably stay married.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Gemini: The Genius

Reserved and detailed, you're a pretty cool cookie. People don't realise just how sensitive you really are, and it isn't easy to arouse your deepest feelings or stir the passion you so expertly conceal behind that aloof and intellectual facade.

Both signs of your combination are ruled by Mercury, and if you are familiar with mythology, you'll know that Mercury governs communication and the intellect. So you've got a brilliant mind and an ongoing need to express your latest, often ingenious, ideas. But too often you use that brainpower to rationalise away your problems and feelings. Sensitive and impressionable, you try your best to keep your emotions to a minimum in order to avoid getting hurt. But divorcing yourself from your emotions can only lead to dissatisfaction and anxiety. Be more open with yourself. You may be positively brilliant, but don't let that intellect of yours determine your every move. Throw care and caution to the wind once in a while, and let passion and feeling have their way with you.

Very little slips past that keen, analytic eye of yours. Striving for perfection in your life and work, you set exacting standards for yourself, and you may be working yourself to death trying to keep up with them in the classroom, you are the one sitting at the front desk, taking copious notes and asking the most pertinent questions. In your professional life, you are forever punctual and exact in carrying out your obligations and responsibilities. Dedicated and sincere, you try to perform to the utmost of your capabilities, but sometimes you push yourself a little too far. Nervous tension and anxiety often plague the Virgo-Gemini. Try to relax now and then, and don't set such impossible standards for yourself.

With your remarkable perception, it's unfortunate that you usually see fault before you see virtue. And that need to express your ideas and impressions makes you quite blunt in pointing out the faults of others. Virgo-Geminis can become hypercritical when confronted with those who do not meet their exacting standards. You've simply got to learn tolerance, and become less of a pessimist. Others will appreciate your criticism if it is constructively presented, for your insights into human nature can be amazingly on target.

Frankly, you are not very romantic. But you do have a strong need for companionship and for someone with whom you can share your ideas. Usually attracted to those who can give you intellectual stimulation as well as physical love, you must learn to be less picky in choosing a partner. As in all things you seek perfection from your lover; no sooner have you found Mr. or Ms. Right than you begin to uncover those little imperfections.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Cancer: The Wallflower

If the meek shall inherit the earth, you will surely be included in the will. Fortunately, you are too impatient to wait for that prophecy to materialise and too practical to let it console you. Yours is perhaps the most gentle and sympathetic of all the Virgo combinations, and like all highly sensitive and giving individuals, you have many talents and abilities that can find practical expression. But timidity, self-consciousness, and inhibition are the first and most debilitating obstacles you encounter on the road to self-fulfilment.

You are easily hurt and disturbed by the slightest tension in your surroundings, and you run the constant danger of withdrawing into fantasy and isolation. This is especially true if you were brought up in a harsh or unsympathetic environment, where you may have developed phobias, neuroses, or imaginary fears that can be difficult if not impossible to shake off in later life. Constantly guarding your delicate feelings, you can build formidable walls of defence to protect yourself from a world you perceive as callous and exacting.

Of course, the world isn't as bad as you make it out to be. If you stop to think about it, most of your fears and insecurities exist solely in your imagination or are holdovers from childhood. With that gentle, giving nature of yours, it's not always easy for you to understand (much less tolerate) disharmony. Instead of running away from risks and challenges, learn to assert yourself and be less afraid of the unknown. Try to understand the source of your fears and eventually you should find it easy to rid yourself of them. Re-examine your close relationships and decide whether or not they are allowing you to grow. Since you are so impressionable, you depend heavily upon the attitudes and moods of those around you; it is therefore important that you associate with those who lighten up your world, making it seem less threatening.

Once you learn to be more self-assertive, many avenues of expression will be open to you. Virgo-Cancers have strong altruistic urges and can excel in medicine, the clergy, and other service fields. The business world is also open to you, as you can be very shrewd and an excellent organiser.

In your love life, don't let yourself get swept away by a domineering partner who strips you of your identity. You are generous and giving by nature, so be careful that you do not become over-accommodating to the needs of your lover – at the expense of your own needs.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Leo:
The Babe in the Woods

Virgos are kind, ethical, and humanitarian. Those with a Leo Moon are honourable, trustworthy, and romantic. Combine the two and you get a babe in the wilderness. Mother never had to tell you to be a good girl or boy – you were a model child – charming, innocent, and always ready to help with the dishes.

Trusting, good-natured, open, and warm-hearted, you live by a code that modern society is leaving behind. Honest to a fault, you are bewildered when you encounter others who don't possess your integrity. Your conduct may get you into heaven, but it sure won't help you get ahead in the wicked, wicked world.

With zealousness and determination, you set out in life to prove your merit and worth: You are the one who always works overtime without asking for compensation. You are the one who proves his or her loyalty by taking on the most demanding and often least desirable tasks, while living up to your moral code and never infringing on anyone else’s territory. Though dignified, you are truly humble and will seldom take full credit for all the wonderful things you accomplish. Innocent to the political realities of life, you watch dumbfounded as others more cunning than yourself pass you by and win all the honours. Try to cultivate a little worldly wisdom. Stand up for yourself and demand the recognition you have earned. Most important, be a little less naive in your dealings with people – or you will be taken every time.

You are much more impulsive and fun-loving than your fellow Virgos. Though always willing to listen to what others have to say, your hunches are accurate and they usually guide you along nicely. You have a strong independent streak, and that Leo Moon gives you a powerful urge to create. Although you will probably be drawn to a conventional and well-organised working and living environment make sure that your talents are not stifled in a routine job.

People are attracted to your innocence and charm. Even-tempered, considerate and forgiving, you treat others with respect and tolerance – but watch that tendency to moralise! Your sense of justice verges on self-righteousness and, if frustrated by the treatment you have received in life, you may become bitter, pedantic, and eventually tiresome to be around. Your many wonderful qualities make you an example for others to follow, so there is really no need for you to proselytise.

As naive in love as you are in other areas of your life, you are probably confused by rapidly changing sexual mores, and you can be easily hurt if you discover that your lover has not been faithful. You prefer giving to receiving, so make sure that you give to one who is fully appreciative and deserving.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Virgo:
The Critic

There are many different kinds of double Virgos, ranging from the mousy librarian to the brilliant analyst and administrator. But all of you have two things in common: You are extremely perceptive and a lot tougher than you look.

No matter how shy, reserved, and gentle you may seem people can sense that inner core of purpose and resolve. Methodical, resilient and energetic, there is little you cannot accomplish once you've set your mind to it. And what a mind you have! Your powers of concentration and analysis are unmatched. Occasionally, you let down that humble guise and present an argument or express a viewpoint with such logic, clarity, and precision that few would dare challenge you. Your perception and insight into people is frighteningly accurate, and double Virgos frequently unnerve people with their penetrating gazes. There's very little that escapes your attention.

Like most Virgos, you tend to see fault and imperfection first; but you level this criticism most severely at yourself. Don't let self-criticism become an impediment to emotional growth. It's nearly impossible to live up to the high standards you set for yourself. Learn to appreciate your strengths, talents, and virtues, rather than getting depressed about your imperfections. Instead of constantly placing yourself under the microscope, try a little self-love now and then.

Essentially kind, sympathetic and considerate, you have great difficulty understanding treachery and deceit. But even with the soul and naiveté of a lamb, your courage and persistence help you to survive and prosper amongst the wolves. "Mind over matter" is your motto in life, and you feel that anything can be brought under control if the intellect is applied.

Professionally, you excel in all fields that require detailed analysis, precision, and accuracy, Additionally, you have a strong intellectual bent, and many double Virgos excel as scholars, teachers, writers, and journalists. Your need to help and assist others may draw you into social service areas such as medicine, and theology, and politics. Like all Virgos, you find self-fulfilment and satisfaction through work, and it is vital that your career utilise your unique talents. Outstanding natives of your combination include Leo Tolstoy and Lyndon Johnson.

Both signs in your combination are mutable signs, and this makes you very adaptable and always open to advice and reason. Sometimes, however, you may be too malleable, easily swayed by those in your immediate world. The pressure to conform or compromise can become quite intense. Rely on your own mind and intuition, and by all means, make your own decisions.

In romance, you search for a stable, consistent, and sympathetic mate. You have quite a few inhibitions to overcome in life, so be certain your partner is able to give you all the emotional encouragement and reinforcement you need. Because you derive great pleasure from bestowing affection, be sure that it is reciprocated.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Libra:
The Tranquiliser

Peace-loving, gentle, and refined, your calm manner and easy-going disposition are admired by all. You have a very special way with people, and through charm, tact, and subtle persuasion, you can bring just about anyone over to your side. That genial good nature and even temper of yours make you a born diplomat.

But self-consciousness often stands in your way. Not the pushy type, it's difficult for you to understand the aggressive behaviour of others. Like all natives of Moon in Libra, you are susceptible to others' moods, so if your working or living surroundings are less than tranquil, you may withdraw into yourself, or escape into fantasies and daydreams for serenity and peace of mind. Probably, when you were a child, you had a private hideaway where you would seek solitude. But, as an adult, you've got to learn to face up to the harshness of reality. You just can't run away all the time.

You should, of course, have the tranquillity you desire from time to time. It might be wise for you to practice yoga or other forms of meditation. Take country walks and find peace in natural surroundings. Simplify your environment as much as possible so that you are able to build your own happiness – in spite of the world you live in.

People may not sense your fears and may simply think of you as shy. But shyness is often an excuse for not facing up to the challenges and opportunities life has to offer. Stop denying yourself and your talents, and use the power of your will to change and reshape your destiny. Become less reliant on those around you, and force yourself to do things on your own. You may be surprised at all the hidden talent you possess.

You are analytical and highly perceptive, with an insight and understanding into others which is highly accurate and at times profound. Your gifts of wisdom and insight can guide and assist others in the courtroom or clinic, or in such fields as social work, counselling, and administration. Romantic and sensual, you have a heightened aesthetic sense, and when choosing a partner, you place a premium on physical attraction. Try placing an equal amount of emphasis on compatibility. Your love relationships can easily become unbalanced – you doing all the giving and your mate doing all the taking. Make sure that your partner shares your sensitivity and can give you the emotional support and encouragement you need.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Scorpio:
The Sly Fox

You are a very intense Virgo! Your reserved intellectual bearing masks an inner nature that is secretive, sensual and deeply passionate. No matter how cool and analytical you try to be most of your moves are based upon your gut reactions and intuition. Reason and logic may guide you, but bias and inner passion usually have the final word in your affairs.

You know what you want out of life and you go after it with determination and plenty of hard work. Seemingly gentle and soft-spoken, you're basically a pretty tough customer and you always know you own mind. But you pay a price for all that persistence and certainty: You are forced to keep your emotions under wraps most of the time.

Your perception is acute and often astonishingly accurate. You judge others by the way you feel about them intuitively, and that intuition of yours is uncanny! But while you are busily sizing up your friends and colleagues, you prefer keeping your own inner self a secret. Whether you are upset or elated, very few actually know about it, as your image almost always remains calm, detached and unswerving.

You are so good at sustaining that cool exterior that few people appreciate your true sensitivity and depth. Try to be more open with your feelings and to express yourself with greater enthusiasm. You can rationalise yourself and your true emotions right out of existence, so stop being so coolly rational about everything, and try letting passion carry you away now and then.

Like most Virgos, you find fulfilment through your work. Often, in fact, it becomes everything to you, replacing relationships and leisure activity. To avoid turning into a workaholic, be sure you have some outside interests that have nothing to do with what you do nine-to-five.

Professionally drawn to the orthodox and conventional, you probably harbour revolutionary ideas and secretly want to implement change. You therefore bring innovation and originality to your work, no matter what field you are in. Virgo-Scorpios are ideally suited to medicine, social service, laws and politics. They also excel in business.

In romance, you are prone to jealousy and possessiveness. Behaving as if you own your partner can lead to endless conflicts. With all that perception of yours, you still tend to point out your lover’s weaknesses rather tactlessly and thus you may be unintentionally cruel. On the positive side, when you are truly in love, you can be extremely sensual and giving.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Sagittarius:
The Cockeyed Optimist

Your Virgo Sun makes you cautious, patient, reserved, and methodical. Your Sagittarius Moon makes you freedom-loving and rebellious, given to impulse and adventure. As you can see, the signs of your combination are very different, which makes you an interesting and complex individual – and a bit mixed-up.

When setting your goals and defining your beliefs and life-style, you are never sure which side of your dual personality should have its way. Should you follow your inner voice's command and be the jovial (though guilt-ridden) adventurer? Or should you allow your Virgo nature to dominate, setting you up as the responsible and dedicated (though frustrated) conformist? Most Virgo-Sagittarians strike a balance by working within a structured and conventional framework, while retaining a daring, impetuous spirit.

You have high standards and a strong independent streak. You feel you should be your own boss, and you're probably right. Many Virgo-Sagittarians excel as independent entrepreneurs. But whatever your choice of profession, your work habits are always a collection of Virgo's pragmatism and organisation, combined with Sagittarius enthusiasm and courage.

Sometimes, impulsiveness undermines your best efforts. Though you appear to be fairly complacent most of the time, there are occasions when you want to test your luck, play a hunch, or follow some romantic or adventurous whim. This longing will overtake you if you feel you are somehow confined or restrained by a job, marriage, or life-style. You get restless at the first hint of drudgery or boredom. Learn to control that erratic nature of yours by making sure your activities (particularly professional) offer the excitement and diversity you require. It is also important that you have many outside interests and a full social life. Don't let your devotion to your job make you feel penned in or one day you'll surprise even yourself by some impulsive move toward "freedom."

You have a razor-sharp wit and a strong need to express your views and opinions, but there is also a tendency to be too outspoken and even blunt with some of those offhand comments. As a result, you may at times alienate those closest to you. Try to consider others' feelings before you speak. There are times when it is best to keep your observations, brilliant though they may be, to yourself.

Your charming, persuasive manner draws people to you and helps assure your success in life. Subtlety, shrewdness and intuition all enhance your flair for salesmanship and business elan but you are also drawn to more philosophical endeavours. Both signs of your combination are mental signs, giving you a strong intellectual curiosity and it is important that you satisfy it. Many Virgo-Sagittarians are drawn to scholarship, teaching, writing and journalism.

In romance, you are loyal and generous, but there are times when you cannot adhere to your high principles – especially when that Sagittarian quest for adventure gains the upper hand. You like variety and plenty of spice in your love relationships, so in planning to settle down with someone, make sure he or she can sustain the excitement you so crave.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Capricorn: The Self-made Man

Yours is one of the toughest of all Virgo combinations to live with, yet it is also the most conducive to worldly success and status. Your powers of administration and concentration are matched by your perseverance, responsibility, and devotion to duty. Virgo's accuracy, precision, and organisation are focused upon the single-minded pursuit of influence and success. From childhood, you know just what you want, and you pursue it methodically and with complete confidence.

Your powerful mind and inner strength help you overcome any handicaps or obstacles you may encounter, making you a model of independence and self-reliance. You abhor self-pity and defeatism, and have little patience for those who indulge in it. Practical and down-to-earth, you believe your destiny rests squarely in your own hands. The world to you is a Darwinian struggle for survival, in which you are better prepared than most to survive and triumph.

Though far more extroverted than your fellow Virgos, in social settings you can still appear as shy and harmless as a lamb. Tough and fiercely competitive at home or at work, elsewhere you are considerate, reserved and quite sensitive, because the ruthlessness so often apparent in Moon in Capricorn natives is softened when combined with Virgo.

In your pursuit of power and status, you will usually stop short of committing injustice or engaging in ruthless or unethical schemes – but your idea of justice may be another man's idea of tyranny! You have little sympathy or tolerance for anyone who fails to measure up to your nearly impossible expectations. You must learn to be less judgemental. Cultivate a little more tolerance for human weakness. Remember, not everyone is blessed with your strength and talent.

The logic and organisation of your mind is awesomely forceful and penetrating. A keen observer, you never miss a detail and can present an argument with such clarity and reason that few could disagree with you. If challenged, however, you can drop your normal soft-spokenness and become dramatically enraged. You may consider yourself cool, but your patience has a well-defined limit. Controlling temper is a genuine challenge for the Virgo-Capricorn.

You are drawn to executive and administrative careers where you can attain the power and status you desire, as well as professions which require extensive training such as law, engineering, and medicine. A female Virgo-Capricorn may have some difficulty reconciling her need to be feminine with her strong ambition and self-confidence.

It is entirely possible that you'll acquire everything you wish in your lifetime – but you may find yourself quite alone at the top. Perhaps you feel a sense of loneliness, but you accept this as a natural consequence of your innate superiority. You may not wish to believe it, but you do need other people. If you can't see this early on in life, you'll probably have to learn it the hard way, when you're older.

You have a very strong sex drive, but you're too much of a workaholic to devote much time to lovemaking. Even when you are involved with someone, you tend to stay late at the office more often than not. When choosing a mate, you'll place a high premium upon intellect, and you'll probably marry your best friend – perhaps even your closest colleague.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Aquarius: The Scientist

You may look in some respects like a mild-mannered Virgo, but that faraway look in your eyes sets you apart from other natives of your sign, and hints of mischief and rebellion. No matter how reserved and cautious you may seem to some, those quick gestures and movements betray your need for variety and your passion for adventure and excitement.

When staid, analytical, and prudent Virgo is blessed with a humanitarian and visionary Aquarian Moon, interests and activities are geared to the scientific and the abstract, people and social causes, the unexplored and the unknown. Imaginative and inquisitive, your dreams and ambitions are far-reaching and far-out. Like most Virgos you may live and work in a conventional setting, but mentally and spiritually you are a rebel and an innovator.

Objective and extremely perceptive, you like to observe others from a distance. People fascinate you, and your insights into human behaviour are astonishingly accurate. Though you treat everyone with consideration and respect, there are times when those around you feel more like specimens under a microscope than true friends or associates, because you are so emotionally detached. Deep affection is usually reserved for ideals, social causes, or scientific projects. Your love embraces all of humanity, so why waste it on just a few individuals?

Like all Virgos, work is very important to you, but you must be given plenty of freedom and independence on the job in order to remain happy and involved. Fascination is the key to your combination, so whatever your principal activities, they must be able to kindle your curiosity and hold your enthusiasm. If boredom or drudgery sets in, you immediately become agitated and confused.

This is a combination of the specialist. Even though your interests and dreams cover a broad and imaginative range, you are most concerned with mastering one thing. Once you have found the field that interests you most, there is no end to your dedication. Your combination is ideal for scientific achievement, as you have the analytical strengths and precision of the Virgo, as well as the originality and pioneering spirit of the Aquarian. In addition to technological fields, you can excel in psychology, teaching, social activism, and exploring unusual areas such as astrology and the occult. You probably feel strong charitable and humanitarian impulses, and your ability to detach yourself is ideal for altruistic pursuits such as nursing, medicine, and the clergy.

For psychological health and well-being, it is vital for the Virgo-Aquarius to remain physically active. Otherwise, you may be subject to nervous disorders. Allow plenty of time for relaxation, because you have a low stress threshold, and when you have suffered too much anxiety, you are prone to unpredictability and mood swings.

You're imaginative and experimental in your love life, but you're just not very romantic. Also, it's not easy for you to find someone who's exciting enough to hold your attention exclusively. You will probably make your friends your lovers, for platonic compatibility is as important to you as physical attraction. You'll treat your various lovers as friends first and foremost, and expect their friendship in return.

Sun in Virgo/Moon in Pisces: The Good Samaritan

People find it hard to resist your gentle and refined manner. Reserved, soft-spoken, and highly sensitive, you have an inner serenity that others would love to possess. You learn from experience, and experience has probably taught you that kindness, compassion, and sincerity succeed where toughness and aggression fall short. Sympathetic and honest, you relate to people openly, and they usually reciprocate with the same trust and affection.

Your sensitivity makes you almost painfully aware of the malice and injustice in the world around you, but as you are not an aggressive sort, you realise there is little you can do to effect any change. Instead, you adapt to the rigors and demands of life, and you try your best to maintain your high principles.

You are a master of subtle persuasion. Understanding the necessity of security, you use your powers of tact and diplomacy to acquire the material comforts you enjoy so much. Like most Virgos, you find fulfilment through your work, and in your professional life you are dedicated and sincere. However, as your combination is basically passive, you run the risk of settling for less than you are capable of accomplishing. You have an intense imagination and many intellectual and creative talents that can find practical expression. Don't let your talent lie dormant. Learn to dare, to take a few risks now and then. You need to feel satisfied in your career, or you may succumb to severe depression and anxiety. And the root cause is always some fear or other that has no basis in reality.

Your surroundings have a lot to do with your emotional well-being. You tend to subconsciously absorb the moods of those around you. In order to maintain your equilibrium, take great pains to provide yourself with domestic and work conditions that are as free of conflict as possible. You have a tranquil and delicate nature, and you just can’t stand to be around hostile people or situations. It is very important for you to withdraw for contemplation regularly to maintain your peace of mind and perspective. Meditation, study and quiet forms of relaxation and recreation are ideal for you. You have a highly spiritual nature, and for many Virgo-Pisceans, faith is a genuine source of self-renewal.

Your imagination and aesthetic sense may lead you to an artistic career. You can also excel in service-related fields such as medicine, law, and social work.

Take care that you are not the one doing all the giving in a romantic relationship; you tend to be too "nice" compromising your own needs to the needs and desires of your loved one. Steer clear of the selfish lover; instead, choose someone who is able to provide you with the emotional support and encouragement you deserve.

CHAPTER SEVEN

LIBRA

Sun in Libra/Moon in Aries: The Rabble Rouser

People know when you are around because of all that excitement and busy moving about. You may seem the gentle, peaceful, and easy going Libran, but deep within burns the fiery spirit of an Aries.

Like all Librans, you search for peace of mind and emotional balance, but you find it difficult just sitting still – much less finding time for quiet contemplation or relaxation. You're restless and independent and that continual craving for novelty upsets your Libran scales and causes much tension. Boredom is one of your constant enemies. This is why you love playing the devil's advocate: You'll take the opposite side in any discussion, and if the conversation gets a little slow, you are sure to come up with some sort of shocking and controversial statement – just to spice things up. Mischief is your middle name!

Self-discipline can help you counteract some of that restless anxiety. It's important that you find a goal or an interest on which to focus your enthusiasm. Instead of squandering your energies and talents in a thousand directions, try narrowing down your activities and concentrating on one thing at a time.

One of the dangers you face is excessive reliance on fantasy. The world never seems lively enough, so you may build dream worlds filled with romance and adventure. Fantasy is healthy, but indulging in it to an extreme can be very dangerous. The Libra-Aries must stay socially active and enjoy as much diversion as possible to combat that tendency to withdraw into dreamland.

The two signs of your combination are so opposite in nature that you may find yourself subject to continual mood changes. Like all Librans, you believe in diplomacy and goodwill, but your Aries inner nature is rebellious and just plain troublesome. Thus, you tend to alternate between aggressiveness and timidity, elation and depression, optimism and despair. You should try to avoid overly tense situations that set off these mood shifts. You may inwardly thrive on excitement and tension but it's very important that you give your Libran nature equal time by taking time out for contemplation and meditation.

Watch out also for morbid self-pity. If you keep your mind fixed on future goals rather than dwelling upon transitory upsets or frustrations of the moment, you'll be a lot better off. All Libra-Ariens must contend with inner tension but that same bubbling energy, used correctly, can also push you to great heights.

You are very romantic by nature, but also a little self-centred. In love, you want nothing more than to be understood and appreciated as a unique and independent individual. However, your need for this attention can blind you to your partner's needs. Learn to reach out and offer your mate the very things you seek.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Taurus: The Hedonist

Venus, the planet of romance, peace and harmony, rules both signs of your combination, giving you an enchanting personality and a remarkably even disposition. Charm, diplomacy and kindness work to your advantage in life.

Your personality combines the justice and moderation of Libra with the worldly wisdom and common sense of Taurus. Nothing upsets you more than the thought of hurting someone else.

On the surface, you may seem as restless and highly strung as your fellow Librans, but you always retain an underlying quality of purpose and stability. Your approach to the world is always even, benevolent, and forgiving. You're always willing to give the benefit of the doubt – and when there's serious trouble, or a dire emergency, your calm and self-assured presence can head off a crisis.

Very sensual and materialistic, you love luxury and comfort – but you need to be careful that pleasure does not become an end in itself. You have many gifts to offer the world but you always run the risk of lapsing into lethargy and for overindulgence. As with all Moon in Taurus people, you are capable of assuming great responsibility, and you possess the determination and inner resolve to push yourself to the top of the ladder. But you may be tempted to remain in a pleasing, comfortable and tension-free environment, instead of one that is high-paced. Thus you may pass up many challenging opportunities, settling for instant gratification in a career (or a convenient marriage) that offers security and little risk.

Like all those who are Venus-ruled, you have a visual mind and a beautiful imagination. Art, music, and design are fields that you can easily excel in. You also have an instinctive feel for money and money management, so business is another avenue open to the Libra-Taurus. Your diplomatic flair would help you in social work and human relations.

With your rustic spirit, you must get out into the country now and then – especially when pressures begin to mount. Or you may escape temporarily into your vivid imagination: just make certain you don't forget to come back to reality.

Heartbreak is quite common to the Libra-Taurus. Not as objective as your fellow Librans, sentimentality and emotion often carry you away and distort your otherwise sound judgement. Detach yourself now and then. Try to put yourself in an objective position. A thorough romantic, you tend to idealise your partner, ignoring any flaws he or she might have. If you learn to take off those rose-coloured glasses and look at your mate more realistically, you could be saving yourself a lot of grief and disappointment.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Gemini: The Intellectual

The social awareness and intellectual strengths of Libra are heightened when combined with a Gemini Moon. Curiosity and inner restlessness spur you on to explore the world to search for answers and hidden meaning. Detached and objective, you are a real intellectual and it's difficult for you to understand those who are content with surface impressions or who choose to dwell upon the superficial aspects of life.

Eloquence is one of your greatest gifts. You can convince anyone of just about anything, because people sense your inherent honesty and respond positively to your graceful, easy-going manner. Even though you often alienate others with your incisive wit, most people appreciate your candour and realise your intentions are always the best.

Boredom and indifference are the two things you must always struggle against. Enthusiastic and highly strung, you have a love for excitement and variety. Half the time you're busy getting yourself into trouble and the other half you are busy trying to get yourself out of it! As you tend to view life from such a detached perspective, you may easily fall into the trap of believing that the world offers no solace or hope. Then, instead of putting your faith in the here and now, you may search out otherworldly experiences through mysticism and the occult, or through your bizarre imagination. A pagan and a rebel at heart, no matter how hard you try to conform and adapt to the world you live in, you'll never get over the feeling that you really belong in some other time and place. Disenchantment with reality can lead to a variety of negative solutions: You may choose to play roles that suit the moment – and you are a superb actor! Or you might withdraw altogether. Your challenge is to simply be yourself.

Strive to accept yourself and your uniqueness. Stay socially active, for only by learning from others can you begin to accept who you really are. One thing you have going for you is your sense of humour – you are able to laugh at yourself and at the human condition. So no matter how sad or alienated you may become, your underlying light-heartedness and appreciation of life's irony should see you through.

Aside from purely intellectual or artistic pursuits, you have excellent diplomatic skills. As tension or discord disrupts your balance, you will always rush to mediate any difficulty in your vicinity. This skill in arbitration can be applied in law, politics, or social service.

One of your major problems is finding an interest or pursuit which can hold your attention. People are always saying, "What's he up to now?" when they refer to the Libra-Gemini. You are not the easiest person to figure out, simply because you are continually changing – your mind and your life-style. But your basic convictions always remain the same. You know where you're headed, even if nobody else does.

In love, you are an idealist – naive and romantic. No matter how cool and detached you seem, your heart breaks easily (and too often). As a lover you are always kind, affectionate, and giving, and it's important that you choose a partner whose spirit matches your own. Many romantic affairs are likely for the Libra-Gemini, and it takes a while before you finally settle down. Some Libra-Geminis just never do.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Cancer:
The Diplomat

The emotional depth, imagination and sympathy of a Cancer Moon heightens Libra's sensitivity and aesthetic appreciation. Charm and adaptability are your two greatest strengths. You are a gentle, peace-loving soul and you have no doubt learned that kindness, diplomacy, and tact can work where aggression and toughness fail.

Shrewd and highly perceptive, you know how to adapt to the demands and rigors of life, and your ability to subtly understand people enables you to go far. People respond to your quiet charm and envy your peace of mind and aura of serenity. Light-hearted and optimistic, your sly and subtle humour can bring joy to those around you. And because you have no doubt suffered your share of setbacks and disillusionments, experience has taught you a great deal about people and the world around you.

Both signs of your combination are cardinal signs, which means you are an active, ambitious, and socially involved individual. People are your specialty. A master tactician and diplomat, you are able to play any role imaginable, knowing intuitively what people want and expect. But role playing can be dangerous: You may wake up one morning uncertain of who you really are. All Libra-Cancers must beware of over accommodating. Sure, you only feel happy when everyone around you seems happy as well but you mustn't sacrifice your sense of self for the sake of others.

Like all sensitive and emotionally vulnerable individuals, you feel it's important to guard your feelings. There is some danger that in the process of self-protection, you may lose your identity altogether. Don't put up such thick walls that your self-image suffers. Instead of protecting, try fortifying instead. You'll probably discover you're a whole lot tougher than you realised. Just be yourself, and stop worrying so much about what other people are thinking! Learn to appreciate and love yourself for who you are. Once your insecurity is overcome, there is almost nothing you can't achieve.

You have a powerful imagination and a wonderful aesthetic sense. Design, imagery, art, and music are all fields in which you can succeed. Your keen understanding of people and social insight can be applied creatively in human relations, humanitarian work, and diplomacy (Eleanor Roosevelt was a Libra-Cancer). Business is another excellent avenue for you to explore, but, as for all Librans, it's always best for you to work in partnership, even if you're tempted to go it alone.

You have a thirst for knowledge and are no doubt an avid reader. Nothing satisfies your active imagination more than a good book. But try to stay socially active: If you spend too much time alone, your imagination will breed all sorts of phobias and neuroses.

For the romantic Libra-Cancer, life without love really isn't worth living. You must have someone equally sensitive with whom to share your dreams. In love, you are imaginative, giving and sensual, but you also need plenty of freedom to be yourself.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Leo:
The Personality Kid

Personality is your greatest asset. People are drawn to your magnetic charm and may envy your even disposition. You can lighten the darkest heart with your buoyant spirits and optimistic outlook. Idealist is the word that describes you best. Believing in the innate goodness and dignity of others, you treat them with respect, kindness, and trust – and most people, sensing your integrity, reciprocate with the same goodwill.

A Leo Moon gives you strong leadership ability. Whatever you are involved with, you make certain you are in the centre of things. You have a strong sense of purpose and perhaps you even feel you have a mission in life. Mahatma Gandhi is a good example of a highly evolved Libra-Leo, whose Libran skills in diplomacy were enhanced by Leo's inner confidence and lofty ideals.

Your social life is very important to you. Craving admiration and attention, you always want to be centre stage. Vanity can easily be a weakness for many Libra-Leos, since there is always the danger that they will become preoccupied with the image they present to others. For some Libra-Leos, the pursuit of popularity can become all-consuming. You must keep in mind that all those social involvements may simply be your own method of avoiding reality. Concentrate on self-fulfilment by putting some of your ideals into practice, and beware of wasting your energies trying to gain applause and admiration.

Your wonderful visions are not always shared by those around you. Frustration often results when you find there are some who just don't have your integrity. Most Libra-Leos learn from experience, however. In youth, you may stick stubbornly to your lofty ideals, launching one crusade after another, but as time passes your Libran ability to compromise saves you from total disenchantment and paves the way to true wisdom.

Intuition is far more important to you than reason. Your hunches often prove accurate, so you tend to act impulsively. Surprisingly, your rashness often brings rewards. Luck is a strong factor in your life – and you have plenty of it!

Active just about all the time, you never feel content to rest on your laurels. One of the things you must learn, however, is to focus your enthusiasm. Like most Librans, you like to be involved in many activities at once, and you may scatter your energies, making it difficult for you to select a career. You do have a strong and noble sense of mission, but it may be ill-defined. Your challenge is to choose one area where you can apply your talents wholeheartedly.

A romantic throughout, you are in love with love and you need plenty of it to keep your spirits high. But as in all things, you tend to idealise your partner, then suffer disappointment when the bubble bursts. Try developing a more realistic attitude, if you can. For as a partner you are loyal, devoted, and generous in your affections.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Virgo: The Social Worker

In this combination, the aesthetic sensitivity and social awareness of Libra is joined with the analytical prowess and critical faculties of Virgo, making you a very perceptive and intellectual individual. You are quiet, reserved, and a little aloof – until someone asks you a question or requests your opinion. Then you can be expected to respond with a lengthy speech. Basically an observer, you like to analyse and reason things out, and your observations are almost always on target. Miguel Cervantes and William Faulkner were both Libra-Virgos, and their work attests to the remarkable insight of this Sun-Moon combination.

You have a strong need to express yourself and air your opinions. You want desperately to be popular, but shyness and timidity often prevent you from meeting the right people. You must learn to be yourself, rather than trying so hard to win social acceptance by being what you think people want you to be. You have very high standards in life, but you might find yourself compromising some of them just to be one of the gang.

Try to broaden your intellectual and creative horizons so that you can expand your influence. You have a great deal to give to the world. Your remarkable insight and analytical ability can be applied in such areas as law, social service, medicine, and writing. As with all natives of Moon in Virgo, you find fulfilment through work. Dedicated, conscientious, and sincere, you are trusted and respected by everyone who knows you. But take care that work doesn't become everything to you. If you cultivate outside interests and try to partake of as many of life's experiences as possible, you'll be less likely to fall into an “I've seen it all" attitude of resignation.

Nervous tension and anxiety often plague the Libra-Virgo. Like all Librans, you need peace, harmony, and balance in your surroundings, and you can easily become confused and agitated when your environment is tension-filled. The best way for you to find peace of mind is to look within. Quiet contemplation and meditation are excellent for the highly strung Libra-Virgo.

You have an innate flair for symmetry, form and design. If the colours in your office clash, or if the furniture is somehow unbalanced, you find it hard to concentrate, it's absolutely essential, both at work and home, that your surroundings are in sync with your tastes.

Not quite as romantic as your fellow Librans, you search for intellectual as well as physical compatibility. Though highly imaginative, you may have some difficulties in love, since a Virgo Moon gives you a somewhat prudish and inhibited nature: you may be somewhat puzzled by changing sexual mores. As you are more of a giver than a taker, be careful to choose a partner who respects you and is sensitive to your nature.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Libra:
The Social Butterfly

You have one fascination: people. How they act, what they wear, and why they do the things they do. In fact, you can become so preoccupied with the lives and lifestyles of others that you have little time left over to look within yourself. Few escape your observations, and once someone has stirred your interest, you will not rest until you have discovered his or her innermost secrets. Even the strongest defence mechanism collapses under your perceptive scrutiny.

You detest placidity. Highly strung and drawn to excitement, no matter how innocent and angelic you may appear, you love to stir up trouble. When the conversation (or life itself) slows down to a normal pace, you will launch the most shocking and controversial argument just to spice things up. That penchant for gossip and intrigue often gets you into trouble, but should someone point the finger at you or accuse you of meddling, that cherubic charm and Venus luck come right to your rescue. This is fortunate, as some of your actions are devious enough to precipitate violent action. Despite the trouble you find yourself in or the number of people you alienate, you somehow always manage to remain society's darling.

You need plenty of diversion since your moods and energy levels tend to fluctuate. For weeks, you may be all fire, spirit, and enthusiasm – only to suddenly plunge into prolonged states of lethargy and indecision that can take just as many weeks to shake off. Practice a little moderation. Sure, you can have your exciting times, but it's important that you try as much as possible to keep your emotional scales in balance. Try giving yourself some quiet, restful moments to think things through and examine your own inner workings.

Your combination gives you very high intelligence, amazing diplomatic skills, and a powerful imagination. How you use these gifts is another story. You have strong parasitic tendencies, and like all Librans, you prefer luxury and ease to work and responsibility. It’s important for Libra-Libras to get plenty of professional training as early as possible, so they can learn to apply their talents constructively. Your insight into human behaviour can be invaluable in the fields of law, human relations (especially labour relations), writing, and social work. In addition, you have a refined aesthetic sense and can excel in art, jewellery, design, fashion and music.

You're very romantic, and your love life is important to your overall health. Since you depend so much on a stable partnership, be sure to take great pains to find someone who is right for you. Without love, you can become moody, restless, and despondent, so fill your life with plenty of it.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Scorpio:
The Wolf in Sheep’s Clothing

You are a very complex individual! In your combination, peace-loving and diplomatic Libra is joined with intense, secretive, and combative Scorpio. Outwardly, you probably exhibit many of the traits of the Libran: You strive for peace, harmony, and inner calm. You are conciliatory and considerate with your friends and associates. You are at ease with yourself and at home in your surroundings. Striving at all times to remain objective and fair in your judgements, you place a high premium on the power of reason and diplomacy. However, beneath that tranquil facade smoulders Scorpio passion and intensity. Your inner nature is ambitions and stubborn, and though your style may be that of the dove, inside lies the motivation and intention of the hawk.

Charming, innocent, and naive on the surface, when the time comes to take charge of a situation or maximise a personal advantage, you can quickly emerge as a decisive, forthright, and shrewd individual. That sudden change often catches less observant souls unawares, and you usually end up surprising even your closest friends. Once an idea or goal is conceived, you seldom rest until you have seen it through. Like other Librans, you truly enjoy diversion and relaxation, but there is nothing lazy or lackadaisical about you!

You have a strong need to be involved with people. Motivated to help others and to transform outmoded beliefs, you probably feel you have a mission in life. Your intuitive understanding of what makes other people tick gives you strong political and diplomatic talents. Although you are optimistic by nature, your outlook is usually realistic and cautious.

Sometimes people think of you as intolerant, for even though you may consider yourself open-minded, you can be pretty closed to an opposing viewpoint. In times of personal crisis, you can stubbornly revert to old biases, rejecting the good advice others have to give you. Of course, it's important to value your own opinions, but it's also a good idea to keep your mind open – especially in times of stress.

Your combination holds great promise and the possibility of intellectual and spiritual unfoldment on a grand scale. Your sound leadership potential (provided it does not reach fanatical proportions) can help pave the way to self-fulfilment. Notable among natives of this combination are Presidents Dwight Eisenhower and Jimmy Carter.

On a professional level, there are few careers at which you cannot succeed. A jack-of-all-trades, you can absorb knowledge and information readily. In addition, you have the willpower, as well as the dedication, to accomplish great things.

Highly sensual and intensely romantic, you search for a stable and consistent relationship, particularly with someone who shares your intellectual interests and supports your ambitions. Although you are an imaginative and affectionate partner, you must watch out for your tendency to be jealous and possessive.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Sagittarius: The Libertarian

Free-spirited, adventurous, and vivacious; you draw people to you. Liberty is what you need most, because your nature is very independent, highly strung, and restless. Although you are even-tempered for the most part, you become irate when anyone tries to limit your self-expression or infringe upon your life-style. You must have the freedom to think and do as you please.

Honesty is the virtue you admire most – in yourself and in others. You are never afraid to say exactly what you feel or to do what you think is right. You have an idealistic outlook, and your vision is broad and far-reaching, but you may experience some confusion when you find that others don't always conform to your standards of integrity or subscribe to your peculiar beliefs. A Libra-Sagittarian prefers to see the world through rose-coloured glasses; so even if you think you are always being honest and straightforward in your dealings, there are times when fierce idealism prevents you from seeing the whole truth. Your convictions are admirable and your beliefs lofty – but don't let philosophy rule your every move or blind you to the more practical aspects of life.

An intellectual, you like to toy with abstract concepts and ideas. Details always bog you down: You prefer surveying the cosmos or pondering the infinite to balancing your cheque book or doing the dishes. Your many imaginative ideas can be brought down to earth and put to good use. The trouble is most of them remain stuck in your mind, simply because you lack discipline. Think of what you could do with all that inspiration if you sprinkled it with some good old fashioned common sense! There are those of your combination who have broken the barrier to become innovative scholars, philosophers, scientists, and artists.

Imagination is a very strong factor in your combination. You must try not to let your overactive mind carry you off into dreamland in the midst of a discussion or a day's work. Fantasy is healthy, but it does not substitute for experience; you need both. Your combination gives you a lot of restless energy and curiosity, and it's likely that you feel a strong urge to travel to exotic lands. By all means do so; nothing is better for the Libra-Sagittarian than an African safari or an Alaskan expedition. Any kind of physical activity is also important for your well-being.

In love, as in all things, you are an idealist. You usually fantasise about your ideal lover long before he or she enters your life. Generous, warm-hearted, and open, you are a wonderful lover. But there will be moments when you are off on cloud nine pondering those dizzy concepts and your mate will have to get used to some indifference. As with all Moon in Sagittarius people, you are subject to extremes of mood, so there are times when you are buoyant and cheery and other times when you are pensive and depressed. Search for a partner who can tolerate those mood swings as well as share in your intellectual interests – and your dream will be realised!

Sun in Libra/Moon in Capricorn: The Social Climber

You are a very serious and sensitive individual. Like your fellow Librans, you are charming, congenial, and outgoing but deep down inside you probably feel a lot of uncertainty. You have a strong sense of self-worth, but may never get over that inner feeling of remorse and melancholy. Still, hoping to find the way to unravel your own soul, you reach out to understand others.

Approval is what you want most of all. The two signs of your combination are in conflict, which suggests you probably had a difficult or unhappy childhood. Because of this, you may feel it necessary to struggle to win the attention and support that may have been absent early in life.

You observe others from a distance, forever comparing and evaluating to decide which qualities to admire and emulate and which to disregard. The insight you gain from your observations in turn makes you an excellent diplomat. Shrewd and somewhat Machiavellian, politics is your forte. Ostensibly, your motives are to establish harmony but your innermost (and often unrecognised) desire is to feed your ego, even if this involves deceit and manipulation. Though you're forever innocent in your approach, your ultimate aim can be merely to enhance your own position and gain power.

If you use your social talents exclusively to bolster your vanity, you may just become another Iago or Molotov. But if your ambition and diplomatic skills are applied in a constructive manner, you could be another Disraeli or Lafayette. The choice is yours.

Just how do you make positive use of your resources? First, it's important for you to gain more respect and appreciation for yourself. Concentrate on building your self-image and stop worrying so much about what others may be thinking of you. Learn to love and value yourself for what you are, rather than what you feel you ought to be. Don't be so hard on yourself.

Like all serious and introspective individuals, you probably have strong creative drives. Once you have overcome or resolved your inner conflicts, you can put some of those insights of yours to work. Professionally, you are best suited for socially oriented work: political activism, law, and high-level administration. You may also have musical and artistic talents, although your need for instant recognition and approval can hinder creative development.

Librans have exacting standards when choosing a partner and are attracted to form and beauty first and foremost. Since you are so romantic and starry-eyed, you may have difficulty contending with an inner Capricorn nature that is rather cold and aloof. Yes, your vanity requires frequent reminders of your worth, but it's also important for you to return affection to your lover. You can be a compassionate lover, if you put some of your social skills to more personal use.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Aquarius: The Humanitarian

The artistic inclinations, sensitivity and social awareness of Libra are heightened when combined with an Aquarian Moon. Extremely social, you find yourself and lose yourself through others, yet in most respects you are independent and self-reliant. You consider everyone a friend until proven otherwise: in fact, friend is the word you use most often.

Your fear of loneliness and isolation borders on phobia but is largely ungrounded. It is a rare Libra-Aquarius who is not popular with just about everyone. Few can resist your buoyant, outgoing (though humble) spirit. An Aquarian Moon takes away some of the Libran vanity and superficiality, replacing them with scientific curiosity and humanitarian instincts. Fascination is the key to your nature: Intrigued by everyone and everything. you are especially drawn to the unknown and the unexplored.

A full-time student of human nature, you gain tremendous insights into the psychology of man through observation and social interaction. At many times in your life, you have probably felt strong urges to help your fellow men and women. Your intense imagination and sensitivity cause you to project well beyond your own ego and to identify (perhaps too readily) with the joys and sorrows of those around you as if their experiences were your own. The danger here is that your almost Christlike superego may cause you to burden yourself with too many social obligations, as though the woes of humanity were entirely on your shoulders. That light-hearted and easy-going nature of yours conceals a very deep, serious and often sad soul. Depression is common to the Libra-Aquarian.

Your challenge is to develop a more realistic, balanced perspective. Although your concern for others is genuine, try not to let your sense of social responsibility turn you away from self-analysis. Concentrate more on your own happiness and fulfilment. Then, by example, you will help others.

Your imagination works overtime. An idealist and a romantic, you often get lost in the illusions and conjurations of your mind. There will be times when you suddenly realise that life does not meet your idyllic expectations. Disillusionment and heartbreak may ensue if you don't force yourself to change your Pollyanna attitude.

You are a rebel in thought and spirit. Always looking for new forms of expression and application, you reject the tried-and-true. The jazz composer George Gershwin embodied the creative sensitivity and originality of Libra-Aquarius. The possibilities for artistic unfoldment and creative expression are excellent – provided your imagination does not carry you too far from the goals you set for yourself. Your social adeptness and understanding of others can also be applied creatively in human relations, diplomacy, psychology, and social activism.

As in everything else, you are a romantic idealist in love. In your search for the perfect partner, many affairs are likely along the way. For some Libra-Aquarians, romance can become the whole meaning of existence, energising all other facets of life. Your combination is ideally suited for a happy, long-lasting relationship – which is fortunate, for you are easily hurt by separation or rejection.

Sun in Libra/Moon in Pisces:
The Martyr

You are a very sensitive Libran! Extremely imaginative, highly intuitive, and artistically inclined, you have many talents that can find practical expression. People are amazed by your apparent calm and serenity. Charm, tact, and subtle persuasiveness all work to your advantage in life. Gentle and refined, you are deeply hurt by the suffering of another human being. You are always considerate in your dealings with others and malice or deceit are practically unknown to you.

But, as with all highly sensitive and imaginative individuals, your path to self-fulfilment may be blocked by timidity and self-consciousness. In your youth, you were innocence and naiveté personified. You probably found it difficult and perhaps painful to adjust to some of the harsher realities of life. Fortunately, you are adaptable and know when to compromise: So, through experience, you gradually learned how to get by in a world you probably perceived as hostile.

In your adult life, you run the risk of over-adapting and over-accommodating. Never happy unless those around you are also happy, you too often sacrifice your own well-being for the sake of others. You suffer so that others may smile. In addition, you don't assert yourself, so others often take credit for your ideas. You need to be more aggressive, take more risks. With so much talent, it would be a shame to let it go to waste. Besides, if you eventually feel unfulfilled, you may succumb to self-hatred or masochism. It's important for you to respect yourself!

Your surroundings have a good deal of influence upon your emotional health. As you tend to take on the moods and attitudes of those around you, you must be careful when choosing associates and friends. Re-examine your relationships from time to time, determining whether they are emotionally supportive or possibly destructive and harmful. Take charge of your environment, rather than letting your environment take charge of you.

Intuition is one of your greatest gifts. Most decisions you make are based upon that remarkable sixth sense of yours. This can be especially true where money is concerned; you somehow know exactly the right moment for speculation or investment. As with all Librans, you work best in partnership – preferably with someone who can balance your diplomacy with aggression. Your imagination is intense and you have a wonderful aesthetic sense. Art, music, and other creative areas, as hobby or profession, are ideal for you.

You are very sensual and a wonderful lover because you are so imaginative. One problem you may have is focusing your affection on one individual. If you feel dissatisfied with your professional status, you may turn to casual sexual affairs as an ego boost. The less secure you feel, the more promiscuous you may become in a futile attempt to compensate for emotional insecurity.

CHAPTER EIGHT
SCORPIO

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Aries:
The Individual

Serious and purposeful, you always have a goal or objective in sight. Mars, the planet of war, rules both signs of your combination, which gives you a very aggressive and independent outlook. Egocentric is the word that describes you best, for no matter how warm and compassionate you may seem on the surface, you always look out for Number One first and foremost. No matter how many friends you may have, you remain essentially a loner, preferring to follow your own carefully chosen path. Sensual and self-indulgent, you don't need any justification for your existence, and you never lose faith in yourself – no matter how many setbacks you may encounter.

All this aside, people respect you, simply because you respect yourself; they admire your purposefulness, intensity, and conviction. In addition, your combination endows you with fantastic powers of perception and intelligence. How you choose to use these gifts, of course, is up to you. There are really two kinds of Scorpio-Aries: One is compassionate, spiritual and humanitarian; the other, more common type is self-aggrandising, concerned only with enriching his or her own life through material acquisition and the attainment of power. Either type possesses the tenacity, willpower and courage to be successful, provided the individual is not victimised by his or her own tragic flaws.

Excessive pride, intolerance, impatience, and arrogance are the traits that distort your perceptions and cause you to suffer defeat and frustration. It's extremely difficult for you to compromise, much less listen to reason. You stubbornly consider yourself your own boss, and when you encounter criticism or disagreement in your work or love life, you stomp off in anger. You must learn to bend now and then and to work in harmony with those around you. You have fantastic creative, spiritual, and leadership potential, but it can only be applied when you learn that others are also entitled to have opinions.

As worldly success is so important to you, you'd better learn to detach yourself a little more from your activities. Next time you face defeat or frustration, instead of losing your temper or nervously brooding, try to just relax and look at the problem from afar. Try to develop a more tolerant, open-minded attitude, even when it comes to yourself.

Professionally, your combination is ideal for business, management, and powerful positions in general. Shrewd and a natural detective, you can discover the chinks in anyone's armour and then use your findings to your own advantage. Personal magnetism also contributes to your business flair.

In love, you are possessive and jealous. Sex is a very important part of your life and you need plenty of it, if only as an outlet for your abundant energy. You do tend to be somewhat insensitive to the needs and desires of your partner, preferring to dominate rather than share. Many volatile personal relationships are likely for the Scorpio-Aries.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Taurus:
The Leader

Shrewd, practical, and determined, you are a very serious individual. A natural leader, you project an aura of authority and self-control. Your vision is broad and far-reaching, causing you to think and act on a grand scale. Like all people who have confidence and faith in themselves, you probably feel as though you have a mission in life; and once you determine just what that mission is, you will pursue it with unwavering intensity.

You never have to say very much. People sense you know quite a lot and your magnetic, self-assured presence speaks for itself. You're a realist through and through, common sense and a firm understanding of the ways of men help you to put your lofty dreams and visions into action. Yet, although you're a realist, and even a bit on the cynical side, it is amazing how superstitious you can be at times – reaching for your favourite lucky charm when in doubt.

Secrecy is your trademark. Although you have great depth and sympathy for others, you never let anyone know how you feel or what you may be thinking. On the surface, you are almost always calm and controlled. When you encounter defeat or frustration, you may brood for a while, but then you bounce back fresh and even more determined. However, that tendency to guard your thoughts and suppress your emotions, rather than dealing with them openly and honestly, can lead to many psychological problems. It's important that you learn to communicate freely and without inhibition.

Both signs of this combination are fixed signs, which gives you plenty of resolve and determination but also makes you somewhat rigid and biased in your convictions and beliefs. You have the imagination, energy and breadth of vision to accomplish great things, but you must see that your stubbornness and inflexibility don‘t hamper your progress. You always think you are right, and this smug attitude often blinds your judgement and causes you to lose perspective. Learn to become more objective in your approach to life, so that you do not bring personal bias into every judgement.

You have keen and subtle powers of persuasion, which would make you an excellent salesperson. You are also good with money, and would excel in the area of finance. Your strong leadership abilities can be applied imaginatively in politics or in the military. Like all those with Moon in Taurus, you have tremendous sympathy, kindness and a protective attitude toward others. You feel an urge to help those less advantaged than yourself, and many Scorpio-Taureans have strong humanitarian sentiments.

Both signs of your combination are intensely sensual, and you have quite a healthy appetite for sexual pleasure. Many romantic affairs are likely for the Scorpio-Taurus. You are possessive and quite jealous. Watch that urge to control your partner and learn to give him or her the same kind of freedom you yourself require. Your kindness, affection and loyalty compensate for some of those overbearing qualities.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Gemini: The Salesman

You have a charming, exuberant, and magnetic personality. Much more self-expressive than your fellow Scorpios, you can talk circles around most people, which makes you a first-class salesperson. Self-assured and magnetic, people find it hard to resist your subtle and sophisticated manner.

You seem serious, purposeful, and even mysterious, but you are not nearly as profound as some people might think. Clever would be a better word. You are so perceptive, cunning, and quick-witted that you project a worldly image. Wit is one of your greatest assets. That strong sense of irony and those incisive remarks almost always find a target. People might accuse you of being tactless, but they'll usually come back to be your willing audience again.

Your Gemini Moon gives you a restless spirit. Variety is what you want from life and, although you are just as serious and determined as your fellow Scorpios, your independent and rebellious nature will probably carry you off in search of novelty and adventure.

You may seem highly emotional but actually you are quite detached. Those outbursts of passion and pathos are mostly just for show (and often you are not quite sure yourself whether your feelings are genuine or somehow calculated to produce the best effect). Role playing is one of your favourite real-life games, but make sure you don't lose sight of yourself in assuming all those guises. Going against your true nature could lead to a variety of emotional problems. You have a love of knowledge and you are something of an intellectual, but you never delve too deeply into things. Although you seem to know something about almost everything, there is nothing of the scholar in you. Learn to narrow down the scope of your interests and activities, and concentrate on one goal or objective.

For many a Scorpio-Gemini, the pursuit of pleasure can become all-consuming. A confirmed sexaholic and sensualist, you might use your many charms solely in pursuit of pleasure. Ironically, your own innate cleverness may be your biggest problem: you may be tempted to live off your quick tongue, instead of developing the talent beneath. A kind of smug laziness may develop. Push yourself to the limit of your abilities, and don't be so flip about your potential. Your combination is ideal for investigative work, and you would make a terrific reporter. In addition, you can excel in teaching, business, and any other field that involves verbal adeptness.

In romance, as in all things, you are inconsistent. Will you ever be loyal to just one lover? Probably, but it may take a long time before you find that one. But once your affections are fixed upon one person, you are a model of loyalty and consideration. Just find a partner who can put up with your wild mood swings and temper, and also provide intellectual stimulation, and then you should have a long-lasting and deep relationship.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Cancer: The Magnet

Secure, confident, and adaptable, yours is perhaps the most magnetic and compelling of all the Sun-Moon combinations. Wherever you go, you are respected. Whether it's on the tennis court or in the boardroom, you always seem to win, because Lady Luck closely follows the Scorpio-Cancer. In addition, charm, persuasiveness and intelligence work to your advantage. Calm and self-controlled, you never lose your poise. You can be comfortable in almost any circumstances, because you can play just about any role imaginable – and you are a wonderful actor! But you always know just what you're doing and precisely who you are.

Confidence has never been a problem in your life, as you innately value your own worth. An aura of mystery surrounds you, and it can be difficult for friends to figure you out. Yet they are perfectly willing to follow you anywhere. It is as if they sense your inner strength and want to latch on to some of whatever it is you possess.

Despite all these natural leadership talents, you are rarely interested in taking charge. Self-sufficiency and independence make you something of a loner. No matter how many people want your friendship, you only need yourself for solace and will do your utmost to maintain a discreet distance from other people. Both signs of your combination are water signs, so you probably feel strong altruistic urges, and your combination is often found in the charts of doctors, clergymen and scientists. Your healing powers are probably quite evident, and you ought to make use of them in some way.

Never content with surface impressions, you like to probe beneath appearances to discover the genuine meaning and significance of things. Depth, imagination, and shrewd realism combine to help you excel at just about anything you decide to try – and once absorbed in some endeavour, your concentration and dedication are matchless.

You don't have too many emotional problems, and you possess a rejuvenating quality which enables you to rebound from setbacks with comparative ease. Your only difficulty is your tendency to repress feelings rather than dealing with them honestly. Opening yourself for scrutiny is simply not easy for you. Suppressed feelings may lead to depression, despondency and moodiness for the Scorpio-Cancer. Try to let your guard down now and then, and communicate more freely.

You must also guard against adopting a smug or complacent attitude. Sure, things come easily to you; that doesn't mean this will always be the case. You need to put out consistent effort in order to achieve something that is solid and long-lasting.

You have no difficulty attracting members of the opposite sex. Like all Scorpios, you enjoy sex and need plenty of it to keep you happy. In love, you are loyal, consistent, and generous – but guard against being overly possessive. Respect your partner's free will as much as you respect your own. And, again, communicate more readily. After a lover's quarrel, you are the type to silently brood for days on end, which only delays reconciliation.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Leo: The Magnificent Obsession

This combination can produce the ultimate pleasure-seeker and self-indulgent sensualist, or it can produce a person of great depth, idealistic vision and leadership. A romantic at heart, you can be swept away by the sheer intensity of your emotions, or you can be uplifted by them to great heights of spiritual and intellectual wisdom.

You stand apart from the crowd. A rugged individualist, you have tremendous confidence and self-sustaining vitality, which make it unnecessary for you to rely on others for encouragement. People sense you are a leader, for your presence alone is compelling. Your imagination works overtime and your vision is far-reaching, but there are times when your emotions can just carry you away – causing you to lose perspective and fabricate all kinds of illusions. You are so lost in pursuit of your own special path to success that you pay little heed to caution or advice from others. Compromise and patience are not your forte. Determined to follow that impossible dream of yours, you have no time for those who stand in your way. And you'll knock them right over, just to prove it.

You have a tendency to brag and boast about your latest exploits: You take such pride in your activities; you feel that the world should know about them. But there are times when your boasting can become tedious to those around you. It's very important for you to learn to listen as well as talk; tolerance for others is a virtue you must cultivate. Extremism is often apparent in the Scorpio-Leo.

With a strong sense of the dramatic, you rarely do things halfway, and your actions and behaviour are usually designed to attract attention. Try toning down your “act” occasionally, and give others a chance to share the spotlight.

With your leadership ability, intelligence, and depth, you have all the qualities necessary to realise your ambitions on a grand scale. In order to follow through, however, stop centring all your thoughts on yourself.

Many Scorpio-Leos, frustrated by or just bored with the world, may be content simply to seek earthly pleasures. If you encounter disappointment in life or your goals do not seem to be materialising, you can lapse into states of lethargy and extreme self-indulgence. It's vital for you to learn to think positively and remain optimistic.

You have a love-them-and-leave-them reputation. Lust is one thing you'll never overcome and your Leo Moon gives you a strong craving for variety. Though loyalty and consistency are your ideals, you are often the first to betray them. On the positive side, you can be a very affectionate and generous partner. Just guard against jealousy and possessiveness: You have a tendency to want to reshape the one you love to suit your fancy, or in your own image. Beware of such overbearing practices.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Virgo: The Sleuth

Your combination gives you the depth, insight, and perception of Scorpio along with the realism and analytical abilities of Virgo. You are quiet, soft-spoken, and very intense, and little slips past your acute perception. Your sensitivity enables you to perceive things that others can't or won’t. Analytical, probing and discriminating, you are a natural detective, and the conclusions you form about life can be startlingly accurate. No one can say that you don't know your own mind because you have some very strong opinions and beliefs. Although reserved and seemingly detached, you actually long to express your views and opinions.

In fact, you may be a little too aware of the world around you. As with all Moon in Virgo individuals, you strive for perfection in yourself and in everyone else. If things aren't what they're cracked up to be, you run the danger of becoming hypercritical content to be a faultfinder, but doing little or nothing to help. Or you may turn your fault-finding skills inward, subjecting yourself to endless rounds of self-examination and disapproval.

You must learn self-acceptance if you hope to apply your remarkable talents. Charity begins at home, so start appreciating yourself. The world cannot and will not always conform to your vision or your high standards, so relax now and then and just enjoy life for what it is – rather than what you feel it ought to be. Watch that tendency to preach and moralise! Your Virgo Moon gives you a highly ethical and sometimes self-righteous attitude.

Like your fellow Scorpios, you are quite magnetic and people somehow understand that you know a great deal. You are also determined and ambitious. Work is your fulfilment, and you probably feel a strong sense of duty and responsibility. Just make sure you leave enough free time for leisure. Intellectual pursuits are ideal for the Scorpio-Virgo – provided you don't shut yourself up in an ivory tower. Your talents are well suited for investigative reporting, detective work, and scientific endeavours.

Like all Scorpios, you want an active sex life. But in your youth, you may have acquired more than a few inhibitions. Virgo's reserve and puritanism can impair the full expression of your very sensual nature. In love, you are a consistent, loyal and devoted mate, and you have the rare ability of being able to balance the give-and-take aspect of a relationship.

Scorpio/Moon in Libra:
The Tactician

Charming and magnetic, people are attracted to your easy-going and graceful personality. Your combination balances aggressive and forceful Scorpio with peace-loving and refined Libra. You know instinctively when it is wise to be assertive and when to use tact and diplomacy. Your ability to handle others works to your considerable advantage in life.

You are not as decisive as your fellow Scorpios. No matter how confident and self-assured you may seem to others, deep within you probably feel a lot of uncertainty. Setting goals and defining your purpose in life can be next to impossible. You always want to hear everyone's opinion, but excessive reliance on those around you can become a weakness. Like all natives of Moon in Libra, you are strongly influenced by the people around you – be they friends, lovers or family. You also tend to judge yourself by the way others see you, rather than by the way you see yourself. It's important that you learn to act according to your own true desires. Don't fret so much about what other people may think of your actions. Concentrate instead on doing what you think is best for you, and maintain your independence.

An idealist and a romantic, you are never content with surface impressions and enjoy delving deeply into things. You have a powerful faith in people and the knowledge they have to offer. For some Scorpio-Librans, the quest for truth can lead to fanaticism. You have a powerful imagination and must guard against being led astray by charlatans who offer the keys to the universe.

With your strong belief in fair play, you will rush in whenever you sense injustice or unethical conduct. Your code of ethics can border on missionary zeal. and you must guard against that tendency to preach and moralise.

Both signs of your combination are pleasure- and leisure-loving. No matter how high-minded and idealistic you try to be, at heart you are really a libertine. Laziness and self-indulgence can be the stumbling blocks to your fulfilment. Though you have the charm, intelligence, and magnetism to accomplish a great deal in life, too often you are only concerned with instant gratification. Guard against becoming complacent or settling for less than you are capable of accomplishing.

Your talents are well suited to law, politics, and social work. A Libra Moon also enhances the creativity of the Scorpio, giving you good taste and strong artistic leanings. You are highly sensitive to visual stimuli and can be thrown off balance if a colour scheme offends you. You might work in visually-oriented fields such as photography, film, or interior design.

Devotion is one of your favourite words, and you may search the globe trying to find someone worthy of your attention and fidelity. Failing to find that perfect lover, you could instead go unhappily from one affair to the next. Once you do become attached, you will be a model of loyalty.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Scorpio:
The Extremist

Forever searching for meaning and significance, you accept almost nothing at face value. Even the most mundane matter can seem auspicious (or suspicious) to the intense and imaginative double Scorpio. You can be carried away by the sheer strength of your emotions or let them uplift you to spiritual and artistic heights few can even imagine.

You have tremendous powers of concentration and an imposing presence. When you walk into a room full of people, heads turn. Magnetic, forceful and purposeful, others often fear you because somehow they think you are out to get them. (In some cases, they are right, because your excessive jealousy can lead to vindictiveness.)

Depression and self-absorption are common to the double Scorpio. You have a somewhat morbid outlook, and can be obsessed with your own mortality. You keep these feelings and fears pretty much to yourself, so few know what all that silent contemplation is about. Learn to express what you're feeling, rather than swallowing it at the expense of your psychological health.

Subconsciously, you absorb the emotions, impressions, moods, and even the aspirations of those around you. You have a very low stress threshold, and in a hyper tense or emotionally charged situation, you may become violent. You do not feel you have to answer to anyone for your actions, and this may be why many double Scorpios are lawbreakers.

With your self-indulgent and sensual nature, it's critical for you to practice moderation. Although you have the willpower and discipline to master just about anything, your talents can easily be dissipated through excessive pleasure seeking, narcissism, and (in some cases) self-pity. If you can redirect some of those powerful drives to loftier endeavours, you could be a great artist – but, if you continually concern yourself with the next rung on the ladder, it's not likely.

Aside from creative avenues of expression, you can excel in any career involving detection and analysis. You like to probe deeply into things and thus you would be an excellent scholar, scientist, or psychologist. Managing the resources of others is another possibility (as long as it's management and not manipulation).

You are basically in love with yourself, making it difficult for you to give to another romantically. But you do have powerful sex drives (and a lot of sex appeal). In fact, keeping your mind off sex can be a major challenge! Some of you, however, have strong spiritual leanings and may sublimate your sexual energies to a religious ideal. This type of double Scorpio can be a living saint. More commonly, however, you pursue the opposite sex lustfully, and once you do become attached to someone, you are then likely to reshape him or her to meet your specifications and demands. Be sure to allow your lover some freedom, and learn to respect his or her wishes.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Sagittarius: The Forerunner

All the finer qualities of Scorpio – depth, compassion, integrity, and idealism – are brought out when combined with a Sagittarius Moon. Your expansive vision and lofty goals make you a guiding light to your fellow men and women. And your willpower, tenacity and remarkable insight help you bring some of those goals into reality.

Many Scorpio-Sagittarians feel an overwhelming humanitarian and spiritual urge, and probably know they have a mission in life. People are drawn to your magnetic and mystical presence and they respect your purpose and determination. Always open and warm-hearted, compassion and tolerance rule your relationships. But you do have an air of aloofness which some interpret as arrogance. This is because you are such an individualist and are determined to blaze your own trail to truth, enlightenment, and wisdom, irreverent and iconoclastic, somehow you feel that you have all the answers – and perhaps you are right: Both signs of your combination are concerned with discovering spiritual truth. Introspection is one way of finding it, because many of the answers lie within.

Your imagination is so powerful that there are times when it can carry you away and be a source of phobias or illusions. Though practical, like your fellow Scorpios you often look at things from an otherworldly perspective, which sometimes distorts your otherwise sound judgement. No matter how shrewd and sophisticated you might seem, you are basically a romantic at heart, believing in things that others find hard to fathom, perhaps because you are so far ahead of everyone else. Courage is your strength – the courage to explore brave new worlds of thought and spirit. Like all forerunners, you set the paths that others will follow in the future.

All those with Moon in Sagittarius need plenty of freedom. You're a rebel in all things, and any restraint or imposition on your liberty is felt as a threat. Possessing an adventurous and expansive spirit, you must have room to express yourself and do as you please. But, as honesty and loyalty are your credos, you would never infringe on the rights of others. Your one big fault is that sometimes you may be a little too blunt: Tact is almost unknown to the Scorpio-Sagittarius: if you feel it, you say it. And your sting can be deadly.

In romance (as in all things) you are an idealist. Loyal, consistent, and true, once you have bestowed your affections, you are fun-loving and uninhibited. You tend to be affectionate and very trusting and are easily hurt if your partner does not always reciprocate. It's important for you to find a mate as completely devoted as you are yourself.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Capricorn: The Power Seeker

There is something of the devil in your soul. Shrewd, calculating, intense (and somewhat manipulative) you take yourself and your actions very seriously. No matter how charming and warm-hearted you seem on the surface, you basically have only one aim in life: to win admiration, respect and prestige. And no matter how compassionate you appear to be toward others, you instinctively look out for Number One. Ambition can be everything for the wilful and determined Scorpio-Capricorn.

Possessing strong leadership drives, you are never happy unless you are your own boss. Magnetic, stubborn, and independent, your shrewdness and resolve help you follow through on your goals. Intense, worldly, and very subtle, you know how to manipulate others to get your way. Not one for excessive self-pity, you dislike any show of weakness in others – perhaps because you fear your own weaknesses so intensely.

Though you appear confident on the surface, you probably feel a great deal of insecurity and confusion deep within. This may be one reason why you desperately want to succeed. Perhaps success is just your way of reassuring yourself that you're all those things people say you are. Deep down, you don't believe a word of the praise that's bestowed on you. Whatever the reason, your mission in life is a constant search for status. Try to expand your spiritual, intellectual, and emotional horizons, or you will be leading a truly cold existence.

Self-acceptance is another thing you must learn. Love and appreciate yourself for who you are, rather than envying those who appear to have more. Everyone must face limitations, no matter how tough or talented he or she may be. Don't always enter a room and feel instantly threatened by the presence of some other striking individual; you have your own magnetism, if you would only acknowledge it. And you have much power and leadership potential, though how you use these gifts is entirely up to you. Spiro Agnew and Indira Gandhi are both examples of the powerful Scorpio-Capricorn; in each case, however, power was put to a different use.

Beware of becoming too stern a judge. You have high standards and may develop a somewhat self-righteous and intolerant attitude toward those who do not live up to them. Give others as much respect as you expect to be shown.

Like all Scorpios, you have a powerful sex drive, but some Scorpio-Capricorns may substitute career and hard work for an active sex life. (It's vital for you to have some healthy outlet for all that energy, because repressing it could cause serious problems). When in love, try a little tenderness. You may be devoted to your partner, but your aloofness can be hard to take. Try saying "I love you" once in a while, just to remind your lover of your feelings.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Aquarius: The Guru

Shrewd, charming, and congenial, you know how to cajole, befriend, and manipulate. You have an intuitive understanding and awareness of others which assists you in your material aspirations. People are attracted to your nonchalant, somewhat offbeat and irreverent manner. Suave and sophisticated, you know how to adapt to almost any situation.

Your Aquarius Moon gives you a strong fascination for science and social change, the unusual and the unexplored. Like the typical Scorpio, you have a compelling presence and a very strong will. Your vision and insights are unusual and a bit far out for most people – because you are usually about ten or twelve years ahead of your time. But you so believe in your discoveries that you announce them to all within earshot. Much more extroverted and congenial than your fellow Scorpios, you have a strong need for the company of people, and an active and varied social life is necessary to your emotional health – if for no other reason than to have an outlet for your sometimes outrageous opinions.

But you do have a strong independent streak, and no matter how many friends and acquaintances pass through your life, the aura of the loner surrounds you. Somewhat detached, you have difficulty forming strong emotional bonds with people, and this detachment is often your downfall. Proud and stubborn, you are determined to have your own way; and if someone should question your beliefs or opinions, they will be met with an indignant stare. You must learn how to be more humble, more cooperative. Yours can be the combination of an innovative scientist, humanitarian or mystic – but first you must realise that you can only function at your best when you work in harmony with those around you.

Self-righteousness and intolerance are particularly characteristic of the adult Scorpio-Aquarius. Years of precociousness and wilfulness have made you so set in your ways that you have little patience for those who disagree with you. Thus, you may surround yourself with admirers and passive disciples, rather than with people who might offer you challenge or diversity. Keep your mind open to intellectual stimulation, and learn to accept and tolerate other viewpoints. Despite that otherworldliness, you are basically pretty down-to-earth. Self-sufficient and perceptive, your social adeptness works to your advantage (especially in business). It's a rare individual who can outsmart a Scorpio-Aquarius!

As you crave an audience, you usually choose a partner who is an ardent fan of yours. It is vital that you be flattered and admired, and when the adulation and applause begin to wane, so does your interest. Try to be a little less self-centred in love. Like all Scorpios, you are highly sexed and with your Aquarian Moon, you are often drawn to the experimental in your love life.

Sun in Scorpio/Moon in Pisces:
The Sponge

Sensitive, impressionable, and highly intuitive, you perceive things others never could. Conscientious to an extreme, no one ever has to tell you the difference between right or wrong: You know instinctively. Compassion rules your actions, and no matter how successful you may be in life, you are always careful not to infringe on anyone else's territory.

Like all sensitive souls, you are highly aware of the evil and malice that exist in the world. Many Scorpio-Pisceans have strong idealistic and altruistic urges and, at one point or another; you may have felt the call of the church. You have a magnetic presence and plenty of willpower, but there are times when you simply want to withdraw from the world or lapse into periods of depression and moodiness. This is because you are strongly affected by any tension in your immediate environment. Rough people offend you, perhaps because you fear your own power.

Both signs of your combination are water signs, which give you an uncanny ability to adapt quickly to almost any circumstance. Like a chameleon, you are able to take on the "colour" of your surroundings. Role playing is common to the Scorpio-Piscean and you are a superb actor. Occasionally, however, it is important that you be yourself. Although the roles you play help you to get ahead, you could lose yourself altogether in the process of trying to be all things to all people.

Luck follows all Scorpio-Pisceans. This combination is harmonious, so you won’t encounter many difficulties or upheavals in life. There is a danger, however, of your allowing yourself to settle for less, rather than tackling the challenges and opportunities which often present themselves. You have much to give to the world, so force yourself to be more assertive.

Introspection is very important to you. Like all deep individuals, you have much to learn about yourself, and many of the answers you seek can be found within. Just be sure you don't overdo self-analysis. Stay socially active or you may become too reclusive for your own best interests.

Creative and artistic endeavours are excellent for you, and your uncanny ability to absorb knowledge enables you to master just about anything quickly. Don’t let your overactive, boundless imagination become a source of unrealistic phobias or superstitions. Instead, put it to good use in your profession.

You are an ideal mate because you know how to give and take. Your magnetic charm captivates members of the opposite sex. In romance, you are loyal and consistent and a good love life is indispensable to your happiness.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Aries:
The Tattler

In "The Emperor’s New Clothes," the child who pointed out that the Emperor was naked must have been a Sagittarius-Aries. No other combination embodies such candid outspokenness.

Dynamic, impulsive and extremely independent, you lack inhibition and have the courage to say exactly what you feel.

You're forthright and fearless, and things are as you see them – and to hell with what others may think. You have a serious and philosophical side to your nature, too, and there are few subjects you cannot discuss intelligently. But no matter how precocious and perceptive, you may be, your emotional development lags far behind your intellect. More a wide-eyed child than a dignified scholar, it's nearly impossible for you to sit still for very long; you constantly want to find adventure and excitement. There is a dichotomy between the way you express yourself (knowledgeably and profoundly) and the way you act (recklessly). And there is nothing you enjoy more than shocking people with your unconventional behaviour: at the Halloween party, you are the only one not in costume.

Humour ranks among your greatest assets. Satirical and light-hearted, you nevertheless manage to irk some people by pointing out all the things they are trying to ignore. But, fortunately, your attacks are usually directed at those who deserve them! You are both a shrewd realist and a perennial optimist; with childlike nonchalance and innocence, you try your best to reveal the hypocrisy you see around you.

Despite your lack of restraint and proper manners, you are never without friends. Warm-hearted and generous, people admire your courage and fresh, appealing charm. An audience is what you crave and an audience is what you usually get. Your combination is well suited for the critic, satirist, playwright and humourist. James Thurber and Mark Twain are both good examples of Sagittarius-Aries.

Though you are basically benevolent and kind, you must watch that rather oversized ego of yours. People may adore you, but they can't help sensing a certain arrogance in your manner. Drama is your password. Thriving on competition and challenge, you love to show off your wit and courage. Be more respectful of the feelings and opinions of others, and occasionally try a little thoughtful reflection before you speak.

This combination implies diversity and it's very likely you will have more than one occupation in life. You are drawn to politics, teaching (you love to lecture and your enthusiasm can make the most mundane subject sparkle), and anything that implies competition.

In your relationships and in your love life, you can be callous. You're passionate and ardent, but you are not a very good listener – even though you expect your partner to be one. Try to respect your mate's interests more. And watch out for your own vanity; you can become too easily enchanted with yourself.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Taurus: The Guilty Conscience

Your combination combines the spiritual and visionary qualities of Sagittarius with the worldly wisdom and practicality of Taurus. You are an individual of great insight and you think in broad, abstract terms. Drawn to the creative and the artistic, you are quite capable of realising some of your inspired concepts.

But too often those dreams remain dreams, because (as with all natives of Moon in Taurus) you've got to have security before you embark on any crusades. This means a substantial bank account and a comfortable home. The practical side of your nature keeps you from pursuing a shaky or unconventional career, even if it might prove more rewarding in the long run. Security is important to everyone, but don't let it become your sole pursuit in life. No matter how materially comfortable you become, you may always feel an inner discontent if you don’t act occasionally on your impulses.

Your sympathy for others is boundless – which may be another reason why you have trouble following through on your dreams. Sentimentality often obscures your judgement. Let’s face it: You're really a nice person and quite soft-hearted. It's hard for you to say no to people and there’s nothing you hate more than the thought of refusing someone. Deep within, you might feel some guilt about stepping forward and expressing your viewpoints. Most of your fears are imaginary (you do have quite an intense imagination); as you are by nature such a warm-hearted and giving person, you will always be loved and respected no matter what path you choose to follow in life.

You have a very sensual and earthy nature. Pleasure is one of your favourite pursuits. But comfort isn't everything; you can too easily lapse into complacency, or adopt a smug outlook.

For that reason, all, Sagittarius-Taureans must remain active and socially involved, cultivating a wide range of activities.

Aside from purely creative or artistic pursuits, you have a flair for business. A good gambler, you know just when to make a speculation or take a financial risk. People with this combination can excel as entrepreneurs, for personality and charm work to their advantage and people sense their inherent dignity, trustworthiness, and honesty. Although a very serious individual, you are always optimistic and positive in your approach to life and setbacks rarely faze you.

Very romantic, you will search for a partner who shares your good nature and trust. Open and uninhibited in expressing your love, you understand the value of sharing, and you expect an equal amount of love in return.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Gemini: The Blithe Spirit

No matter how restless, impulsive, adventuresome and extravagant you may be, somehow you always manage to get by. Cleverness and luck follow you wherever you go, shielding you from perils that anyone else of your capricious nature would helplessly suffer. You are quite an adventurer. Nervous and highly strung, you feel a constant urge to be on the move, and you're likely to explore many lands and investigate many ideas.

Always the nonconformist, you do pretty much what you want to in life because freedom is the one thing you crave most of all. Independent to an extreme, you become unnerved if anyone attempts to influence you. An eternal optimist, you have a buoyant, light-hearted spirit others find irresistible. But no matter how outgoing and congenial you appear, you never lose that air of detachment. And although you can get rather emotional on the surface, inside you are always quite cool.

Concentration is not your forte. Yours could be the combination of a great scholar and innovator, if you could only develop the patience required to master something. You just can't sit still: From your early years, you spend much of your time in preparation for your next big move. As time goes on, you may feel some anxiety and perhaps even guilt as your failure to apply your talents leaves you without any sense of purpose or accomplishment. Eventually, you may find that although your life has been eventful, you have little to show for it. Cultivate some patience and the discipline it takes to fulfil yourself. Don't be content to rely simply on cleverness and luck.

You have a vivid imagination, and you love to weave stories and tales: you can be an excellent writer, artist, or filmmaker. But you are prone to exaggeration. It's sometimes so difficult for you to keep your colourful imagination within bounds that the line between fantasy and reality becomes blurred. Some people may think of you as inconsistent, and some may accuse you of lying. It's not that you are actually malicious or deceitful (in fact, you are honourable to the core); it’s just that in continually changing your mind, you frequently confound others by saying one thing and doing another. If you were more cautious before speaking, you might avoid this problem. Be certain you believe whatever it is you're about to say.

You are as inconsistent in love as in everything else. Finding a partner who can put up with those extreme moods, or who can walk as fast and travel as often, can be difficult. So you'll go through many affairs before you settle down – if you can ever settle down.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Cancer: The Deep Thinker

In your combination, the adventurous, optimistic and freedom-loving Sagittarian Sun is joined with the cautious, shrewd, and imaginative Cancer Moon. Assured, calm and sympathetic, you have great depth and perception. Unlike your fellow Sagittarians, you prefer to look before you leap; caution always holds sway over impulse in you.

Your bearing is confident and you always seem so competent and well informed that many consider you profound. You learn very quickly, because your emotional nature is receptive and you are very open-minded. Language and culture probably fascinate you, as does anything that hints of the exotic and unexplored. Though you may have the air of a scholar, you are in fact a very emotional individual: Extremely intuitive, you form friendships and evaluate others according to the way you feel about them. When you sense someone to be untrustworthy or dishonest, you are usually right. There are times, however, when your emotions and your far-out imagination can carry you away. You're a bit of a dreamer, and sometimes it's difficult for you to separate fantasy from reality. That vivid Cancer imagination can be put to use in great ventures, but it can also be the source of phobias and delusions. Learn to keep it within bounds. Your judgement and perception can be impaired if you let your emotions run away with you.

With your great self-assurance, you can adapt to almost any circumstance or environment. You can make your home just about anywhere, because you know true security is found only within. As with all those who have their Moon in Cancer, you run the risk of adapting a smug or complacent outlook, as time goes by. Too easily contented, you may not follow through on those lofty ideals or apply your many talents. If your home life is a happy one, you should be able to get beyond this complacency; from a secure base, you can accomplish many wonderful things. Writer Joseph Conrad is a good example of the highly perceptive and creative Sagittarius-Cancer.

Your charm and adaptability will win you much admiration and respect. People sense your sincerity and are grateful for your sympathy. You should watch out for too much introspection, however. You are highly sensitive and can become quite stunned by the things you discover about your own nature. You are a spiritual person and have strong religious yearnings. But beware of the more extreme cults, because you can easily be led astray.

You can excel in almost any field you set your heart on. Natives of your combination are often drawn to specialised careers, such as medicine, law, and engineering. Make sure some of your creative and imaginative abilities are also put to use.

You are a very romantic person, Sagittarius-Cancer! Loyal and consistent, you should choose a partner who shares some of your exotic interests, and who is as affectionate and giving as you are. Unlike most Sagittarians, you have a strong need for a comfortable and secure domestic life, so make sure your home is as free of conflict and discord as possible.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Leo:
The Show-off

A Leo Moon stabilises Sagittarian flightiness and inconsistency. Your enthusiasm is directed to the pursuit of status and leadership, and you set high, far-reaching goals for yourself. You probably feel you are cut out to be a leader, for you knew early in life that your imagination, creative drives, and ability set you apart from the crowd. People immediately respond to your cheerful and optimistic manner, at the same time respecting your honesty and innate dignity.

Open and uninhibited, you simply don't have the hang-ups and inhibitions that plague so many others. A super-energetic type, you channel your aggression into positive, constructive activities. Courage and a childlike fascination with people and places carry you far and wide in search of truth and self-fulfilment.

But you may have it a little too good. With such a harmonious combination, you are so free of inner conflict that you may feel the temptation to just get by, depending solely on your luck, wit, and facility with words. Sagittarius-Leo can produce the carefree, pleasure-seeking drifter – or the serious, goal-oriented and philosophical individual.

Introspection is not your strong point. So caught up in living, you leave yourself little time to look within. Become a bit more contemplative, and you will find the means to develop your many talents. Those of your combination who were able to do this include Gustave Flaubert and Benjamin Disraeli. Pride and poor judgement are the two stumbling blocks on your road to success. You don't like to take the advice of others, preferring to proceed by your own instincts. If you ever do make a mistake, you don't like to admit it. Your judgement is often impaired because you tend to take things at face value, rather than stopping to delve deeply into things. Appearances can be very deceptive, you know. If you learn from your own experience, you will become less trusting and a little more aware of the ways of the world.

Extroverted and fun-loving, you crave an audience. With such a flair for the dramatic, sometimes it's difficult to determine whether your behaviour is genuine or simply designed to produce an effect. Vanity is emphasised in your combination, and all that desire for attention is your way of bolstering your ego. You are easily led astray by flattery.

Although ardent, passionate, and intensely romantic, you need constant reminders of just how terrific you are. As naive in love as in other things, you're ready to be swept away by the person who sings your praises loudest. But it won't be long before you're off and running again, once the compliments begin to wear thin.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Virgo: The Worldly-wise

There is nothing flip or carefree about you. Much more reserved and down-to-earth than your fellow Sagittarians, you prefer to look before you leap. Your Virgo inner nature gives you an ingrained sense of obligation. You probably had to assume a lot of responsibility very early in life, which fostered your shrewd, realistic outlook.

You have a very subtle (almost sly) way about you. Extremely perceptive, you can always spot deceit, and your ability to detect other people's weaknesses is uncanny. Intuition is one of your greatest gifts. You seem to know when it is wise to take a risk or grasp an advantage, as well as when it is wise to lay low. Your wisdom, caution, and good judgement assure your success.

Eloquence is another gift of yours. Charming and soft-spoken, you know exactly how to appeal to the heart. Your way with words makes you an excellent salesman and a persuasive leader. Winston Churchill is an example of the highly evolved Sagittarius-Virgo.

Your spirit is restless, independent, and rebellious. But you prefer to live and work within a conventional framework. Though you are just as passionate and adventurous as your fellow Sagittarians, your emotional nature is somewhat reticent and uncertain. Whenever you feel you cannot meet the demands of your masterful and aggressive self-image, you may develop vague feelings of inferiority or depression. Don't run yourself down! You may not be as daring and courageous as you would wish but you have many other wonderful qualities which more than compensate.

You set extremely high, almost perfectionist standards for yourself. Never content with second best, you can work yourself too hard. Irritability and nervous strain often result when you find you cannot live up to the demands you place on yourself. Then you run the risk of taking your frustrations out on those closest to you. (Your sarcasm can verge on cruelty at times.) You must take more time out to enjoy life.

Your sense of duty is admirable, but don't let your devotion to work become an obsession. You have an excellent mind and amazing powers of analysis. Sagittarius gives you the ability to grasp the abstract and philosophical, and Virgo enables you to bring those ideas down to a realistic level. The philosopher Spinoza is a prime example of the versatile and intellectual Sagittarius-Virgo.

In love, you are a consistent, giving, and stable mate. But watch that tendency to nag and criticise your partner, particularly when things on the outside aren't going as well as you planned. Treat him or her with greater equality and respect. Although you're sensual and romantic like all Sagittarians, your Virgoan inner nature may give you a somewhat prudish attitude toward sex.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Libra: The Scholar

In your combination, broad-minded, philosophical Sagittarius ls joined with socially oriented, sensitive, and imaginative Libra. Most people know you as a jovial, optimistic, charming, and naive idealist. But there is also a very minus side to your nature: that of the scholar-philosopher who possesses amazing subtlety and insight.

You've got a strong independent streak and an unending faith in yourself and your future. Like all confident people, you have far-reaching goals. Your magnetic charm and high spirits work to your advantage, as does your ability to learn quickly. No doubt you will achieve recognition early in life, having pursued your own unique path to success. Your imagination is vivid, sometimes too vivid, and you can get carried away by your far-fetched dreams. Fortunately, no matter how far afield you drift, luck is always with you; everything seems to turn out just fine in the end. You probably have a great thirst for knowledge – particularly abstract knowledge. Preferring to deal with larger concepts, you are confused by details; you are far more intrigued by the wonders of the universe than by the prospect of balancing a cheque book.

You have a dynamic personality. No matter how profound and serious you may be, there is always something of the child in you. You're fun-loving and adventurous, and people find it hard to resist your wit and fresh appeal. You enjoy an active social life and you're likely to gain much respect and influence. But, like all those with the Moon in Libra, you've got a lazy streak and your dreams may simply remain dreams unless you develop the determination to follow them through. Also, you are somewhat captivated by glamour, and flattery and fame may blind your otherwise sound judgement.

Social insight is your speciality. You have an instinctive understanding of others and you are a natural diplomat. All fields involving human relations and social activism are ideal for the Sagittarius-Libra: counselling, law, politics, psychology, social theory, and teaching, to name a few. Professionally, you are dedicated, honest, and straightforward. You know how to adapt and adjust to life's demands, but you never compromise your beliefs.

You have no trouble attracting members of the opposite sex. Romantic and idealistic, you spend a lot of time searching for the perfect mate. But restlessness and the craving for variety in your love life often undermine that quest. Even when you feel you have found the ideal lover, the itch will eventually win out over fidelity.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Scorpio: The Crusader

In your combination, the idealism, lofty vision, and spirituality of Sagittarius is strengthened by an intense, determined, and ambitious Scorpio Moon. You've got some strong artistic and leadership impulses but you are also very independent and prefer to blaze your own special trail in life.

Free-spirited and adventurous, you furnish your life with variety and thrills. You've got plenty of rebellious fight in you and many Sagittarius-Scorpios have joined crusades and missions, hoping to find salvation for themselves or for others. Though you're noble and idealistic, self-righteousness often taints your good intentions. While you are busy building up your own unique philosophy and code of ethics, you are capable of closing your mind to the ideas and beliefs of others. You may appear rather distant and detailed (some Sagittarius-Scorpios are totally lost in a haze) but actually you are a very emotional individual with many biases and entrenched beliefs, Sometimes, the sheer intensity of your emotions distorts your perspective and better judgement. If others see you as arrogant, they are probably right: You really do set yourself apart from others. The American outlaw Billy the Kid is a good example of the independent and rebellious Sagittarius-Scorpio.

You have a wonderful ability to renew yourself. No matter how many setbacks or personal misfortunes you encounter, you will always bounce back from defeat. You have a probing, perceptive mind. With your strong spiritual and intellectual leanings, you could be a doctor, pioneering scientist, psychologist, clergyman or scholar. Controlling that wanderlust and learning to cooperate with people are the requirements for your success in the world. It's also important that you keep your emotions balanced and guard against extremes of thought and action. You do have a tendency to sensationalise and exaggerate. Try detaching yourself a little from your activities and developing a more objective outlook.

The unusual and the unexplored fascinate you; you love to delve deeply into exotic subjects. You also love to travel and you are lured by the magic of faraway places. Sensual and pleasure-loving, you want to experience as much as possible in life – and no doubt you will.

You have a strong sense of free will and no one can shackle your independent spirit. Whether you choose to apply and direct your many talents, however, or to ride off into that lonesome sunset in pursuit of some wild and unlikely dream, is entirely up to you.

A romantic through and through, you search for a kindred soul – one who shares your idealism and love of freedom. It’s not easy, however, for you to be faithful; no sooner have you fixed your devotion on one person than you are off in search of someone new. Eventually, you should settle down to a real, long lasting relationship. And lucky is the one who captures your heart!

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Sagittarius: The Absentminded Professor

There is no simple solution to life for the double Sagittarius. For you, the perennial philosopher, every facet of existence takes on cosmic, abstract proportions. Clarity of thought and lofty inspiration lift you above the masses and into the realm of the philosopher-king. Details bog you down, particularly mundane ones such as paying the rent or balancing a budget. Extremely absentminded and forgetful, yours is just not the most practical of combinations. Capable of ascending to great artistic and spiritual heights, you nevertheless have genuine difficulty when it comes time to return to earth. Fortunately, no matter how out of touch you may get, Jovian luck always helps you out at the last minute.

A natural teacher, you are capable of moving and engrossing an audience with your fiery enthusiasm and breadth of understanding. But you are never really sure just where you stand on major issues. Open-minded to an extreme, the influx of ideas and visions you experience can be overwhelming and you are never quite sure which set of rules you should follow. Although serious and drawn to the abstract, you tend to change your mind frequently. Before arriving at a decision, you weigh both sides carefully – so carefully that it often takes forever for you to take a stand. You also tend to live almost exclusively for the moment, ignoring the long-range consequences of your actions. Impulse and caprice rule your decisions, and chronic giddiness is common to the double Sagittarian.

Others may lust for gold and fame; you lust for absolute personal freedom. You need room for all those thoughts and dreams and plenty of space in which to move about and do exactly as you please. It is a rare double Sagittarian who does not travel far and wide, as travel (either in thought or deed) is essential to your health. Settling down and seeing some of those lofty goals through to completion is hard for you. Your expansive, freedom-loving spirit should never be constrained, but occasionally you should try to control some of those wilder impulses. Confusion is your worst problem: The ability to understand logic and metaphysics does not help you understand yourself or get through day-to-day living.

Once you have learned to control that restlessness and mastered a little patience, you may be able to bring some of those dreams and fantasies into reality. Then, you've got it made! Your terrific imagination, given the right circumstances, can lead you to great heights of accomplishment. You are also linked up somehow with the divine. Ludwig van Beethoven is a good example of the highly evolved and hard-working double Sagittarians.

Intensely romantic, many double Sagittarians walk around lovesick all the time. Even though you approach your love affairs with absolute seriousness, absentmindedness may cause you to forget things – like birthdays and anniversaries – that could be important to others. Your flights of fancy may be mistaken for coldness when actually the opposite is true. If anything, you are probably off in the clouds searching for the best way to express your love and appreciation. You enjoy sex, but you may renounce it altogether to fully pursue your intellectual interests. The confused otherworldliness of your combination can generate a strong religious streak, and you may devote yourself to your lover as one would to an idol.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Capricorn: The Comic

You are a very serious and down-to-earth Sagittarian. On the surface, you may seem carefree, optimistic and light-hearted, but underneath that happy-go-lucky persona is a very determined, somewhat profound, and ambitious individual. Although shrewd and practical, you tend to think in large, abstract terms. No matter how idealistic and optimistic you may appear, you have a hidden pessimism that often shows through. Like the laughing clown, you hide much sadness beneath that painted smile.

In youth, you may have been capricious and given to adventure, but as you grew older, you probably became intensely goal-oriented. Somewhat insecure, you probably feel a lot of uncertainty and even fear. Proving yourself to the world is one way you try to transcend and eliminate those feelings. To others you appear fun-loving and outgoing, but in reality you are very distant and detached. Isolation often poses a threat to the career-minded Sagittarius-Capricorn. Because you perceive the world as a place of struggle and hardship, ambition can become all-consuming and can even cut you off from those around you. You have the imagination, shrewdness and perseverance to accomplish a great deal, but don’t let ambition become everything. You place incredible demands upon yourself; try to relax more and to accept your true nature.

Very introspective, you spend a lot of time thinking about yourself – perhaps too much. Your combination indicates great wisdom and depth, but preoccupation with your own problems leads to extreme selfishness. Remember, you only get back what you put out: If you want to be loved and appreciated, you must try to give to others.

Humour is one thing you have plenty of. Your incisive remarks always hit home, though they usually emphasise the darker side of life. Although very serious, you may choose to play the role of clown or jester in your social life to protect your sensitivity and avoid getting hurt. Writer-humourist Woody Allen and satirist-philosopher Voltaire are both Sagittarius-Capricorns.

With your logical and precise mind, you win most arguments. Organised and highly efficient, you don't have any problem collecting your thoughts because you always know your own mind. Your perception of the world around you is amazing and you can do a lot for others by using your intellectual adeptness to expose malice and hypocrisy.

Insecurity is one of your problems on the road to romantic happiness. You will search long and hard to find a partner as sensitive and deep as yourself, for you are terribly afraid of losing in love. You must learn to overcome your imaginary fears if you are to sustain a good relationship.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Aquarius: The Trail Blazer

Charming, magnetic, and congenial, people seek you out because you are different. And if you were to have nothing else in the world, you could at least count on your individuality. You like to be involved with people and activities that hint of change and innovation. Foresight is your greatest gift. Always tuned to the future, you seem to know intuitively what tomorrow will bring.

When a Sagittarius-Aquarian is around, one can expect the unexpected. You set very high goals for yourself and follow them through with sincerity and dedication, but you are quite unpredictable. Benevolent, friendly and openhearted, you get unnerved whenever someone tries to impose on your freedom of movement or expression. Liberty is your favourite word and nobody, but nobody, can tell you what to do. Restless and unconventional, you often do and say things which are calculated to shock people, because there's nothing you dislike more than smug complacency.

You are usually a few steps ahead of everyone else, and you become confused and impatient when people can't keep up with you. Though you’re tolerant and forgiving by nature, that impatience can give you an air of arrogance. Your basic emotional nature is rather detached and remote, so it's difficult for you to be completely open in your relationships with others.

Even so, friendship is very important to you – and you've got some pretty far out friends! People admire you and try to emulate your independence. You have marked leadership potential, but you've got to stop now and then to let the rest of the world catch up with you. Surprisingly, though you espouse tolerant and democratic ideals, inside you have a rather autocratic, self-righteous attitude. You've also got a stubborn streak a mile wide, and once you‘ve formed some of those radical notions and convictions, they stick. Keep your mind open, especially later in life.

Your Aquarian inner nature gives you more common sense and practicality than your fellow Sagittarians have, but you are still somewhat naive. Your positive approach to the world and your magnetic charm generally work to your advantage, but there are times when a shrewder perspective is advisable. Enthusiasm and congeniality may take you far and wide, but they won't pay the rent.

Professionally, you must have freedom in whatever you decide to do. Your combination implies versatility. You have a mind for the abstract, and intellectual pursuits attract you. Urban planning, politics, and social and scientific reform are fields which may draw you. Some Sagittarius-Aquarians may be spiritual and intellectual pathfinders. Others will end up wilful rebels and dilettantes.

Romantic and idealistic in love, you need a partner who can at least tolerate, if not actively support, your ideas and share your zest for adventure. Experimentation is your speciality, and you have an uninhibited and unconventional attitude toward sex.

Sun in Sagittarius/Moon in Pisces: The Poet

There is a dreamy quality to the Sagittarius-Pisces. Sometimes you seem to live on a faraway cloud. You are guided almost exclusively by your intuition, somehow knowing who is worthy of your trust and who is not. You also have a remarkable imagination (which sometimes runs away with you), and you can confuse dreams with the real world. Adaptable and highly impressionable, you have a universal quality which enables you to survive in almost any environment. The one major drawback to your rich imagination and high degree of sensitivity is that it may be difficult for you to deal with reality. Flights of fancy characterise the Sagittarius-Pisces.

Often you may follow the path of least resistance. Instead of making your many talents work for you, you simply adapt and accommodate. Emotionally vulnerable, you tend to take on the attributes of those closest to you: friends, family, and associates. So, even though you have high ideals, you may let yourself down through fear or laziness. Setting other people up as paragons, you may be content to imitate or live parasitically. This is a pity, for the Sagittarius-Pisces who is more courageous will find that only the slightest effort can lead to greener pastures.

You probably have a great love of knowledge and travel. You long to explore other worlds, and this combination is well suited to the anthropologist or historian. Eventually those with Moon in Pisces may learn to tap their wonderful creative abilities, and can become poets or artists. Hopefully, your talents will be recognised at an early age, and you will receive the kind of training that will set you on the right path.

You are capable of immense happiness and have the ability to enjoy life to its fullest. An optimist by nature, you feel your present and future must be sunny. When reality impinges on your idyllic dream, you can easily deceive yourself in two ways: by accepting a false brand of contentment or by tuning out problems rather than dealing with them directly.

In love, you are extremely romantic and giving, and life without love is inconceivable to you. You run the risk of forming unhealthy associations, so it's necessary that you have a good understanding of yourself before embarking on any long-term relationships. You are easily hurt by rejection – real or imagined – so your partner must be someone who is sensitive to your needs and capable of understanding your delicate emotional nature. Fortunately, you do have the ability to renew yourself quickly after a disappointment in love. You probably won't ever forgive and forget, however.

CHAPTER TEN

CAPRICORN

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Aries: The Busy Beaver

One thing about Capricorn-Aries: They walk so fast, it can be exhausting trying to keep up with them. A bundle of energy, you are always on the move, and you attend to matters quickly and efficiently. This gives you an air of impatience and aloofness. Brusque and somewhat nonchalant, you take the rest of the world in stride while you attend to the business at hand. Though warm-hearted by nature, you often get so caught up in your immediate activities that you lose touch with the rest of the world. Self-centeredness is often apparent in this combination, but (despite what people may say) you are by no means selfish. You simply believe that God helps those who help themselves – and has little tolerance for those who are idle.

The diligent Capricorn-Aries has tremendous powers of concentration and will. Extremely ambitious and headstrong, you never give in to defeat. Outwardly you may seem cool and aloof, but deep down inside you are passionate, aggressive, and defiant. There's almost nothing conventional about you; a pioneer, you are always in the front ranks of those working toward progress and change.

Your personal life can be a bit of a soap opera. Love affairs usually involve much storm and strife.

Your Aries inner nature is not cut out for smooth, harmonious relationships, so you may channel most of your energy into a career, into meeting the goals you set for yourself. With your restless soul, it’s almost impossible for you to sit still. Even though you want to be loved and appreciated for the wonderful person you know yourself to be, it's not easy for you to find the time for intimate relationships or exploring the romantic, spiritual, and intellectual facets of life. Instead, you're content with the admiration and satisfaction you derive from your work. Ambition is healthy and you've got all it takes to go far, but in placing such a high premium on success, you may end up missing out on a lot of other things life has to offer. Try slowing down now and then. Expand your interests and activities.

Although usually as cautious as your fellow Capricorns, there are times when you can be pretty impulsive – especially when your fiery Aries spirit takes over. When things aren’t progressing as smoothly and efficiently as you would like, you become agitated. And when you are angry the rest of the world will be sure to hear about it! Try to think things through before you strike out in blind haste. And learn to be more patient with those who can't match your pace. You run on a very fast track, and unless you slow down now and then to let others catch up to you, you may be a very lonely success story.

In love, you are all fire and spirit. Passionate and experimental, you desire an active sex life. But you are not romantic, and even when you are attached to one special person, you may wander. Men and women of this combination tend to be domineering and authoritative in love and often choose passive, non-competitive mates.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Taurus: The Solid Citizen

Charm, inner security and worldly wisdom are your greatest assets, comfort and worldly goods your top priorities. Although just as ambitious and goal-minded as your fellow Capricorns, you‘ve also got a very sympathetic side to your nature. People trust you because they sense your innate stability, wisdom, and common sense. This is a charismatic combination, and one that can lead to considerable success and status.

Not one to indulge in self-pity or remorse, the Capricorn-Taurus faces the rigors of life with patience and determination. You set long-range goals for yourself and you have the tenacity to follow them through to completion. Since your presence is so calm and reassuring, and eloquence one of your great talents, you can softly cajole and persuade just about anyone of just about anything. Inherently honest, your intentions are always the best.

Stubbornness is one trait that can be a problem for the Taurean. You hold on to impressions and convictions with fixed intensity. Somewhat old-fashioned, it's difficult for you to accept changing life-styles and beliefs. Emotional rigidity can be your tragic flaw. You must keep your mind open and your opinions flexible. Don't let bias or entrenched attitudes run your life.

You also have a tendency to repress your emotions rather than dealing with them honestly and openly. As anger, tension, or frustration mount, you struggle to maintain that calm and self-controlled front. Occasionally it pays to open up and talk about how you really feel inside – with someone you can trust, of course. Otherwise you may be subject to bouts of depression or explosions of temper.

As your life may be fairly tension-free, you run the risk of adopting a smug or complacent outlook. Capricorns are ambitious by nature, but you may compromise simply because you are so easily contented. Sensual and pleasure-loving, you may have a tendency to let material comfort become your only goal.

Your combination gives you talents for organisation, management and long-range planning. The financial world may attract you, but you'll probably feel reluctant to pursue such a risky career. You need a stable income.

In love, you search for a partner who wants all the good things you want out of life. You will try to have a stable, supportive partnership, one that enhances your worldly status. Though sensual and affectionate, it would be good for you to be a little more experimental and imaginative in love.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Gemini: The Quick Study

You are a very dynamic and multifaceted Capricorn. You may seem rather conventional, but underlying that cool and conservative persona is a very restless and independent individual. You always know your own mind (even if it is constantly changing). You have a craving for variety and novelty, and you are likely to roam far and wide in search of it.

Knowledge is your god. An intellectual, you have a broad range of interests, and you are forever toying with new ideas and theories. You probably feel a strong desire to put some of those innovative ideas into practice. Like all Capricorns, you want to get ahead in the world, and, luckily for you, you have the talent to do so. Clever as well as profound, you know how to manoeuvre; so on the way up the mountain, no one will get the better of you. You also love to learn anything new. Although you have an abiding respect for tradition and old values, you are always exploring new avenues of thought.

Inner restlessness keeps you on the move, and it's a rare Capricorn-Gemini who can sit still for very long. Concentration is not your strongest point. No matter how brilliant you are (or think you are) you find it truly difficult to focus your talents, develop a consistent point of view, or apply your knowledge in any one direction. As your interests are so diverse and you are so receptive to any new theory or thought, in the end you may have trouble deciding where you stand. You are capable of great achievements, but only after you have narrowed down your interests and activities.

Another problem for the Capricorn-Gemini is haste. You are very impatient. Desiring instant gratification and recognition, you get befuddled when your labours don't reward you with on-the-spot applause. Because you are so anxious to get where you are going, you may end up delegating responsibility to dutiful subordinates. (They may end up doing the real work while you sit back and survey the big picture).

You are basically detached. If you are faced with a highly emotional situation, you become confused and you are never quite sure what to do. Often you resort to instant rationalisations as a way of dealing with your sudden rush of feelings. Watch that tendency to over-intellectualise. Let yourself be swayed by passion now and then.

Like all Capricorns you are a workhorse and your career is too often given priority over everything else in life. How many times have you found yourself contemplating a long weekend with nothing but work on your mind? You may have some wonderful talents to offer the world, but don't neglect your family and friends – or your health.

You have strong sex drives, but you are not particularly romantic. Companionship is what you seek in love; especially with one who shares your ideas and encourages your dreams. A stable relationship based on platonic compatibility is essential to your well-being.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Cancer:
The Tough Guy

On the surface, you try hard to maintain a tough, cool, and detached image, but despite that nonchalant air, you are actually a very sensitive and emotionally vulnerable individual. Insecurity is your main stumbling block. In order to contend with those deep-seated feelings of inadequacy and uncertainty, you can either resign yourself to despair and cynicism or build a tough shell to protect yourself from hurt and anguish. Janis Joplin was a Capricorn-Cancer, and her tough, hard drinking, one-of-the-guys image was widely, if belatedly, recognised as a cover-up for her genuine depth and sensitivity.

The Sun and Moon in this Combination are in opposite signs which make it likely that your early environment was strife-torn or at least unsympathetic. This fostered in you a strong sense of self-reliance and independence (and perhaps a cynical outlook). Many of your insecurities are traceable to your childhood. Your challenge is to begin to recognise your sensitivity as a strength rather than a weakness and to allow your true self to blossom. You are a capable individual. Value yourself and your talents. Self-acceptance and self-love are the two critical things for a Capricorn-Cancer to learn.

You are warm-hearted and compassionate – and in many ways ingenious. Your ability to see beyond surface impressions and your adaptability to change enable you to create new modes of understanding. Your only enemy on the road to success will be yourself: once you overcome self-doubt, there is little you cannot accomplish. The revolutionary physicist and mystic Isaac Newton was a Capricorn-Cancer.

You have a remarkable memory and a sharp wit. You see details that elude even the most acute observer, and you are blunt and outspoken in pointing them out. Your combination endows you with excellent leadership potential and much charisma, yet you seldom take advantage of this strength. Set apart from the crowd as you are, you choose neither to lead nor to be led. Essentially, you are an independent type, preferring the comfort of going it alone. Such self-imposed exile can develop into profound loneliness and isolation when added to that melancholy outlook of yours. It's essential for you to stay somewhat active socially, even if you are your own boss.

You have an overpowering need to be loved, but emotional difficulties may stand in the way of a successful and equal love relationship. That insensitive, aloof facade of yours turns a lot of people off. People will respond to whatever vibrations you put out, so try to show more warmth and affection – if you want to receive it.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon: in Leo:
The Dictator

You are a very ambitious individual with a healthy appreciation of yourself and your abilities. Much more extroverted and congenial than your fellow Capricorns, you can go far in life. People will always respond to your charm, magnetism, and determination; and they will respect you because you respect yourself.

And respect is what you crave. Proud and dignified, you want the attention and adulation your ego demands – and you have quite an ego! Your Leo Moon gives you very noble and lofty ideals. In youth, you were probably very idealistic, somewhat naive, and drawn to social and humanitarian crusades. But as you grew older – and shrewder – you no doubt sacrificed some of your principles in order to get the status, comfort, and prestige you felt you deserved.

For some Capricorn-Leos, the pursuit of power can become all-consuming. You never get over the feeling that you are innately superior to other people, and you only feel fulfilled when you are giving the orders. This combination can easily produce a dictator – or a would-be dictator. Mao Tse-tung is a good example of Capricorn-Leo.

Your attitude toward others is often patronising, and some may even consider you arrogant. Loyalty is your ideal: Once someone has won your trust, there is no end to your concern, warmth, and kindness. But to those who betray that trust, you can be ruthless, cold, and calculating. Insults or minor affronts to your vanity or dignity are often met with disproportionate anger. Maintaining personal dignity and decorum is your number one concern.

Excessive pride can be your undoing. Although you are wise and intuitive, there are times when you are wrong – but you will never admit it. As you feel you are always right and know what is best for you and everyone else, you will seldom compromise. You must try to become more flexible. Stubbornness and rigidity will only get you into trouble, undermining those goals you set for yourself. You are capable of wonderful accomplishments, if you don't let that ego of yours get in the way.

Willpower is your greatest strength. You have the ability to renew yourself, and accomplish anything you set your heart on, once you have learned to curb your pride and vanity. Your presence alone inspires the confidence of others. You're an optimist by nature, and your sunny charm and buoyant wit can lighten the heaviest heart, drama is your password and everything you do carries your stamp of originality. A Leo Moon gives strong creative drives. Don't stifle those artistic and imaginative impulses by letting power or status become your sole pursuit.

Love can be storm and strife for fun-loving and sensual Capricorn-Leos. As you're generally drawn to those who fan your ego, it will be difficult finding someone who will also put up with your eccentric whims. On the positive side, once attached, few can match you for generosity, loyalty, and concern. Just let your partner have a little freedom, and try to respect his or her wishes.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Virgo:
The Workaholic

Cold logic is your strength. In your combination ambitious, determined, and career-minded Capricorn is joined with analytical. Frugal and cautious Virgo. You are an individual with no illusions. A total realist, you see things just as they are. You do not waste time in idle fantasies. Pragmatic and efficient, instead of dreaming, you plan.

Although you appear tough, detached and even a bit cold, deep within you probably feel vague fears or uncertainty. To compensate for those fears, you strive to acquire as much status and power as possible. Like all Capricorns, you are very career-oriented, and you derive your greatest satisfaction from the respect and prestige your work provides. Responsibility is your middle name – and you are never really happy unless you have plenty of it. You possess tremendous resolve, inner strength and the willpower to overcome any obstacle. You've also got quite a mind and fantastic powers of concentration. Shrewd and calculating, you know how to win people over; but for many Capricorn-Virgos winning becomes everything. Involve yourself in all the joys of life, including the romantic and the spiritual. Don't let your job and status become an obsession.

No matter how detached and cool you try to appear, you are really quite a sensitive individual. Don't try to deny or cover up that sensitivity by playing a role that is at odds with your true nature. The fear of real or imagined weaknesses (and you hate the thought of having any weaknesses) opens the way to neurosis or self-destructive habits. Capricorn-Virgos are never satisfied. No matter how far you may go in life, something in you always says, "I haven't gone far enough." Learn to have a little more compassion for yourself. Everyone has limitations and you are no exception! Stop brooding over those little imperfections you are constantly finding in yourself. All Moon in Virgo natives are critical, but your criticisms are too often directed inward. The challenge for you is simply to accept yourself. Your combination is excellently suited for executive and leadership roles. That logical and astute mind of yours is ideal for intellectual endeavours. Once you put your mind to something, you won't be satisfied until you have mastered it totally.

Frankly, you are not very romantic, but a stable give-and-take relationship is very important to your emotional well-being. Learn to love yourself before attempting to love another. You can be a loyal and giving partner, but don't let work become a substitute for sex – and don't talk about your work when someone is making love to you! Let passion carry you away now and then.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Libra:
The Socialite

You are a very sensitive and idealistic Capricorn. You may seem tough, detached, and ambitious, but deep within lies a gentle, sympathetic, and very giving individual. Constantly searching for peace of mind, you mistakenly believe you can find it in others. You're not as shrewd as most Capricorns, and your faith in people is excessive. Somehow you feel the intricate riddle of your soul can be solved by those around you: so you are continually active – romantically as well as socially – forever seeking some groups, philosophy or person that will provide the inner harmony you crave so desperately.

In your quest, you may repeatedly have your heart broken, becoming disillusioned and perhaps even bitter as you discover that others cannot always live up to your expectations. True harmony and peace of mind can come only from within. Try putting some faith in yourself rather than seeking it elsewhere. Learn to value yourself, and develop a more independent outlook.

Your combination is in conflict. Capricorn's strong personal ambition conflicts with Libra's need to be loved and appreciated. You want to see everyone happy – even at the expense of your own happiness! You are also a bit timid about asserting yourself or giving substance to your ideas and aspirations (as though God were watching over you, ready to strike with a lightning bolt to punish you for such presumption). Your fears may cause you to repress your ambitions, and eventually you may be terribly disappointed in yourself. For some reason, you are afraid you will infringe on others if you push too far. Your challenge is to take some risks and work toward self-affirmation instead of self-denial.

You have a refined aesthetic sense and strong creative drives, but self-defeatism can squelch your artistic impulses if you're not careful. For the Capricorn-Libra, wisdom lies in introspection and courage – the courage to let your great Capricorn strength realise your dreams.

You are very romantic, but you also tend to idealise your lover. Relationships are extremely important to you, so make yours one that is realistic and healthy. Look for spiritual qualities, as well as material ones, when you choose your life-mate.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Scorpio: The Fighter

Never mind what mother told you, you always know what's best for you. As a child, you probably asserted your independence by tyrannising all your playmates. Few can match you, the enfant terrible of the zodiac, for sheer determination, boldness and aggression. Fortunately, you are quick to learn from your mistakes, and eventually you grow wiser and a lot less hot-tempered.

There are two sides to a Capricorn-Scorpio: the rampant sensualist and the conscientious reformer. There is nothing of Capricorn's stuffiness or inhibition about you. You take your world and yourself with utter seriousness and you are never reluctant to say just what you feel with candour and sometimes cruel honesty. Though you may appear detached and aloof, you are in fact a very emotional person and there are times when the intensity of your feelings carries you away. Nevertheless, you always have the capacity for hard work and creative activity.

You have very set opinions about the world. Although extremely perceptive, you've got a strong self-righteous streak in you, and your biases and entrenched attitudes generally have the last word. You have a rather callous disregard for others, as your own interests usually come first. Often your likes and dislikes are based upon whether or not something is to your advantage. Watch that tendency to be manipulative!

You don't shun reality; rather, you look for the loophole, the cosmic banana peel – and you look hard! With your penetrating insight, you could make an excellent detective, psychologist or scientist. You tend to be somewhat cynical in your approach to life; but as long as you have a clear goal in sight, you will be happy.

You've got a lot of fight in you: There's nothing you love better than an argument, especially an intellectual one. It's important for you to have a forum for expressing your views. As you are so emotional, it can be risky trying to keep your impressions and opinions locked up inside. Writing is an excellent outlet for some of those hidden passions.

As with all those who have the Moon in Scorpio, you can either probe the sordid depths of life or soar to amazing heights of spiritual wisdom. (You have probably done both; because you are so inquisitive, you want to experience everything.) Whatever you do in life, with all that determination, your fate is pretty much in your own hands.

In love, you are imaginative and sensual, but not very loyal. Capricorns like adventure, and you are no exception. Consequently, it's a rare person indeed who can hold on to you for a lifetime.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Sagittarius: The Happy-go-lucky

Your Capricorn personality is determined, ambitious, and somewhat aloof, and your Sagittarian soul is expansive, imaginative, and freedom-loving. Setting far-reaching goals for yourself, you have both to resolve and the vision to accomplish a great deal.

You are far less inhibited and much more outgoing than your fellow Capricorns; your charm and easy-going manner captivate people. Although a very serious and goal-oriented individual, you also love to have a good time. You seem detached, but it does not take much to bring out your wry smile, and though you are subject to occasional bouts of depression and melancholy, you never lose your underlying sense of humour. Your quick, offhand comments always hit the mark.

Yours is perhaps one of the most well-balanced of all the Sun-Moon-combinations. Your interests and activities cover a wide range. As with most Capricorns, your career must be within an organised and conventional framework, but your Sagittarian inner nature craves adventure and excitement. So it's essential that your work be enjoyable as well as enhance your prestige (you are very status conscious). You value your personal independence, and you must have the freedom to do as you please. Never happy unless you are the boss, your determination and intelligence usually take you right to the top, often in leaps and bounds. Your mind is logical, well organised, and practical, but you are also capable of abstract and imaginative thinking. Foresight is one of your greatest gifts: The perfect long-range planner, you respect tradition even as you try to envision tomorrow's needs.

You have a scholarly and profound air. Your youth may have been turbulent, but you no doubt developed strong intellectual interests. Philosophy draws you and you love to toy with abstract theories and ideas, hoping to find truth and a perfect system with which to govern your life. Highly ethical, you would never resort to ruthless behaviour in your quest for status and esteem.

As with all Moon in Sagittarius people, you experience capricious and wide-ranging moods. Serious and determined for days on end, you can suddenly become an impulsive and adventurous drifter. There are times when these moods (and your imagination) can carry you away and cause you to lose track of your long term goals. You need plenty of diversion and outside activity to channel some of that restlessness and curiosity. Travel is practically a necessity for your emotional well-being.

Much more romantic than your fellow Capricorns, you value loyalty and consistency in your love relationships. You usually choose a partner who can enhance your position in the world and encourage your ambition. Though ardent in love, you can get so caught up in your professional activities that your mate may sense some indifference. Try to be more generous with your time; expensive gifts can’t substitute for true affection.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Capricorn: The Sage

If you look back upon your childhood, you probably remember a lot of dos and don’ts, and very little love and affection. Also, you probably had to assume a lot of responsibility very early in life, which prevented you from having as much fun as other children. This may be one reason why you have a somewhat melancholic outlook.

You are a very serious individual. Somewhat shy and introspective, you project a sage like image, and indeed worldly wisdom is one of your greatest gifts. You seem to possess a knowledge that transcends time. Others perceive great maturity in you, and you are generally respected and admired.

To you, life is a continuous struggle, and because of that, you can be cold and very calculating. The burden of your early responsibilities and the lack of the support and understanding you needed as a child probably drove you to prove yourself to the rest of the world. Very ambitious, you are determined to triumph over whatever setbacks you encounter in life.

Your combination implies tremendous willpower, inner strength, and resolve. Your tenacity is hypnotic: When you encounter opposition you meet it head on, defeating your opponents with shrewdness and, sometimes, ruthlessness. Your mind is logical and precise, and you are always well organised. Efficiency is your creed.

The intensity of perception inherent in your combination can be focused upon creative endeavours. Although not very imaginative and generally serious, you do have a wonderful sense of humour, as you have a wry affinity for the darker, ironic side of life.

Most double Capricorns are drawn to well-organised, structured professions. You are comfortable when you have rules to follow and risk taking is at a minimum, which makes you excellently suited for bureaucratic or corporate positions. Your rise in the world is slow – step by step – and your material success is seldom accompanied by emotional contentment. Never satisfied with your accomplishments, you always want more: more status, more prestige, more money.

The challenge for you is to develop greater warmth and human kindness. A career must not become a substitute for love or an alternative to everything else life has to offer. Reach out. Try to understand others rather than using power or position to shield yourself from others. Learn to be more tolerant and open-minded.

You have strong sex drives, but not very much romanticism in your nature. Although a consistent, stable partner, you approach love quite coolly. Try to become more affectionate with your mate. Some double Capricorn natives may marry their careers or even be celibate.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Aquarius: The Prodigy

There is nothing of the conventional Capricorn about you. Your interests and activities are far-ranging and far out. Although serious, responsible, and practical, you are impatient with the tried and true, so you approach everything with an eye to change and innovation. The unknown and the unexplored fascinate you, and you also have the courage to experiment with new ideas and blaze new trails.

An Aquarian Moon gives ambitious Capricorn a strong sense of independence to go with the Capricorn craving for prestige and acclaim. High intelligence, remarkable intuition and magnetic charm combine to help you achieve success. You needn't fear loneliness, as your light-hearted charm will always draw people to you. Friends are vital to you – and you are likely to have many unusual and influential ones.

The conflict in your combination is simple. Like all Capricorns, you have an abiding respect for the past, and you feel you must conform to the pressures of society and parents. But your Aquarian inner nature gives you an equally strong need to be independent and to rebel against convention and tradition. Whenever you do assert yourself and run your life according to your own unique, independent perspective, you may feel a strong sense of guilt, as though somehow you are a traitor. As you are such a gifted and ambitious individual, it would be a waste of your talents if you chose not to follow your instincts. The inhibitions you feel are unrealistic: You have every right to choose your own special path to success and self-realisation.

But insecurity is often a problem. Like all Capricorns, you probably feel vague fears and uncertainties, despite your casual, self-assured manner. Your Aquarian imagination can sometimes compound this tendency, creating irrational phobias or even paranoia. The best way for you to gain confidence and self-esteem is to simply remain socially active and to pursue a vigorous and stimulating professional life. It's important for you to associate with people who can offer you emotional support and encourage your ambitions. And it's equally important that your career give you prestige and help bolster your pride in yourself.

Take care that your career does not substitute for a full emotional life. Although an active person by nature, if work becomes everything, you may become brusque and insensitive (when in fact the opposite is truly you).

You have no difficulty attracting members of the opposite sex, because your charm and personality are difficult to resist. Many romantic affairs are likely for you. You have a strong need for companionship and you are idealistic and naive in love; but it may be difficult for you to form strong emotional bonds with someone, simply because you are so detached and independent. Intimacy may seem to infringe on your need for personal freedom. On the positive side, you are a very loyal, tolerant, and forgiving partner.

Sun in Capricorn/Moon in Pisces: The Wizard of Oz

You are a very sensitive Capricorn. On the surface you may be cool, detached, and aloof but deep within is a very emotional, highly intuitive, and extremely perceptive individual. That tough facade is simply your way of protecting yourself from being hurt. Like all sensitive and impressionable folks, you feel it necessary to guard your emotions.

Your imagination is your strength. You have many dreams, and you also have the will, pragmatism, and ambition to give form and structure to those dreams. Like all Capricorns, you are deeply career-conscious, and you will work hard to realise some of those great ambitions. But compassion and kindness prevent you from resorting to the aggressive behaviour or unethical conduct which too often go hand in hand with success. Always careful not to infringe on another, your rise in the world will be slow but certain.

Unnecessary guilt and confusion are common to the Capricorn-Pisces. Extremely conscientious, you feel compelled to account for any slight wrongdoing on your part, even if it is imaginary – and you have quite an imagination. Although success is important to you, you may feel somewhat guilty about your ambitions. In addition, you have a tendency to take on the moods and neuroses of those around you, so it's important that you associate with people who give you emotional support and encouragement, avoiding people who may be harmful to your emotional well-being.

Painfully aware of sorrow and misfortune in the world, you have strong altruistic and sympathetic feelings. You also have an affinity for the darker side of life, which gives you a rather sad and melancholy outlook. You never indulge in self-pity; rather, you tend to suppress your feelings of remorse. (You pick up things at such a deep level that remorse is often the emotion you feel most strongly.) By suppressing those feelings rather than dealing with them openly, you can succumb to chronic depression.

Your combination holds much promise, however. You have the organisational and pragmatic abilities of Capricorn as well as the spiritual understanding and poetic inspiration of Pisces. So, although you are a realist, you are able to approach things with imagination and flexibility. Your depth and vision are conducive to a creative or artistic career, or your humanitarian sentiments may draw you to a political or spiritual path. That uncanny intuition of yours is also well suited to business and financial speculation. “Included among natives of Capricorn-Pisces are George Washington, Martin Lather King, and writer Edgar Allan Poe.

Much more romantic than your fellow Capricorns, you search for a lover who will send you flowers and poetry, and encourage your many dreams. Your combination is noted for unrealistic feelings of sexual insecurity. Shyness and inhibition may keep you from finding sexual and romantic happiness. You must learn to shake off those imaginary fears. Find a partner who can make you laugh – and who has the sensitivity to help you overcome your insecurities.

CHAPTER ELEVEN
AQUARIUS

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Aries:
The Pacemaker

You are a little too smart for your own good. Restless, highly strung and always ten steps ahead of everyone else (physically and intellectually), you become confused and irritated when you find that others can't always keep up with you.

Intuition, imagination, foresight, and originality combine to make you an exceptionally sharp and perceptive individual. In fact, individual is the word that describes you best. Headstrong and impatient, you want others to see and do things your way. No matter how ingenious, versatile, and clever you may be, selfishness and impulsiveness often undermine your efforts. Cooperation is not your strong point; you just have to be your own boss. Your bearing is aristocratic and, although you are always anxious to communicate your latest ideas, you have difficulty establishing a rapport with your audience because your enthusiasm to communicate is rarely matched with a willingness or ability to listen to others. You get flustered and impatient whenever you encounter what you feel to be ignorance or confusion.

People will judge you a fool as long as you judge them so harshly. Cultivate some tolerance and sympathy if you truly want to realise some of those grandiose visions. Your brilliance could make you a pioneering technologist, social theorist or scientist. Always tuned to the future, Aquarius-Ariens can usually be found in the front ranks of their chosen fields, working for progress and change. But it's essential that you learn to be more receptive to the insights and ideas of those around you.

Your emotional development lags behind your intellectual development. You're hot-tempered and inconsistent; your anger and indignation can be terrible to see. If you feel threatened, you may become irrational and erratic. All this stems from underlying feelings of doubt and insecurity. To compensate, you may adopt a tough offhand manner, believing the best defence is a good offense. But this tactic usually has the reverse effect: You simply make more enemies, Aquarius-Aries can be the combination of the visionary idealist and innovator, but much needs to be overcome. To begin with you must work on the emotional side of your personality. Then learn to place some trust in others. There will be little you cannot accomplish, once you learn to treat people tactfully and to respect what they have to say. In love, as in all things, you are impatient. Finding a partner who can put up with your mood changes is difficult, not to mention one who can relate to that constant flow of ideas! Your displays of warmth are often limited to occasional gestures of generosity rather than true affection or love. Only after you have brought that volatile emotional nature under control will the way be open to a successful and equal love relationship.
(Famous Aquarius-Aries are actor James Dean, author Ruth Rendell and comedienne Ellen DeGeneres)

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Taurus:
The Favourite Son

You are a little too magnetic for your own good. In your combination; visionary, idealistic and humanitarian Aquarius is balanced by practical, emotionally stable, and secure Taurus. Your idealism and lofty visions are tempered by shrewdness and realism. You like to think and act on a grand scale, and your mind is tuned to the abstract. Setting broad, far-reaching goals for yourself, you are a total individualist. You’re a natural leader, and people will follow you anywhere – and you are more than willing to lead them. An Aquarius-Taurus often feels a pronounced sense of obligation to his fellow men and women. A few natives of your combination include Adlai Stevenson, Ronald Reagan, and James Hoffa.

Your schemes and ideas run to the grandiose – and some of them are just plain comical. Never without confidence, you value your worth, and you can be a tough and formidable opponent when challenged. Your beliefs and convictions may change periodically, but you are stubborn and will never compromise your ideals. Unlike your fellow Aquarians, you don't act on impulse. You prefer to plan and deliberate before embarking on a course of action. And sometimes you consult the oracles, for you are quite superstitious.

Determined to put your dreams into action, you will take a risk if it seems sensible. People are drawn to your flair and admire your self-control and conviction. And the faith that others place in you is well-founded, for you are totally trustworthy – no matter how far out you can be at times.

You are capable of achieving much in life, provided you do not become victimised by your own flaws. You run the risk of becoming foolishly stubborn, biased, or overly rigid in your attitudes and behaviour. In your youth, you were no doubt experimental, toying with various ideologies and life-styles; but once you selected those which suited you best, you stuck with them. Once you make up your mind about something, that's it. Your pride and stubbornness can take on awesome proportions and result in arrogant, self-righteous, and even fanatical behaviour. It's vital that you learn to be more flexible and open to other ideas and opinions, for your bias and obstinacy can easily undermine those wonderful plans and dreams.

Socially, you are outgoing and congenial. You consider your friends your brothers and sisters, and your loyalty and concern know no limit. Highly perceptive, you are an excellent judge of character. Though you feel everyone should be as self-sufficient and independent as yourself, you also have a soft heart and your sympathy is easily aroused. Essentially practical and down-to-earth, you also possess a strong sense of showmanship: You love attention and will go out of your way to get it.

Emotionally, you tend to hold in feelings of frustration or injured pride, preferring to keep a stiff upper lip when things get rough. But you only suppress your emotions until you reach the breaking point, and then those nearby had better run for shelter.

In love, you are steadfast, loyal, and consistent, as well as imaginative. But your partner must be able to tolerate those wild temper swings and accept your stubborn streak. You are capable of achieving a long lasting relationship with someone you consider an equal.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Gemini: The Journalist

You are a very sharp individual: alert, perceptive and above all, mobile. There isn‘t much you haven't seen or done, because restlessness and a constant hankering for novelty and excitement keep you on the move. And through the experience you gain from your travels, mishaps, and adventures, you acquire a worldly wisdom which is incomparable.

An intellectual, whether a dilettante or a profound scholar, you love to toy with theories, ideas, and concepts – some of them pretty far out. You also love to investigate and explore, and your combination is often found in the charts of journalists. People and cultures fascinate you. Extroverted and congenial, you find yourself by observing the lives and life-styles of others. A reformer, you often become involved in projects and activities which emphasise change and innovation. Intuition is one of your greatest gifts: You somehow know just what tomorrow has in store. But you live so much for the future that you often forget the joys and wonders of the present.

Your charming and personable nature is difficult to resist. And no matter how sedate you may appear, you are truly happy only when you feel all eyes are on you. Sophistication and humour are yours, and one way or another you end up getting the attention you feel you deserve, just be careful that vanity does not become a weakness.

Your combination is very harmonious and suggests good health, versatility, and talent. But as your life is relatively free of strife and inner conflict, you may simply be coasting along. It is likely that you will accomplish a great deal in life – if you push yourself to the limit of your capabilities and resist the urge to just get by.

Although considerate to everyone you meet, you are basically unemotional. As you're caught up in your own uniqueness, it’s hard for you to establish close emotional bonds with anyone; so no matter how many friends you have, you always remain a loner. If you encounter an emotional situation, you become confused and flustered, never quite sure how to handle it. Fortunately, your cheery disposition compensates somewhat for your lack of emotional depth. Your sympathy is reserved for abstracts and ideologies – and you are very idealistic.

You are not, however, at all romantic. Your charm and mystique usually guarantee that you will succeed with the opposite sex. But your rather strong sense of independence and overall detachment make it difficult for you to be truly intimate. Many romantic affairs are likely for you; it's a rare Aquarius-Gemini who settles down to marry. The very idea of a lifelong commitment makes you shiver. If you do choose a permanent partner, you place the highest premium on companionship and intellectual rapport.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Cancer: The Stiff Upper Lip

You may seem the typical Aquarian, detached and remote, but underlying that cool, intellectual facade is a very sensitive, sympathetic, and highly impressionable individual. Of all the combinations, yours is one of the most imaginative, magnetic, and (above all) perceptive.

You have tremendous depth, insight, and intuition. Keenly aware of your own limitations and somewhat insecure, you always judge others as you would judge yourself – with compassion, tolerance and patience. People invariably feel comfortable with you, for they sense your trustworthiness and are attracted to your romantic and somewhat offbeat manner. Empathy and adaptability are two of your strengths. You can intuitively identify with all kinds of people. As at home in an Irish pub as in an elite social setting, there is nothing pretentious or snobbish about you.

Your creative imagination knows no limit. Tuned to the future, you are capable of realising your many dreams and visions – and you are quite a dreamer! You are likely to have many interests, for your curiosity about the world around you is inexhaustible. Natives of Aquarius-Cancer include Franklin D. Roosevelt, Norman Mailer, and Clark Gable.

A Cancer Moon exacerbates Aquarian inconsistencies and insecurities. For example, male natives of this combination may try to compensate for deep-seated fears and cover up their emotional vulnerability by adopting a tough, macho veneer. Or that fertile Cancer imagination can cause extreme paranoia; Aquarius-Cancers can also easily become eccentric hermits.

Although occasional escape and withdrawal may be necessary to your emotional well-being, see that it does not become your only response to frustration or setback. All Cancer-Aquarians should remain socially active in order to combat the more negative manifestations of their imaginations.

Like all those born with the Moon in Cancer, you tend to hold in hurts and frustrations indefinitely, which may foster neuroses. Much, of course, depends on your early home environment – whether or not it was stable and emotionally supportive enough for you to develop a positive self-image. But no matter what your past, all Aquarians can gain security and a healthy outlook through social activities. If security was not found in the childhood home, then your charm and affability practically guarantee this support from friends and mentors later on in life.

Very romantic, you are likely to have quite a few intense and passionate affairs. You look for a mate who can provide you with emotional encouragement as well as intellectual stimulation. As a partner you are giving, tolerant, and affectionate and you are certain to treat your lover as an equal. But like all Aquarians you are inconsistent and erratic, so you are likely to drift from one affair to the next.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Leo: The Puzzle

You vacillate between self-assertion and overaccommodation, authority and acquiescence. Your Aquarian nature compels you to be a nice person, a friend to all, and to treat people as equals. But your Leo inner self is authoritative, dignified, and commanding. In your heart, you want to take the lead and exert that authority, but your need to be loved and appreciated by everyone often holds you back.

The two signs of your combination are completely opposite in nature and temperament, which gives you a complex personality with many inner conflicts. Confusion as to who you are or who you should be is common to all Aquarius-Leos, but most eventually resolve their difficulties by striking a balance. Rather than denying yourself the status and power you inwardly crave, you will pursue an ambitious life; but you will at all times remain thoughtful and compassionate in your dealings with others.

Your combination indicates very high intelligence, as well as great drive, dedication, and purposefulness. But decision making may be difficult for you; you are always uncertain whether to trust your heart or your mind. Like all Aquarians, you view things from a detached, intellectual perspective. But since your Leo inner nature is quite emotional, your heart almost always has the final say in your affairs. Impulsive, you are prone to acting on sudden, unpredictable hunches – in which often turn out to be disastrous. Even though you are absent-minded and forgetful, you do learn from experience and eventually, through trial and error, you succeed in anything you attempt. Commitment is one of your favourite words. Dedicated and sincere, you are not content until you have mastered whatever you are involved in.

Your childhood was very likely strife-torn or limiting in some way. This may have led you to senseless rebellion and inner turmoil, especially in your youth. Many Aquarius-Leos are drawn to the spiritual and occult (and are often led astray by religious cults offering instant salvation). Find a constructive outlet for expressing your remarkable imagination and independent spirit. As both signs of your combination are fixed signs, you must see that stubbornness, excessive pride, and intolerance do not stand in your way to success or hinder your ability to get along with others. You have a strong sense of the dramatic and, like all Leos, you crave admiration and attention. Although your occasional flamboyance and little eccentricities are often humorous, others may not always appreciate them. A Leo Moon gives strong creative drives and you are probably drawn to the arts. But whatever you do has flair and originality.

You are very romantic and seek the comfort and stability of a family. As a partner you are devoted, since loyalty is your highest principle. But you do tend to be a little moody and unpredictable, and it's important that your mate appreciate and respect your rather complex emotional nature.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Virgo:
The Analyst

Like your fellow Aquarians, you are kind, considerate, and congenial. You are also very detached. And detachment is one of your greatest strengths. Although sensitive, you are basically an intellectual, and your ability to coolly separate yourself from your surroundings enables you to perceive things objectively. Your powers of analysis and perception are unmatched. Unfortunately, many Aquarius-Virgos analyse themselves and everybody else right out of existence!

For you, life is geared to the mind rather than the heart. Far removed from emotional heat, you prefer the rational approach to life. Your Virgo Moon gives you an underlying sense of duty, responsibility, and efficiency. Drawn to the abstract, you tend to reserve your affections for great causes and for humanity as a whole. Your combination is ideal for the doctor, nurse, social worker, or anyone who needs to remain detached from the immediacy of suffering, rendering their services with logic and objectivity.

Your combination produces many intelligent and inventive individuals, who go through life feeling somewhat alienated from those around them. Vague feelings of superiority may cause you to develop an arrogant or snobbish attitude. You should associate with all kinds of people to avoid isolating yourself behind a wall of intellectual aloofness.

As you are so perceptive (and a perfectionist, as well) you may become hypercritical, agitated, and easily discontented when things don’t live up to your expectations. Precision and accuracy are your ideals, but don't let them rule you. Develop a more tolerant and relaxed outlook – or you will suffer much tension. As with all natives of Moon in Virgo, you find your greatest satisfaction in hard work and you have a very deep sense of duty. It's essential for you to keep busy with many outside diversions: Overwork or overexposure to tense or stressful situations can trigger a variety of psychosomatic ailments.

A Virgo Moon gives form and structure to Aquarian inspiration and idealism. Some people with this combination are able to put their intellectual prowess into wonderful creative expression. James Joyce and Gertrude Stein are two exemplary Aquarius-Virgos. You are not a very romantic person. Your emotional reserve inhibits intimacy in a relationship. But, on the positive side, you are a loyal, generous, and devoted partner. You need a mate who can share your intellectual and professional interests.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Libra:
The Idealist

In your combination, Aquarian inspiration, ingenuity, and originality are focused on romantic, social, and artistic endeavours. You are somewhat cool and detached, but nevertheless you have great charm and magnetic appeal. Uninhibited, you express everything you perceive and feel with total openness and candour, which makes you relatively free of psychological problems. Yours is a very harmonious combination and all your many talents can find positive expression.

You are very idealistic. Believing in the innate goodness of people, you treat everyone with tolerance, respect and kindness, and most people respond positively. Your optimistic approach to life is both admired and appreciated. But trusting and good-natured as you are, confusion strikes when you discover that not everyone possesses your standards of integrity. You probably find yourself watching dumbfounded as others more shrewd and cunning pass you by in the-game of life. Your ideals may have been formed in heaven, but since you don't live there, you've got to develop a more realistic perspective.

There is a dichotomy in your nature. Although you treasure tranquillity and inner peace, you are also very highly strung and feel a constant urge to stay active. Therefore, the harmony you require can be elusive. Both signs of your combination are socially oriented, so friends are vital to you and your social surroundings often determine the way you feel about yourself. If you develop healthy and supportive relationships, you should be able to sustain a positive self-image. As you are a peace-loving individual, tension and discord truly upset your emotional balance, so try to place yourself in a work and home environment that is as free of tension as possible.

You need to withdraw occasionally for introspection and contemplation. Otherwise, you can almost completely lose yourself and your identity in your frantic social involvements. Stop involving yourself so much with other people, and give yourself some thought now and then.

Imagination is one of your greatest strengths. You have a visual mind and a more-than-active fantasy life. Just don't lose yourself altogether in those dreams! That imagination of yours works overtime and may be the source of many irrational fears. On the positive side, if given the proper focus and discipline, your imagination can be successfully applied in many artistic and creative endeavours, particularly music. Or you might find yourself attracted to human relations work. Whatever you choose to do, your interests must be narrowed down, focused, or else you run the risk of dispersing your energies in a thousand directions.

Your romantic life often spells turmoil. You are more enchanted with the idea of love than with maintaining a relationship. You also tend to place your partner on a pedestal, like some delicate art object. Male Aquarius-Libras are chivalrous, devoted – and easily duped. Females are equally devoted and loving and just as easily led astray (especially by flattery). Cultivate a little discrimination and develop a more realistic approach to love – and you will surely save yourself some tears.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Scorpio: The Independent Thinker

You are a little too charismatic for your own good. You always leave a permanent and forceful impression on those you meet. And the impression will be either terrific or terrible, because there is nothing neutral about you. In fact, extremism is the most salient characteristic of the Aquarius-Scorpio.

Obstinacy is your curse: You have very strong desires, incredible determination, and a mighty healthy respect for your own independence. No one tells you what to do or how to run your life. So, no matter how many mistakes you make, the responsibility is all yours in the end. You follow your unique course in life, seldom listening to the advice of others. And that stubborn pride can be your downfall.

There is a basic conflict in your combination. An Aquarius Sun gives you strong humanitarian instincts and a need to be of service to society; but your Scorpio Moon is shrewd and somewhat self-centred. Thus, you are never sure whether to follow the call of your lofty ideals or simply work toward satisfying your own desires. Most Aquarius-Scorpios choose to meet the demands of their egos; and more often than not, guilt is the result.

Sensual and materialistic, you want comfort and recognition above all. But in pursuit of your goals and ambitions, you may lose perspective, becoming egocentric and even ruthless. Although you are experimental and open-minded, your Scorpio Moon gives you deep seated biases and entrenched beliefs (some of them a little far out), and you may become confused and incensed when you find that others do not always share them.

Both signs of your combination are fixed signs, which means that when the going gets rough, rather than bend with the wind you are more likely to snap, taking out your anger on those around you. Learn to develop a more relaxed and, above all, tolerant outlook. Emotional rigidity and a self-righteous attitude will get you nowhere. On the positive side, you have the ability to renew yourself. Like all those with Moon in Scorpio, you are always changing and have the ability to bounce back from defeat. In some highly evolved Aquarius-Scorpios, there is a pronounced sense of mission and strong creative genius. It is entirely possible for a Scorpio Moon to strengthen and uplift Aquarian inspiration and humanitarianism, producing innovative scientists, scholars or reformers. One thing is certain: The Aquarius-Scorpio has a great deal of courage; so whatever you choose to do in life won't be done halfway.

Many romantic relationships are likely for you. Although passionate and zealous in love, you are quite unpredictable, and your mate may have to put up with more than a few inconsistencies (not to mention temper tantrums). Your emotional nature is intense, and you have a tendency to sensationalise and exaggerate. Try not to overreact, and learn to heed some of your partner's wishes.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Sagittarius: The Dilettante

You are a deep thinker, given to the abstract and the philosophical. Extremely independent and imaginative, you are broadminded and fond of the exotic. Easily bored with the tried and true, you continually search for novelty and adventure. Inspiration is the key to your nature, but unfortunately your inspiration is not always grounded in practical reality. Your combination can sometimes produce the reckless drifter, content to wander from one new experience to another, always experimenting, but never mastering. Dilettantism is all too apparent in the unique combination of Aquarius-Sagittarius.

Although intellectually inclined, you believe that experience is the best teacher and action the best use of knowledge. Forsaking the scholarly or the academic, you prefer instead to discover and create your own worlds and ideals. You have a thirst for travel, particularly in youth when your desire for independence reaches its peak. Settling down and applying your gifts doesn't come easily, especially then. The challenge for you is to give practical expression to some of those visions by focusing your talents on a single pursuit. You are honourable and conscientious, but any commitment to work, study, or profession too often feels like an imposition on your freedom, making it extremely difficult for you to develop the discipline and dedication necessary to accomplish something substantial.

Your independence is admirable and attests to your courage, but it's important for you to learn to adapt to life's realities. Your rebelliousness may extend late into life, and eventually all that nonconformism may seem to have been simple selfishness. If you can learn to control that tendency, there is little you cannot accomplish. Natives of your combination include Charles Dickens, Charles Lindbergh, and Mozart.

A Sagittarius Moon can uplift the creative imagination and originality of Aquarius, resulting in a very inventive and pioneering individuals – whether in politics, the arts, or the sciences. Your positive outlook and your casual, irreverent manner always attract people to you. Some may find you a bit peculiar because, like all Aquarians, you are eccentric. And some of your more unconventional interests may seem a little weird to most people. But you just love being different! Civilisation be damned! You'll go your own way every time because you prefer it that way.

In love, you are an idealist and a romantic, but your curiosity about members of the opposite sex is endless, so you will undoubtedly have many affairs. Because of your extreme individualism, you may not fare well in a traditional marriage. If you should choose to settle down permanently, make sure you have an unconventional living arrangement. Find a partner who respects your freedom and fans your intellectual enthusiasm.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Capricorn: The Trend Setter

Your creed is individualism. Though friendly, magnetic, and exuberant like your fellow Aquarians, you are basically detached and extremely independent. You believe in the inherent right and dignity of the individual: "God helps those who help themselves.” In your combination, Aquarian imagination and foresight is grounded by a practical, ambitious Capricorn Moon. You have a gleam in your eyes that hints of genius (or, in some, madness). But no matter how inspired you may be, you never lose your underlying stability and pragmatism. Famous Aquarius-Capricorns include Thomas Edison, Abraham Lincoln, actress writer Ayn Rand, and Charles Darwin.

You have a healthy self-respect. Innovative, you are unafraid to express your latest opinions and views. Although you adhere to formality and convention and have an abiding respect for tradition, you continually work to create new forms of expression and application, You're a formidable debater, and few can match you for sheer wit and persuasiveness.

Cold logic is one of your great strengths. That ability to icily detach yourself from your emotions and view things objectively makes you a superb analyst, theorist, and administrator. You draw your conclusions strictly from observation, and bias or emotion seldom colour your perceptions. Too often, however, once you've formed your opinions, you become attached to them forever. Conviction can amount to fanaticism in some Aquarius-Capricorn.

Socially, you are always the extrovert. Charming and congenial, you never lose that air of remoteness which sets you apart. People sense the determination you keep hidden under that sunny, light-hearted persona. As with all Aquarians, friendship is vital to you. But in choosing friends you are calculating, preferring those who can help to enhance your status and image. You do have strong humanitarian sentiments, but you believe the individual is totally responsible for himself – and the weakness of others can therefore make you impatient. You've done it all for yourself: why can't they? It's not that you are unkind or callous. It’s just that you are so self-sufficient and secure that it’s difficult for you to understand people who have emotional problems. You must learn tolerance. Try to have more compassion toward those less self-sufficient than yourself.

In some Aquarius-Capricorns, ambition and the desire for recognition can become all-consuming. No matter what your early background, you are bound to rise above it through willpower and ingenuity. But don’t let success become your only concern in life. You have a strong need for companionship, and you should allow yourself to develop close relationships.

In love, you are loyal and consistent – but, frankly, you are not very romantic. You are also just a bit too concerned with your own needs, so you may neglect some of your partner's. You will probably find that many people are attracted to you; be sure that you choose a mate who respects your need for freedom and recognition.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Aquarius: The Nonconformist

Fascination is the key to your character. An Aquarius-Aquarius can often be recognised by that faraway glint in the eye. You are constantly alert to the novel, the unseen and the untried. Highly strung and very energetic, you are always preoccupied with some new, all-consuming interest. Whether it's deciphering ancient secrets, living among Stone Age tribes, or peering through a microscope, your curiosity and taste for the exotic are insatiable.

You can go far in life, because in your searches you may actually find something which wins you recognition. Often, however, double Aquarians become so involved in their unusual quests that they begin to lose touch with real life; or their findings are just so far out that the rest of the world doesn't appreciate them until many years have passed.

You possess considerable intelligence, imagination, and a special kind of intuition. Always tuned to the future, you somehow seem to know what tomorrow will bring – and sometimes what the next century will bring. But you do tend to be somewhat inconsistent. Though you begin a project with single-minded dedication, your interest and enthusiasm usually fade quickly. “What are you up to this week?" is a common query put to the adventuresome and erratic double Aquarius. Your main challenge is to find an activity or pursuit which will focus and hold your attention.

Magnetic and extroverted, you are nevertheless uncertain and insecure about yourself. Friends are important to you, and it's essential that you have many diverse, interesting associations. And associations are what they should be called. You are so detached that it's nearly impossible for you to become truly intimate with anyone. It's equally rare for you to hate anyone, you like to be considered a “friend” to all. People are drawn to your uniqueness and your offbeat charm, but they can also be repelled by some of your more eccentric qualities and by your outrageous independence. There is an unpredictable quality about you that can be downright scary and may cause people to keep their distance. Let's face it: You are a little strange and nothing is going to change that! You must learn to accept your own uniqueness; then, perhaps others will find it easier to be comfortable around you.

Professionally, you are drawn to work which allows maximum freedom and independence while satisfying your endless curiosity. Fields that might appeal to the double Aquarius include science and reporting. Your intuition can be uncanny in business; but since you are not very practical, be wary of any big financial undertakings. Although you can get along with just about anyone, your volatile temper and stubbornness hinder your ability to work under supervision or in close association with others.

You are probably very popular with members of the opposite sex, since your nervous energy and self-assurance give you a certain mystique. Nevertheless, you are always baffled by people's interest in you. You do, however, generally reward them for their interest; you have no secrets, and you are more than willing to talk about yourself. Yours is not a very romantic combination, but you do have a strong need for companionship. As a lover, you are, above all, kind, tolerant and forgiving.

Sun in Aquarius/Moon in Pisces: The Confessor

Aquarius-Pisceans often look as though they have just stepped out of a dream and are having some difficulty making the adjustment to reality. There is a "spacey" quality about you, and you seem to exist in several dimensions at once. Perceiving the world as a whole, you become confused when it‘s time to separate the parts. Your strength lies in your compassion: You are able to identify and empathise with just about everyone.

You are a humble, generous, and somewhat innocent soul. No one has to tell you the difference between right and wrong, because your integrity is innate and your wisdom inherent. But your spirituality is not always matched with practical common sense. Totally trusting, you are almost without guile or shrewdness. You put absolute faith in others, and you would be a sheep among wolves were it not for the kindness you engender. Luckily for you, people invariably respond in a positive way to your naiveté.

Because of the highly spiritual nature of your combination, you may seek a religious path (and some Aquarius-Pisceans may be drawn to a monastic life simply to escape the pressures of a maddening world). As you are so attuned to the occult and the mysterious, more practical souls may judge you odd or eccentric. The founder of the Vedanta Society, Sri Rama Krishna, is an example of a very evolved Aquarius-Pisces.

You have a highly visual mind and a strong imagination. With the proper push and guidance, you could excel in artistic and creative pursuits. But you really do need discipline and direction from others in order to succeed. Otherwise, you are somewhat anchorless and tend to drift about in a sea of otherworldly confusion. It would probably be difficult for you to succeed in a highly technical or competitive field, though you might be drawn to it. Stick to the kind of work in which you can utilise your altruistic and humanitarian urges or your strong clairvoyant talents.

Your Aquarian detachment may lead others to believe that you aren't very sensitive. The reverse is actually true. You soak up the tension in your environment like a sponge, and you are tremendously influenced by your surroundings. Occasional time out for meditation, reading, or listening to music would be good for you; just be careful that these isolating activities don’t lead you away from all social involvement. You do need companionship!

You are a very romantic individual, imaginative in love, although this may not be readily apparent to those who are just getting to know you. You've got to be particularly careful that you choose a partner who appreciates your sensitivity and who gives you much love and affection in a demonstrative way.

CHAPTER TWELVE

PISCES

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Aries: The Underdog

You have the sensitivity and compassion of Pisces, plus the impulsive energy and drive of Aries. A veneer of reserve and shyness masks your true intensity and ambition. People are always surprised whenever you drop your humble guise to become outspoken and decisive. Even though you may look like a babe in the wilderness, you are by no means naive; you are actually a very independent and self-sufficient individual.

Cunning, shrewd, and subtle, you know how to get your way through charm and subtle persuasion. (This is especially true of the female Pisces-Aries.) You are compassionate, generous, and kind, particularly to yourself. You have a healthy respect for yourself, and you are always looking out for your own interests first. Not that others are unimportant; you are just more important. You know what you want from life – comfort and plenty of security – and your remarkable intuition assures that you will get it. That remarkable sixth sense of yours always lets you know instinctively whom to trust and whom to avoid.

As with all Moon in Aries natives, you are very impulsive and you love excitement. Risk taking just for the sport of it may be what you thrive on, and can also get you into trouble. Curb your impatience and learn to slow down now and then.

Your Aries Moon gives you strong ambitions and a need to assert yourself; but your Piscean nature is somewhat inhibited, so when the time comes for action, you may hesitate. In addition, you may feel somewhat guilty about aggressive behaviour, not wanting to surpass those who are weaker than yourself. You have to learn that self-fulfilment need not be at the expense of others.

Your quick intelligence, charm and versatility combine to help assure your success once those inhibitions have been overcome. When you have attended to your own needs, your true generosity of spirit and compassion will blossom. You have strong protective instincts and your sympathy is always with the underdog. But see that you don't become condescending for some Pisces-Ariens, helping others can merely be an ego boost.

Professionally, your Sun-Moon combination is conducive to leadership positions, particularly in charitable and service-oriented organisations. In addition, your sharp, intuitive mind would be well suited to a career in medicine or engineering. Your Pisces imagination and artistic ability are enhanced by a self-expressive and emotionally charged Aries inner nature, so you could become a prolific artist. Renoir is a good example of an evolved Pisces-Aries.

You tend to be melodramatic. Despite your reserve and mild manner, your temper is difficult to hold in check. All Pisces-Ariens must cope with underlying tension and anxiety, and some may repress their aggressive instincts, causing a variety of psychosomatic illnesses. You can avoid some of these problems if you find some constructive outlets for your pent-up energy.

Sex is one such outlet. Highly sensual, experimental, and imaginative in your lovemaking, you are a fascinating partner. Often, however, you build unrealistic fantasies around your mate, and then become outraged when he or she does not match your high expectations. You can also be extremely jealous – sometimes without cause. You have a right to expect fidelity from your partner, since you yourself are completely faithful and devoted. What you must learn is to choose a lover who will be completely open and honest with you, reciprocating your affection, kindness and generosity.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Taurus: The Artist

You may seem the typical Piscean – sensitive, introspective, and otherworldly; but underneath that humble persona is the stability, determination and common sense of Taurus. You possess an inner serenity and peace of mind that others find compelling. Like your fellow Pisceans, you are sympathetic and conscientious, always willing to lend a helping hand. But you also value yourself, and thus you know when to say no; you never become someone else's doormat.

Ideally, your practical Taurus Moon will enable you to bring your Piscean dreams and poetic visions into reality. You have a colourful, visual imagination which can be put to use in highly creative ways, and your combination has produced many artists, writers, and musicians. But the same Taurus Moon which gives you such a worldly perspective may also keep you earthbound. You have a lot of determination, and whatever you set out to do in life is approached with complete dedication and commitment. Too often, however, a Pisces-Taurus will choose a career that doesn't fully utilise his or her true abilities – one that offers no risks and few real challenges. Leisure-oriented, you are often attracted to the prospect of an easy life.

You are also very sentimental and your emotionalism can get out of hand at times, causing you to lose your perspective and your normally sound judgement. Many Pisces-Taureans are so nostalgic that they live in and for the past. Once you feel that you have accomplished something, there is a great temptation to relax, thriving on the memory of a job well done. It's fine to be proud of past accomplishments, but you must also learn to live more for the present.

Your combination suggests health and stability, so no matter how far your imagination carries you, you always manage to get back safely to reality. You also have a wonderful inner confidence, and people, sensing your wisdom, often turn to you for advice. But, as with all natives of Moon in Taurus, you do have a tendency to cling stubbornly to first impressions and beliefs. No matter how far out you may seem, and some Pisces-Taureans are very far out indeed, you are basically a conservative. You must try to combat some of your biases and entrenched attitudes. Loosen some of those emotional convictions and keep your mind open.

Another difficulty for the Pisces-Taurus is the expression of real feelings. The men of this combination, in particular, may adopt a tough, macho-type exterior that is incongruent with their true sensitive nature. You are a very emotional individual and you must learn to deal with your feelings honestly and openly. Otherwise, you will be subject to a variety of psychological ailments.

Romantic and sentimental in love, you are always generous with your affection and attention. Piscean imagination and Taurean sensuality combine to make you an attractive partner, capable of great loyalty. Just guard against that tendency to be overly possessive of the one you love.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Gemini:
The Artful Dodger

You are several very clever individuals! More like three or four people than one, you change your personality so often that it's difficult for people to know the real you. Your combination endows you with a high intelligence quotient, amazing intuition and ingenuity. But above all, you are a terrific role-player, the perfect actor and con artist. You can go far in life simply by using your wits. Clever and extremely adaptable, you know exactly what people want – and you're willing to play any part in order to see that they get it.

You always seem to be on the move. Your Gemini Moon gives you a restless and tree-spirited nature. Charming in your own sly way and very amusing, you have no trouble winning friends. And you do need them, even if it is only to help you out of the scrapes you so often get yourself into. Your intuition also helps you get by: you need that too because, although you are quick and clever, you just don't have much common sense. Scheming is one of your favourite pastimes. You've usually got a dozen ideas, inventions, or grandiose projects brewing, but as you are so flighty, it's rare that one of them sees the light of day.

Indecision and vacillation plague the Pisces-Gemini. You find it difficult to make up your mind, set an objective, or express your convictions. Impressionable to an extreme, you are never sure whether your latest idea is yours, or whether you have inadvertently picked it up from someone else. “Where to go and why" is the question you often pose to yourself.

The challenge for you is to establish a stronger sense of identity. This can be achieved through deeper introspection and, above all, discipline. Control that restless spirit and cultivate a little patience. Define your goals and stick to them. Put yourself in an organised working and living environment. Most important, since you absorb the colour and mood of your surroundings like a chameleon, be sure that those surroundings are healthy for you. Stay away from shady or inconsistent people.

You are an idea person, and your solution to any problem is often the most original. Many of your plans and ideas are in fact quite ingenious. But you need to work along with someone who has the practicality and patience to bring some of them to fruition. If you find such a partner, there's no telling what the two of you may accomplish together.

In love, as in all things, you are inconsistent; usually having several affairs going at once, you are genuinely smitten with whoever is nearest. Although you do have a generous kind of spirit, your behaviour can at times be quite cold and callous. Once you have become more comfortable with your own identity, the way is open to a successful love relationship. It's possible, however, that this won‘t happen until you are well into middle age.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Cancer: The Settler

Your combination suggests tranquillity, emotional balance, and self-sufficiency. You intuitively know what is needed and what must be done to acquire security and happiness, and your sensitivity enables you to adjust easily to almost any situation without losing yourself in the process. This combination is one of the most creative, and has produced many fine artists, dancers, and musicians. Your potential talents are almost unlimited. Only one thing is lacking: the drive. Your problem is not one of inner conflict, but the absence of it. The elements in your combination flow too harmoniously. Impetus to achieve and to develop your abilities must be cultivated; otherwise, you settle for second best. You are too easily satisfied with the comfortable and the sure. In hard times you may be an excellent survivor, but you don’t have the necessary verve to maximise your opportunities when things are going well. For a female Pisces-Cancer, there is great temptation to give up a promising career for home and family. For the male of this combination, the stimulus to achieve often fades early.

The challenge for Pisces-Cancer is to maintain a disciplined and active life. Set your sights on long-lasting and fulfilling goals. Curb that impulse to give up! Create an environment that is intense and demanding by involving yourself with people who are strongly motivated. Your sensitivity makes you subject to your immediate environment, so through the right associations you can acquire the inner drive to fully realise your creative talents.

You have a tendency to fall into a martyr role. Your defence mechanisms are probably in full gear as you read this, and you may already be thinking of all the things you gave up your talent for! The Pisces-Cancer can spend a lifetime wallowing in self-pity, unable to accept the responsibility for his or her condition. Remember, there are great possibilities that lie within you. You can be a perpetual dreamer, or the next Nijinsky. The choice is up to you.

You are very romantic, and you should have no problems in your love life, except one: overcoming your shyness. Once this is accomplished, your charm and grace captivate and hold members of the opposite sex.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Leo: The Character

At a party, you are usually the most colourful (and often the most flamboyant) guest. Not that you are ostentatious or arrogant; it's just that you want your dress, mannerisms, and life-style to reflect your unique, imaginative personality. And you do have quite a personality! Offbeat and irreverent, you are known for your candour, warmth, and wonderful sense of humour. A Leo Moon gives the normally shy and insecure Pisces a very strong sense of individuality and purpose. It also makes for a dramatic and unusual person.

As with all natives of Moon in Leo, you have strong creative and leadership qualities. You project an image that is authoritative and self-assured (sometimes even bullying). People sense you to be capable of great things – if you are only given the chance. In fact, you do have the strength, magnetism, and imagination to make you a dynamo. But several problems stand in your way.

In the first place, that basic Piscean uncertainty and reticence often prevent you from rising to a position of power or authority. When the time comes to utilise an advantage or grasp a sudden opportunity, you shrink back, fearful and uncertain. No matter how confident and self-assured you may seem, most of that bravado and authority is just showmanship: You are a terrific actor. When you find that you cannot follow through on some of those grandiose plans of yours, you may experience anxiety and dissatisfaction with yourself. Beware of developing an attitude of resignation. Most of your fears are imaginary. You simply have to learn to shake off those deep-seated insecurities. The challenge for a Pisces-Leo? To dare and to take risks. Rather than shirking responsibility and challenges that could give you the prestige and success you desire, try meeting them head on.

Even though you appear extroverted and congenial, you are basically self-centred. Some Pisces-Leos live in a little world all their own, perceiving things as they would like them to be, rather than as they are. This tendency hampers your ability to learn and sometimes distorts your judgement. Don't close yourself off. You can get to know yourself while you are learning from others.

Beware of categorising and systematising your beliefs. You can be quite dogmatic at times – and in extreme cases, fanatical. Sad to say, Pisces-Leo, you are a very stubborn individual, and you tend to cling tenaciously to your opinions. You must strive to keep your mind open.

Romantic and sensual, you are an honest and uninhibited lover, but that basic selfishness of yours can interfere with a successful relationship. You expect your partner to adhere to your standards of loyalty and devotion, but you don't always apply those standards to yourself. You can also be somewhat moody and irrational, especially when the outside world is just not being the rose garden you expect it to be.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Virgo: The Perfectionist

You are a little too conscientious for your own good. As a child, you probably shouldered more than your share of obligations, which fostered a deep sense of responsibility and a strong work ethic. Much more self-reliant and tough than your fellow Pisceans, you have an inner core of resilience and determination which enables you to weather the storms of life with calm forbearance.

You are quite shy and reserved by nature. In your early years, you were probably somewhat self-conscious and inhibited. Then, as you grew older, you gradually became more confident. Your Virgo Moon gives you a shrewd, practical, and cautious outlook. Intelligence, pragmatism, and near-psychic intuition all work to your advantage in life: Somehow you always know who is worthy of trust and whom to avoid at all cost.

Guilt is often the curse of the dedicated and ethical Pisces-Virgo. Your conscience is enormous, and you feel that any wrongdoing, real or imaginary, must be accounted for. You also tend to assume the burdens of those closest to you – a little too readily. Your ethics are admirable, but carried to an extreme; they can lead to neurosis and self-denial. Don't sacrifice your own happiness for that of others.

As with all Moon in Virgo natives, you do find solace and satisfaction in your work. You're always dedicated and sincere, and that sense of duty is part of your need to feel needed. But don’t let work become everything. Industrious by nature, you run the risk of becoming a workaholic. Be sure to cultivate other interests and activities.

You are extremely hard on yourself. When you find that you cannot maintain the perfectionist standards you set for yourself, you lapse into depression. Nervous tension and anxiety often trouble the Pisces-Virgo. As you are so sensitive, you too readily pick up the tensions and animosities of the people around you, particularly those in your work environment. With your low tolerance for stress, it’s essential that you get plenty of relaxation. Occasional withdrawal for contemplation and introspection is also a good idea.

You've got strong humanitarian instincts, and your need to assist people can be applied creatively in any number of fields. Your combination is often found in the charts of doctors, priests, and public servants.

Intuition is your romantic cue: You usually know who is best for you. As a partner, you are usually devoted, loyal and affectionate, but you may need lots of reassurance; your mate will have to let you know frequently how wonderful you are.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Libra:
The Delicate Balance

In your combination, the emotional depth, charm, and sensitivity of Pisces is enhanced by gentle, peace-loving, romantic Libra. You have an aura of tranquillity, and people respond positively to your soft-spoken kindness. Devotion is the key to your combination. You have a very romantic soul, and that romanticism extends to all things. You're extremely conscientious, and once you've set your life goals, few can match you for dedication and determination. Drawn to the arts, you are probably a highly creative individual. You have a perfect understanding of form, beauty, and aesthetics. Natives of your combination include Frederic Chopin, Nat King Cote, and Rudolf Nureyev.

Your spiritual nature enables you to experience the greatest joys (you can become ecstatic over hearing a bird sing), but your refined emotions can also be a curse. Just as you are attuned to the finer things in life, you are also painfully aware of the harsher realities. And for many Pisces-Librans, reality can be quite difficult to take.

Rather than facing life's dilemmas, you may choose to escape them through your unusual imagination. Or you may simply choose the path of least resistance by selecting a career that offers little risk or reward. For women, the temptation is a convenient marriage, one providing shelter from the world. Though comfort and security are necessary, don’t settle for less because of them. You have many talents and gifts; don’t waste them.

You are a kind and giving individual, but beware of being over-accommodating. It's true that you can’t feel content unless those around you are happy, but you may, in turn, be sacrificing your own happiness. It won’t hurt you to become a bit more selfish and self-assertive. Unnecessary guilt is often a problem for the Pisces-Libra. There is no reason for you to feel guilty simple because you are standing up for yourself.

Calm is the one thing you demand in your life and work. Tension and disruption can easily upset your emotional balance, and cause you to crawl into your cocoon. Your combination is conducive to inner harmony, but it's vital that your living and working environment be equally serene.

Extremely romantic and capable of losing yourself altogether in love, in many respects you are the perfect partner. You know how to balance the give-and-take in a relationship. Just don’t let your partner become overbearing or controlling, making all your decisions for you. You must have equality in a relationship.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Scorpio:
The Hurricane

The emotional intensity, passion, and rejuvenating qualities of a Scorpio Moon can uplift and give direction to Pisces. You have an intense, serious, and introspective nature. You perceive things on a philosophical level. Never content with surface impressions, you like to probe deeply into whatever you encounter. In fact, for some Pisces-Scorpios, even the most mundane matter can take on cosmic and profound implications. Your imagination is powerful and far-reaching. No matter how quiet or unpretentious you may seem, your mind is always active, absorbing and forming impressions of everything around you.

As with all deep, emotional individuals, you have to contend with many difficulties. The same emotional intensity that can take you to dazzling heights of awareness can also drag you to the depths of despair and remorse. This combination can produce spiritual and artistic individuals, or it can result in very neurotic, criminally inclined personalities.

Magnetic, strong-willed, and seemingly your own boss, you are nevertheless heavily influenced by your surroundings. You cling tenaciously to old patterns of behaviour, and your initial reactions are too often your last. Bias and stubbornness often characterise the Pisces-Scorpio. You also have an extremely sensual, self-indulgent nature, and pleasure seeking can easily become the nemesis of the Pisces-Scorpio. You need lots of structure, discipline, and educational training to help you focus some of your talent and to keep your emotions within bounds. If your strong sensual drives can be sublimated to creative or spiritual endeavours, there is no end to what you can accomplish. But you must have direction.

You are very touchy, and you interpret the slightest criticism as an insult. Try to become more flexible and a little less single-minded. Also, turn your energies outward, instead of focusing them so heavily on yourself. You can sometimes lose yourself in the process of trying to find yourself.

The possibilities of this combination run the gamut. If you do not use your creative potential constructively, you may turn all that passion and energy in on yourself. Or you may unleash it on others, opening the way to ruthless or vindictive behaviour. There is also the latent possibility of addiction in your combination, so beware of excesses of any kind.

In romance, as in all things, you are powerful and mysterious. Imaginative and passionate in your lovemaking, you also tend to be quite jealous and possessive. Your partner may never know just what you are up to, but you'll need to know – and demand to know – everything he or she is doing! Learn to be more trusting, and allow your mate as much freedom as you have yourself.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Sagittarius: The Philosopher

The poetic inspiration, intuition, and imagination of Pisces is enhanced when combined with a farsighted Sagittarian Moon. Faith is your greatest resource. Your enthusiasm and optimism are unlimited, making you forever fresh and appealing. Extremely intelligent, your mind enjoys the abstract, the spiritual, and the philosophical. Your creative and artistic talents are versatile, and you set high goals for yourself. You never feel bound by convention or fixed rules. Freedom is the thing you crave most, both in spirit and in thought, and this makes you a very innovative and open-minded individual. Some outstanding natives of your combination include Albert Einstein, Victor Hugo, and Maxim Gorki.

Your life is never likely to be dull. Craving adventure and novelty, you will probably travel far and wide in search of them. Somewhat fearless, you believe wholeheartedly in the power of your luck – and rightfully so, for it always comes through for you. You have an almost childlike charm that brings out the protective instincts of others. Always the idealist, a Pisces-Sagittarius loves life; you believe this is the best of all possible worlds, no matter what anyone else may say.

Confusion is a constant condition for you. At home with Nietzsche or Kierkegaard, you are nevertheless thrown into a quandary when it comes to balancing your cheque book! You are just not the practical sort. You live in a world of ideas and impressions, and the mundane details of life truly annoy you. Fortunately, your keen intuition manages to steer you away from perils that anyone else as capricious and absentminded would fall into helplessly.

It's important for you to be in a working and living environment that is organised and structured, because you have a tendency to drift about. Your intellectual talent and imagination need grounding and discipline, if you hope to apply yourself. Otherwise, your dreams may remain dreams. As you are very suggestible (gullible is more like it), associate with people who are strong willed and have a positive influence on you. (Scorpios, Capricorns, and Taureans are best). Once you have acquired the proper training and focus, there is little you cannot achieve. Your mind is not inhibited by tradition, so whatever you do is done with originality and an eye toward change.

You have a tremendous capacity for happiness. A perennial optimist, you believe your future will always be sunny. Sometimes you can deceive yourself into believing that things are rosier than they actually are. Pisces-Sagittarians often tune out problems and conflicts rather than deal with them head on – and naturally this can cause many problems.

As might be expected, you are not the business type. Although your charm is conducive to salesmanship, your fantastic imagination is better suited to artistic and creative avenues. Finding the medium in which to express your talents may be difficult for you, because you are so restless. But don't give up! After you've satisfied your wanderlust, you are likely to find your own unique path.

You cannot imagine being alone for very long. Open, uninhibited, and very romantic, you need someone with whom to share your life. Loyalty is your creed, and you will be very hurt if your partner betrays your trust, Make sure you find a mate who is not overbearing, because you must have the freedom to be yourself.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Capricorn: The Cynic

You are a very sensitive individual, but your sensitivity is attuned to the sad and tragic aspect of life, and this gives you a rather melancholy outlook. You have the depth and highly refined perception to excel in very creative endeavours, but your gloom-and-doom approach to life may hold you back. Your Piscean imagination is boundless, but it is shackled by a Capricorn inner nature that is cautious and traditional.

As with all Moon in Capricorn natives, you are very conscious of your limitations – perhaps too much so. Rather than valuing your abilities, you brood over your imperfections, whether real or (more often) imaginary. Instead of envisioning the wonderful things you can accomplish, you prefer to dwell upon the things you can't. Entrenched cynicism and pessimism is often the curse of the Pisces-Capricorn.

Although you project an image that is worldly and self-assured, you are actually not so confident as you seem. From childhood on, you've probably have to contend with many inner fears and uncertainties. In your later years, in order to compensate for your insecurity, you channel much of your energy into your career. You are likely to go far, eventually becoming your own boss through your perseverance and determination. Regardless of how far your ambition takes you, however, you will never become a ruthless dictator. Pisces-Capricorns are well-known for their kindness and sympathy.

You work best within an organised, conventional framework. Independent and self-sufficient, you've still got to have structure in your life-style and work. You have an intuitive understanding of people that is to your advantage, especially in business affairs.

One thing you ought to do is learn to be more open about your feelings. Depression often results when you hold in your anger, frustration, or tension.

You have an unconventional approach to love. You want to be romantic and starry-eyed, but your Capricorn “cool” prevents you from giving all you've got to a relationship. You may have trouble with real intimacy, until you've found a partner who makes you feel secure. And, of course, before real love is possible, you must first learn to love and appreciate yourself.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Aquarius: The Reformer

In your combination, the deep compassion of Pisces is coupled with the intellectual curiosity, eccentricity, and social concern of Aquarius. The result can be confusing. Your bearing is otherworldly; your moods are completely unpredictable. At a party or social gathering, you may be seen gazing off into space, looking as if you had just stepped out of another dimension, but, if questioned, you could instantly summon all your attention, responding with startling alacrity and clarity.

You are serious and reserved by nature, and cannot tolerate superficiality. Scrupulously honest and conscientious, you admire and respect loyalty and seriousness in others. Your eyes seem to reveal your subtle wisdom and in-depth understanding of human nature.

Your sympathy and concern for others is projected on a worldwide scale. This is the combination of the social activist, the zealous missionary, and the reformer. In addition, your fascination with science and the unknown urges you to push to the frontiers of human knowledge. Experimentation is your password. You move with ease through a wide range of ideas and interests, until you find the one that best suits you. Once you have found your niche, whether in science or the occult, you stick to it with tenacity and a remarkable sense of mission.

You must learn to control your moods. All charm and good humour one moment, you can suddenly clam up the next. Although you may not acknowledge it, people are perhaps the most important part of your life. You don't want to frighten them off with your unpredictable – at times, irrational – behaviour. You need to feel a sense of camaraderie with many people of both sexes.

Your otherworldly charm, naiveté, and mystical presence probably captivate the opposite sex. However, people are generally more important to you than a person – you don‘t have much time for a romantic alliance with any one individual. In fact, you find it difficult to understand why someone would want all the attention that love demands. You treat your partner on an equal basis as a friend and co-worker. That is why it is imperative that your partner be sympathetic to your intellectual (and somewhat crazy) pursuits. Then you will be the easiest person to get along with, as you are known for your patience and ability to forgive and forget.

Sun in Pisces/Moon in Pisces: The Mystic

You are an extremely sensitive and impressionable soul – and not entirely of this world. An aura of mystery surrounds you. Innocent, trusting, and conscientious, you are practically free of guile, malice, or pretence, and this makes you very vulnerable. Intuition is your salvation and it is practically your only defence mechanism; without it, your naiveté would expose you to much hardship. But, as though you are guided by some divine hand, you always seem to know just when to advance and when to retreat, whom to trust and whom to avoid.

You are not as concerned with this world as you are with others. Your imagination is vivid, and in some cases, Pisces-Pisces finds it hard to differentiate between fantasy and reality. Natives of your combination have an intuitive understanding of things that others cannot grasp; they perceive their environment on a level that is very subtle, almost sublime. And with their pronounced spiritual instincts and empathy, they cannot stand to see suffering.

You are a very introspective individual, with much compassion. If people saw you as selfish and materialistic in your youth, it was because you were so afraid of not having the comfort and security you needed that you tended to grab whatever material resources you could find. Actually, your charm and subtlety assure that you will always have whatever you need to get along in life.

Concentration is very difficult for you. Your mind tends to drift (often into daydreams) because you are so sensitive and emotionally receptive to your environment that you need escape. Sometimes you'll be working on an important project, or in the middle of an intense conversation, and all of a sudden your eyes will drift out of focus and you will be smack in the middle of some enchanting reverie.

Though strong ambition and drive are not usually apparent in the double Pisces, creative and artistic talents usually are. You have a powerful visual mind (Michelangelo, one of the greatest artists of all time, was a double Pisces), but if your creative potential is ever to unfold, you must have some specialised training – and you must develop discipline.

The female Pisces-Pisces is often drawn to the comfort and shelter of an early marriage, while the male may gravitate toward a job that offers stability.
It‘s important that both the male and female double Pisces fight the urge to withdraw from society altogether. Shy and impressionable, you may find it difficult adjusting to the hustle of the modern world. All Pisces people do need a certain amount of escape – whether into reading, dreaming, meditation or just plain isolation – and you need more than most. But you also run the greater risk of not being able to find your way back. Find a pursuit that can hold your interest, such as film, dance, or design. If you have an absorbing hobby, you will be less likely to lose touch with reality.

You are intensely sensual and romantic, but it may be difficult for you to fix your attention on one person for very long. In some double Pisceans, sex may be sublimated to a spiritual ideal, and celibacy is a possibility. Avoid domineering people – even if you are intensely attracted to their innate self-confidence. You tend to make yourself into a martyr in your relationships, and this must be avoided at all cost.

MOON SIGN TABLES

On the following pages you will find simplified moon sign tables for the years 1900 through 1978. Here's how to use them:

Turn to the table for the year of your birth. Locate your month along the top of the table. Then find your birth day or the day closest to it, along the left hand column. The sign indicated will be your moon sign.

You will notice that the moon is sometimes in a particular sign for two and three days. The dates listed in this table are only for the days in which the moon entered a new sign. Therefore, if you were born on a day that is listed, the moon entered a new sign on your birthday. But the moon could have entered at any time on that day. Therefore, you will have to read both the sign indicated and the previous sign to see which fits you best.

For example, let's suppose you were born on May 2, 1946. If you turn to the table for 1946 you will see that May 2 is listed and that the moon entered Gemini on that day. That means your moon may be in either Gemini or the preceding sign, Taurus. You already know that your sun sign is Taurus. Now you know that your moon sign is either Taurus or Gemini. Read both combinations – Taurus-Taurus and Taurus-Gemini – to see which rings true.

If you were born on August 2, 1949, your sun sign is Leo. To find your moon sign, turn to the table for the year 1949. You will find that August 2 is not listed, but that on August 3 the moon entered Sagittarius. Therefore, on your birthday, August 2, the moon must have been in the preceding sign, Scorpio. Read the sun-sign combination Leo-Scorpio to discover the key to your personality.
